YOUNG BOB LAFOLLETTE is not going to slide into his father's seat in the Senate without a fight. Several Wisconsin Republicans have beat him to it in announcing their intention to run. Some of these were supporters of Senator LaFollette, while others are "regular" Republicans who would hope, if nominated, to receive the support of the Washington Administration. Victor Berger, the Socialist, also will be a candidate. Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, the Senator's widow, has announced that she will enter politics as a candidate for the Senate, but will devote the rest of her life to completing LaFollette's Autobiography.

Formerly it was said that country towns were so small that they did not need anything like a Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade. Now it is seen that the mere fact that they are small is a special reason why their business people need to organize for self protection.

If a small part of the breath used in hollering at the ball games, could be used in shouting for the home town, it would produce some results.

What Can the Scientist Do? He Can Only Say: "Well, There Is Evolution"

By VERNON KELLOGG, National Research Council.

EVOLUTION is an accepted reality among biologists. These men, thousands of them, trained in a technique which enables them to study penetratingly the phenomena of life, and devoted to a disinterested search for truth, find these phenomena consonant with the conception of evolution. As the examination of these phenomena extends and grows in precision, the evidence for evolution accumulates both as to quantity and quality. The more we know about living things the more nearly absolute becomes our conviction of the reality of evolution. Whether we want to believe in evolution or not, we simply have to.

The world seems eager to hear from the technical men of science what they can learn and tell of the cause and cure of disease, the handling of electricity and radioactivity, the analysis and synthesis of chemical compounds, the biological basis of plant and animal breeding and of agriculture and forestry and fisheries, of heredity and variation, of environmental influences, of glands and hormones, of calories and vitamins. And the world accepts gladly and confidently what the scientific men tell it about these things.

But when the scientific man finds and declares the reality of evolution by using the same methods by which he finds out these other things, and by finding the same kind of proofs on which his declarations regarding these things are based, then the world, or a certain part of it, cries: "No, we do not want evolution; we will not have it." What can the scientific man do in these circumstances? He can only say: "Well, there is evolution."

Until Just Yesterday Man Had Only Three or Four Ways to Preserve Food

By JAMES H. COLLINS, in Compost Air Magazine.

Until just yesterday, hardly one hundred years ago, man had only three or four ways to preserve food, and the present generation turns up its nose at most of them. There was salting. Think of the present generation tolerating salt pork! And there were pickling, smoking, crude drying, preserving in sugar or fat. Canning, cold storage and dehydration are the modern methods, and all three of them include air power somewhere.

Dehydration is the newest and perhaps the most promising. Man originally dried some perishable foods in the sun. Then he dried them by artificial heat in various kinds of kilns. They kept pretty well, but had a cooked flavor because the heat was too high or the drying too fast.

Now, new processes of dehydration are being worked out by which gentle heat, in vacuum, extracts moisture from fresh foods without breaking down their cellular structure; or liquid foods are converted into dry powder by spraying them into heated air with compressed air. By gently drying fresh food in vacuum it is possible to turn a bushel of potatoes into ten or twelve pounds of chips, or a bushel of spinach into one pound of shavings. Soak them in water, and they "come back" absolutely fresh if dehydration has been skillfully done.

It Was Not the Purpose or Intent of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law

By JUSTICE STONE, United States Supreme Court Decision.

It was not the purpose or the intent of the Sherman anti-trust law to inhibit the intelligent conduct of business operations, nor do we conceive that its purpose was to suppress such influence as might affect the operations of interstate commerce through the application to them of the individual intelligence of those engaged in commerce, enlightened by accurate information as to the essential elements of the economics of a trade or business, however gathered or disseminated. . . . Trade associations or combinations of persons or corporations which openly and fairly gather and disseminate information as to the cost of their product, the volume of production, the actual price which the product has brought in past transactions, stocks of merchandise on hand, approximate cost of transportation from the principal point of shipment to the points of consumption, as did these defendants, and who, as they did, meet and discuss such information and statistics, without, however, reaching or attempting to reach any agreement or any concerted action with respect to prices or production or restraining competition, do not thereby engage in unlawful restraint of commerce.

Our Delegation to Pan-American Road Congress at Buenos Aires

By H. M. RICE, Chairman United States Delegation.

The road congress at Buenos Aires next October, called by the Argentine government, had its inception at the last Pan-American conference at Santiago. The delegation of seven members, appointed by President Coolidge to represent the United States, is but one of a large number of similar groups, representing every nation in the Pan-American union. We feel that our mission is important on account of this country's long and costly experience. Those who have been connected with the good-roads movement in the United States, have learned many lessons which should be of the greatest value to any other nation in the earlier stages of highway development. If we can help our sister nations of the South to avoid the needless waste of time and millions of dollars before highway construction had become systematized as it is now in this country, we feel that our return trip to South America will be productive of as good results as the delegates from the Latin American countries were kind enough to say resulted from their visit to the United States last year.

"Sex-Complex" Not the Master Key That Unlocks Every Riddle of Life

By VIOLA PARADISE, in Forum.

A few years ago, when the shadow of Freud came west to America and the parlor analyst eclipsed the parlor socialist, it might have been expected to pass on presently or be blotted out by a newer, darker disk—a repressionist patter, perhaps, or—why not?—a compressionist school. But no. Even today, let some ingenuitous venture, "I had the queerest dream—" and all at once we see a crowd, a host of parlor analysts. The obliging interpreters listen—though this is hardly necessary—look wise, and at the end exclaim in an "I-know-something-about-you" tone, "Aha! That means sex! You have a sex-complex!"

No, the theory of the "sex-complex" is not the master key which unlocks every riddle of life. A few of the minor riddles, perhaps, and even a major riddle or two. And it must not be forgotten that a key turns two ways. In any case, "sex-complex" is too ambitious a title for the service it performs. "Sex-simpler" better suits the unalloyed, one-dimensional, homogeneous and constant interpretation.

"DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY IN A BANK AND PAY YOUR BILLS BY CHECK"

This is the advice given daily by the Newspapers, in commenting on the loss of sizable sums of money from the pockets of the owners. Good advice and very timely. To make a deposit is a good beginning. To build and maintain a balance large enough to pay your checks at all times, and leave a margin upon which your bank can make a reasonable profit is a long step towards building financial character.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, a young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III.—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling rooms, and is fascinated, but can only learn that she is called Pauline de Ponsard and is with her aunt. He is unable to secure an introduction to her. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young man's guardianship of her niece.

possession should indeed be the peasant child who had been under their care for rather less than twenty-four hours.

"Mademoiselle is transformed," Madame de Ponsard declared. "She has natural elegance. In the simplest clothes I could give her, she would still create an impression. I have done my best, milled and mottled. I trust that you are satisfied."

"I am going to take Myrtle to Ciro's to lunch. Come along, Christopher," said Gerald.

Chapter V

The two women sat on the terrace of their wistaria-covered villa—Madame de Ponsard hunched up in her chair, smoking a cigarette through a long tube; Pauline, her reputed niece, her coffee and cigarette alike neglected, gazing fixedly seaward. Their immediate environment suggested at once a taste for luxury and the means to gratify it. The linen and silver on the little table at which they had just lunched was of the finest possible quality—the former lace-bordered and adorned with a coronet. A bowl of pink roses occupied the center of the table. The coffee had been served in little cups of the finest Sevres china. In the background, a single servant was standing, dressed in plain black livery, a man gray-haired and with lined face, but tall and of powerful build. He possessed to the full the immobility of feature of the trained English servant, but there was something entirely foreign in his sphinx-like attitude and expression. He had the air of one who neither saw nor heard save at his mistress's orders. "I am weary of everything here except the sun," Pauline declared deliberately.

The woman opposite knocked the ash from her cigarette. Hers was an aged and withered face, but her black eyes were still full of life and fire. Her long, thin hand, on which flashed several strangely set rings, was suddenly extended toward the waiting servant. Without a word he bowed and disappeared.

"One must wait," Madame de Ponsard declared.

"For what?" the girl asked lazily. "The older woman's eyes glittered for a moment.

"For what will surely come," she declared. "The portents are all there. The writing is no longer upon the wall—it blazes to the sky."

"And meanwhile," Pauline murmured, "the sun shines, my heart beats in tune to it, and I feel all the time the weariness of the days."

"It is the insurance of youth," the older woman conceded indulgently. "I suppose the greatest must feel it some day."

She thrust another cigarette into her tube and lit it, inhaling with the long, regular breaths of the confirmed smoker. Her delicately-shaped but talon-like fingers were stained with nicotine. "Zubin arrives this week," she announced.

Pauline yawned. "More mysteries," she murmured, "more false hopes, more exaggerated stories. Nothing good will come of Zubin's visit but the money he brings, unless by any chance he has news of Stepan. Meanwhile, dear madame, I bore myself. I rather wish that I had been born an American."

The woman showed no sign of anger, yet somehow or other she seemed to diffuse an atmosphere of contempt. "It is perhaps a pity," she admitted, "that you are descended from one of the greatest rulers the world has ever known. It is perhaps a pity."

the use of music, madame, to one who lives behind the bars? It simply makes one pull at them a little harder. I am as badly off as Stepan himself, who loves me from behind the fortress walls. Sometimes I wish that I were there with him."

Madame de Ponsard reached for an ivory-topped stick and rose to her feet. Almost as though by magic, from somewhere within the dim, cool recesses of the room beyond, the gray-haired manservant was by her side. She leaned upon his arm.

"We drive at four o'clock, Pauline," she said. "Afterwards, we will watch the play at the Sporting Club."

Pauline shrugged her shoulders. It was the same yesterday afternoon, and every day behind. It would probably be the same tomorrow. She looked lastly across the narrow gorge toward that other villa. A two-seated car had turned in from the road and was crawling up the winding avenue. She stretched out her hand for the field glasses which lay on the table by her side. The figure of the young man at the wheel rose to her feet. Almost as mysteriously as the manservant had appeared a few moments before, a black-robed maid hastened toward her. Pauline shook her head.

"This afternoon I do not wish to rest," she decided. "I shall walk in the garden."

Pauline descended the stone steps, crossed the drive and plunged into a narrow footpath which wound its way through a plantation of stunted but sweet-smelling pine trees, downward toward the sea. The path was not an easy one, and Pauline's shoes were severely damaged for each an adventure. Nevertheless, she persevered. At last she gained her end. She stood upon the little strip of sand, bespangled with rocks, which bordered the sea. Only a few yards away the shimmering blue water rocked toward the land in little wavelets. She turned and looked back. The villa from which she had come seemed like a doll's house shining out of its sheltering clump of cypresses. More directly above her now was the far more extensive residence of Lord Hilderley. She looked toward it searchingly. There were several people upon the broad veranda, amongst them the slim figure of a young woman in a rather faded, gazing intently in her direction. She smiled a little as she picked her steps across the yellow sand to the edge of the sea and clambered on to a rock. A queer fit of heedlessness was upon her. She stood upon the top of the slippery rock, finding a strange pleasure in the salt-laden air and the wind which brought a thousand ripples of light to the trembling blue sea, which blew her skirts about, and even brought disarrangement to her smoothly bound hair. This tempering of the sunshine brought a new joy to its warmth. She stood there basking in a purely sensual pleasure, forgetful for a moment of the depression of the morning. The sound of tumbling stones in the little gorge behind scarcely disturbed her. It was not until she heard footsteps upon the strip of beach that she turned her head. Coming toward her, already only a few yards away, was a young man of personable appearance and unwontedly determined expression. For once in his life Gerald had made up his mind.

Although he was in reality brimful of confidence in all his relations with the other sex, Gerald had sometimes a not altogether attractive appearance of shyness. He stood bareheaded for a moment, looking up at Pauline.

"I am sorry if I startled you," he said. "I was looking for my sister. I know this is a favorite place of hers, and when I saw you standing there I rather jumped to the conclusion that you must be she."

"Really?" Pauline replied. "Are we so much alike, then?"

"Not in the least," he declared frankly.

"That seems to make your explanation a little insufficient, does it not?" Pauline remarked.

Gerald settled down to business. "I know that I ought to have turned back," he said. "But, after all, wasn't it much more natural of me to come on? I have been trying, ever since I first saw you, to get someone to introduce me—we are, after all, as I have just discovered, to my great delight, neighbors—and this is the Riviera, not Berkeley square. May I tell you that my name is Gerald Dombey, that my father and sister have the villa up there, and that, from the moment I saw you, I have been anxious to make your acquaintance?"

She looked at him in silence for a moment, half critically, half thoughtfully. There was nothing absolutely discouraging in her attitude, and Gerald somehow conceived the idea that this might not, after all, be so easy an affair as he had hoped.

"Are you used to enlarging your acquaintance in this manner?" she asked. "I very seldom feel the desire to do so," he assured her. "Don't be annoyed, please. I am really quite a respectable person. I will call upon your aunt, if she will give me permission."

For the first time Pauline smiled. It was rather a cold smile, but the fact that it was a smile at all was encouraging.

"I fancy that you had better dismiss that suggestion for your mind altogether," she said. "My aunt does not receive here, and she certainly would not welcome you as a caller."

"Why not?" Gerald inquired, a little perturbed.

"Because you are a young man," Pauline replied. "There are two things which my aunt dreads more than anything else in life—a bad throat, for herself, and young men for me."

"I don't see how she can hope to keep young men away from you altogether," Gerald declared. "You don't mind my saying, do you, that you are the sort of girl whom young men would want to know?"

Her smile returned. She even laughed slightly, showing some very wonderful teeth. "Really, you are a most singular person," she observed. "Do all young Englishmen talk to casual acquaintances in this unrestrained fashion?"

Gerald was puzzled. Pauline was not altogether falling into line with the conclusions he had arrived at concerning her.

"I don't know that I am very different from the others," he said. "Tell me, what is your nationality?"

"Why should I tell you anything about myself?" she asked, a little coldly.

"It appeared to me that it might—help our acquaintance."

"Have I acknowledged the acquaintance?"

"Well, you are talking to me, any how," he pointed out, with a slight twinkle in his eyes.

"I scarcely see how I could help it," she replied. "If you are really curious about my nationality, I will tell you that I have some French blood in my veins. France, however, is not my native country."

"And you live—where?"

"Nowhere," she answered a little evasively. "At present we are waiting for what you call in England adventures."

Gerald raised his eyebrows. "That is scarcely the word," he murmured.

"My aunt has a curious objection to meeting people upon our travels," Pauline continued. "I myself and her children sometimes go to the theatre. That is why I am misbehaving to the extent of letting you talk to me. As a matter of property, you certainly ought to leave me at once. As a matter of—"

On the morning of August 2nd the many friends and relatives began to arrive with well filled baskets at the beautiful ohm of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moore on Lonely Beach Drive. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was spread on the lawn and the afternoon was enjoyed with music and games. Quite a number were present.

The president shook hands with some thousands of people on his trip to Minnesota, which should put him in good trim for the hay pitching season in Vermont.

AUGUST TERM OF BOONE CIRCUIT COURT ADJOURNED MONDAY AFTERNOON

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court adjourned last Monday afternoon after having indulged in an intermission of two days on Friday and Saturday of the week previous. The jury were finally discharged on Thursday evening after four days service. The report of the grand jury appears in another column of this issue, and shows a return of 10 indictments by that body. The greater portion of these bills were for violations of the liquor laws. Two, however, were for felonies, the defendants pleading guilty and immediately receiving sentence.

George Boyd, indicted for writing forged checks, was sentenced for five years, while Charlie Meyers and Lela Meyers his wife, who were charged with dwelling house breaking, were sentenced with two years each. The three were taken to the reformatory at Frankfort by deputies Utz and Snyder last Saturday.

In the civil trial of Harry Hupp, of Ft. Thomas, against C. Liston Hemphill, of Taylorsport, a verdict of $125.00 was obtained by the plaintiff, who was represented by D. E. Castleman. The defendant was represented by Jno. L. Vest and O. M. Rogers, who were retained by the defendant on short notice, his attorney failing to get here for the trial.

In the action of H. O. Adams against Jennie A. Green, verdict was returned for defendant Jennie Green represented by O. M. Rogers. Plaintiff was represented by S. W. Tolin. John Kahr, who was made defendant, which Rosa Penno Rollington was plaintiff, obtained a verdict. Defendant represented by O. M. Rogers and plaintiff by S. W. Tolin.

Judgment and order of sale was entered in the case of Watson Bank & Trust Co., Admt. of Lucy A. Carpenter, deceased. This order calls for the sale of approximately five hundred acres of land lying near Richwood on the Dixie Highway. The Master Commissioner will probably sell this land on the first Monday in October.

John Smith, of Bellevue, J. F. Cleek of Walton, and Hubert Conner of Hebron, were appointed by the court to serve as jury commissioners, who performed the task of filling the jury wheel with the names of prospective jurors for the coming year.

A motion was heard in the case of the Farmers Union Creamery Association vs. R. L. Green, on Monday the last day of the term. The creamery association was represented by O. M. Rogers while Mr. Green was represented by B. H. Riley and Stephens L. Blakely, of Covington.

COLLEGE PLANS SHOW FOR THE STATE FAIR

Lexington, Ky. — The Kentucky College of Agriculture, through its extension division, will have a large educational exhibit at the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, Sept. 14-19, according to N. R. Elliott, who will be in charge. As in former years, the exhibit will be in the Grandstand Building.

The exhibit will represent work in soils, crops, dairying, horticulture, vegetable gardening, farm economics, live stock, poultry, women's work, marketing, boys' and girls' club work and agricultural engineering. The soils, crops, stock raising and dairying exhibit will deal with the production of home-grown feed crops with emphasis on reducing Kentucky's big bill for buying stock feed in other states.

The horticultural exhibit will attempt to show some of the possibilities of home orcharding, a line of production which is becoming of increasing importance in Kentucky. The vegetable gardening exhibit will deal with Irish potatoes only.

The women's department will be limited to home conveniences.

The poultry work will deal with the value of good feeding and the cooperative marketing of products.

The farm economics department will give the results of a survey of 200 to 300 Kentucky farms, setting forth some of the important causes of success or failure.

The club department will show that junior agricultural club members are better prepared to become good farm men and women.

Terraing will be featured in the agricultural engineering booth.

GRAND JURY'S REPORT TO CIRCUIT JUDGE GAINES

To the Honorable Sidney Gaines, Judge:

We, your grand jury empaneled for the August 1925 term, beg leave to report:

We have been in session four days and have examined 30 witnesses and have returned 10 indictments, having voted true bills in all cases referred to us by examining courts, except Jesse Beeler, charged with assault; and J. L. Hunter, charged with selling mortgaged personal property and charged with assault and battery, all three of which we have dismissed for lack of evidence.

We have inspected all of the county property. The roof of the county infirmary needs repairing and painting; the plastering in one of the rooms should be repaired. The house is clean and in good condition; the bushes along the road should be cut; the culvert in front of the property should be repaired. The inmates continue to be well taken care of under the efficient management of Supt. F. H. Rouse.

The jail is in good condition, but the public toilet is very unsanitary and should be repaired or rebuilt. Our painstaking jailer C. A. Fowler has the court-house in its usual excellent condition, but we recommend that the window sash and frames be repainted and that the lightning rods which are in poor condition be removed.

We have endeavored to follow up the splendid work of the April grand jury regarding the enforcement of the dog law. More licenses have been issued for 1925 than for any prior year, but in spite of that several hundred dogs are still at large in this county unlicensed.

Arrangements have been made with the Tax Commissioner to prepare by December 1st, a complete list of all who owned and listed dogs for assessment as of date July 1st 1925. On county court day in December the members of the present grand jury will meet at the court house and check the dog license book of the county clerk for 1925 against the Commissioner's list and a complete list of all assessed unlicensed dog owners will by this grand jury be presented to the grand jury at the December term of this court with documentary evidence sufficient to vote true bills against said delinquent dog owners and the December grand jury will be urged to indict said delinquents, which we are unable to do on account of the present unavailability of the proper records. We ask all good citizens to co-operate with us in enforcing the law.

We wish to thank all of the officers of the court for so diligently co-operating with us.

Having concluded our labors we now ask to be finally discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
J. COLIN KELLY, Foreman
Attest—ROD P. HUGHES, Clerk.

FAIR WEEK AT FLORENCE AND AT LAWRENCEBURG

By the time this week's Recorder is in the mail both the Florence and Lawrenceburg fairs will have begun.

The fairs in years past have been on different dates, but thru a misunderstanding this year both were advertised for August 19, 20, 21, 22, and too late to change the date so as not to conflict.

At the Florence fair the free attractions include the Bucking Ford Circus and Walter Stanton the Giant Rooster and his troupe, the Schilds Military Band will give daily concerts.

The Beauty Contest for the most beautiful lady in Boone county will be held on Friday afternoon.

At the Lawrenceburg fair the free attractions will be the Bucking Ford Circus as well as Fireworks every night.

The Dearborn county band will give daily concerts. The races will begin Wednesday afternoon. The fair management has contrived for five good shows and four rides so it will be no trouble for all to find plenty of amusements. All indications are that better times at both places than usual.

BASE BALL

Hebron suffered defeat at the hands of Petersburg last Saturday afternoon. Joe Bullock was in the box for Hebron with Ruth doing the heavy work for Petersburg. The final score was 4 to 1.

Florence defeated the fast Covington Juniors in a well played game last Sunday. The score was 5 to 3.

Ben Black's team secured revenge at the expense of Petersburg last Sunday at Big Bone. The score was 4 to 2. Black pitched for the home team while Berkshire and Keim divided the work for Petersburg.

MURDER TRIAL HELD HERE 30 YEARS AGO

ITEMS IN THIS COLUMN WERE TAKEN FROM RECORDER FILES OF 1895

Circuit Court
At one time last Wednesday there were 35 licensed attorneys in the bar, the largest aggregation of legal talent ever in the temple of justice in Boone on any one occasion.

The trial of Lewis Walker, (colored) indicted for trying to poison Wm. Adams and family is set for tomorrow, S. W. Tolin, D. E. Castleman and S. Gaines were appointed by the court to defend him.

The jury for the trial of the C'Hara case was completed about 19 a. m. Monday and is composed of the following gentlemen: George McGowan, Jerry Delph, Jetha Tanner, Marcus Ryle, Hade Wilson, J. R. Kyle, L. H. Kelly, W. B. Kelly, R. W. Allen, W. H. Clayton, Eugene Clements and W. L. B. Rouse.

Report of Grand Jury

To the Hon. John W. Green, Circuit Judge:—We, your grand jury, would respectfully report that we have been in session for five days, that we have examined 45 witnesses and found 12 indictments. We have examined the public buildings, and find the clerk's offices and court house in reasonably good condition; we recommend that there be some shelving be put in the County Judge's office. The jail is in reasonably good condition; we recommend that there be four cells placed in the upper part of the jail—they are needed.

We have examined the County Infirmary and find it well kept, room 13 has a portion of the plastering off and needs repairs. The roof leaks in several places and injures the plastering; the roof over the porch looks badly. Two pumps are needed for the cisterns; a coat of paint and a coat of calceamine is needed on wood work and walls of rooms. We recommend that the Fiscal Court have the repairs made as soon as convenient as this work is all immediately necessary.

We recommend that John Gaines be attached and brought before the next grand jury, to be refused to appear before this one—when summoned and that Joe Walton and Albert Kelly be summoned to appear before the next grand jury. All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. A. GAINES, Foreman.

PERSONAL MENTION

Not many sales of land ordered at this term of court.

Hebron ball team defeated Burlington 11 to 8 last Saturday. Farrell and Brady were the pitchers.

Sheriff Roberts says this is the hardest term of court on a sheriff it has been his misfortune to encounter.

Rev. David Blythe and wife of West Liberty, Ohio, who were visiting in this county have returned home.

Mrs. W. L. Riddell was called to Indianapolis last week on account of the severe illness of one of her brothers.

Henry Lassing was in town Friday some worse on account of his attack of whooping cough, but was in good spirits nevertheless.

Trustees of Public Schools should bear in mind that the law requires that during the two weeks preceding the opening of the school in their respective districts, they shall visit all the parents of pupil children and urge upon them the necessity of a prompt and regular attendance of the children at school. How many trustees in Boone county will perform that duty?

PETERSBURG

The Cooper shop has started up to fill a small order for barrels. We hope that the firm will resume business again soon.

An election will be held here to determine who shall be our postmaster to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Nannie Berkshire. The entrance to the race will be free to all starters, he political parties will pay the presiding officers. This will be the first thing of the kind ever held and it promises to be interesting.

We are all free silver men in this neighborhood and would like to hear the opinion of the Linaburg Democratic wheel horse thru the columns of the Recorder. I wish the people all belonged to the A. P. A. and we would see who would be elected Governor of old Kentucky.

ANCIENT MUSTER ROLL FOUND BY T.W. BALSLEY

MANY OF BOONE COUNTY'S FAMILIES ARE REPRESENTED ON LIST

"Going thru the papers of an uncle the other day, Thomas W. Balsley, former mayor of Ludlow and cashier of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, ran across a yellowed paper, which proved to be of historical interest."

It was headed "Muster Roll for 1843," and bore a long list of names, apparently those of members of the Boone county militia just before the outbreak of the Mexican War.

Among the names listed were: Jesse Kirkpatrick, Cave Clore, Younger Johnston, Joshua Luman, William DeCoursey, Robert Wilson, Richard E. Bruce, James Smith, William Masfield, Noah E. Rouse, Erastus Tousey, John Coleman, George Goodridge, William Allen, Robert Sandford, Owen Minor, Wesley Underhill, John Riddell, Gustavus Weaver, Orrin Minor, Richard Sandford, P. C. Perkins, James Gerace, Samuel Osmond, Henry Wake, W. W. Eldridge, Charles Neal, Robert Neal, D. B. Custerbury, William Graves, G. B. Hamilton, H. Foster, J. W. Prickett, Ezekiel Rouse.

Some of the men whose names appear on the list were known personally to Balsley, having died only in recent years.—Kentucky Post.

Descendants of many of these men compose a goodly portion of Boone county's population today."

Among the names listed above who were prominent citizens and business men of the town of Burlington at that time were:

Jesse Kirkpatrick, wagon maker, whose place of business was on the lot now owned by E. A. Grant and Mrs. Lallie Eddins, and his only descendants now living in the town are several grandchildren. His three surviving children being Mrs. Gussie Armstrong, of Covington, and Mrs. W. E. Piper, of Seattle, Washington, and one son F. D. Kirkpatrick, of New York.

Erastus Tousey was the leading merchant of the town and he resided in the house now owned and occupied by Gulley & Pettit—of his descendants are some grand-children viz: Mrs. Kate Lewis, Cora Stevenson, of Cincinnati, and Wm. Stevenson, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Cave Clore was a farmer and prominent citizen of Hebron neighborhood, and was the grandfather of Attorney Joel C. Clore, of Cincinnati.

John Riddell has quite a number of grandchildren living in the county, among them being Judge N. E. Riddell, Mrs. C. C. Hughes, Mrs. A. B. Renaker and Edward Rice, of Burlington.

Gustavus Weaver lived on the farm now owned by his grandson W. C. Weaver, at the Forks of Gunpowder, and operated a saw and grist mill for many years, his grand-son and great-grand-son now being residents of Burlington.

John Underhill was a son of the late Rev. John Underhill a resident of Gunpowder creek and a leading minister of the old school Baptist, and a cousin of Wesley Underhill, now a citizen of Burlington.

James Perkins was jailer of Boone county during the early sixties, and is survived by one son, James N. Perkins, a prominent citizen and banker of Rising Sun, Ind.

James M. Riddell was in the harness and saddle business in the building now occupied by Gulley & Pettit until about forty years ago, when he moved to Williamstown where he conducted the business until his death, which is now owned and conducted by his son, C. W. Riddell. He is survived by two sons and two daughters—H. B. Riddell, with the Perkins Campbell Co., Cincinnati, Mrs. T. W. Finch of Los Angeles, California, Mrs. Hattie Arnold of Seattle, Washington, and C. W.

B. F. Stevenson was a prominent physician of the town and father of Stevenson's mentioned above.

R. G. Latimer owned the farm adjoining the town of Burlington—known as "Maple Grove subdivision, and in those days considered one of the most beautiful places in Northern Kentucky.

The remainder of the list were all prominent farmers and citizens of Boone county. We think many of their descendants are still living in the county, others are scattered over the different states and are active citizens in the business world.

Of the entire list named above, the writer does not know of one that is living. Much more could be said of these old citizens, but for want of time and space, we will have to omit the rest.

BURLINGTON PARENT-TEACHERS-ASSOCIATION NOTES

Has the Parent-Teacher Association to which you belong helped your boy or girl in any signal way? Have you done your part in making the school in Burlington a better one, or helped to improve conditions that the children may be healthier in mind and body, better able to live a happy, useful life?

The first step is to know our school. The great trouble with most of us is that we do not familiarize ourselves with school conditions. We spend much money and take great pains to have our children dressed properly to go to school, and to buy the books they need, but how many of us take the pains to visit the school, know the teachers, and examine the books that we buy for them? See that your child has a clean bill of health when he enters school in the fall. Getting him ready for school does not merely mean fitting books, it means also getting him ready to absorb an education that will help him in his daily living, now and in adulthood.

Take an inventory of his physical condition, and make him one hundred per cent. physically, if possible. Make it your business to see that on entering school your child is not corrupted by lewd art or vicious suggestions, and make it your business to see that all buildings are as safe and wholesome and as modern as is possible.

The Parent and Teachers Association of Burlington is trying to do for your child, all of these things. We have a membership of almost two hundred, but our aim must be quality as well as quantity. Its only active members who will help to bring about the improvements that we desire.

Whether you are a member or not, attend the next meeting of our P. T. A. and tell the community that you are supporting the good work of the Association. THIS MEANS YOU!

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

BY COUNTY AGENT MATSON

A club tour has been set for Friday August 28th to be conducted to business houses in Cincinnati. During the last year several small tours have been sponsored but nothing to the coming one. Jr. Club members from all over Boone county will take part in this educational trip.

Parents and friends are also invited to attend. The schedule will be as follows: Leave Florence at 8:30 Standard time arrive at Harry Harkle's Dairy Farm at 9:00 arrive at French Bros., Bauer Co., 10:15. A thorough inspection will be made of the plant which will show the treatment of milk from the time it comes from farm until it goes out to the consumer, as bottle milk, butter, ice cream and other products. The plant represents part of a 3,000,000 dollar cooperative organization and will be worth any one's time and effort. Parties attending the tour will take a lunch with them. After finishing the trip thru the milk plant lunch will be eaten on the roof, where one can get an excellent view of Cincinnati.

Leave the plant at 1:15 arrive at Union Stock Yards at 1:30. Here a Co-operative Commission Association will conduct the tour through the different departments of the yard, the testing barns and explain the entire working of the yard.

This tour has been arranged by R. J. Matson County Agent and George Miller of Florence. Mr. E. E. Fish, Club Agent from the University of Kentucky will also take part in the tour.

A meeting of the Bankers of Boone county has been called by R. C. Green, President, to meet at Burlington Tuesday afternoon August 25th, at 1:30 for the purpose of electing officers to consider other matters of Agricultural interest to the citizens of Boone county. Immediately after the adjournment of this meeting a legume tour has been arranged in which demonstrations of Soy Beans will be had for seed, soy beans and corn to be hogged down, Japanese clover and a demonstration of timing for alfalfa. These demonstrations will be valuable for any one to see, and the bankers invite all interested farmers to be present and go with them on this tour which should not take more than one hours time, as these demonstrations are near Burlington.

FAMILY REUNION

A most delightful family reunion of relatives and friends was held at the beautiful home of Mrs. Sarah Robinson near Richwood Sunday August 16th. An excellent dinner was served and all present had a most enjoyable day.

LARRY KOPF, SHORTSTOP OF REDS OF 1919 PLAYS GAME IN BOONE COUNTY

Bert Parsons, who cut dirt with his spikes on the Bellevue base ball way back in the "nineties," brought a pretty good base ball club to his old home town for an exhibition game last Saturday afternoon. It was a rather mixed aggregation of ball tossers, but a good one nevertheless. They ranked all the way from class A amateurs to an ex-big leaguer.

A word must be said about that ex-big leaguer. Not that he is any more than a mortal man, but neither is President Coolidge for that matter, however the little town of Bellevue should feel honored to have been host to so prominent a base ball figure. It is without a doubt the first time that a member of a world championship club ever sunk his spikes in Boone county dirt, although George Rohe, third baseman of the Chicago White Sox, champions in 1906, played in Burlington before he ever joined that club, and, therefore, prior to his participation in the annual "honors" classic.

The world series player of which we speak was none other than Larry Kopf short stop of the Cincinnati Reds of 1919, and which club carried off the honors in the most notorious series ever played by any two clubs, for as every "fan" recalls it resulted in the banishment from organized base ball of almost the entire Chicago club. However that doesn't make Larry any better, or worse, for that matter. Larry looks about as he did in 1919, except for added corpulency which is very prominent in the region of his belt buckle and materially interferes with his stooping for ground balls, in which art he was once so proficient. Another thing, Joe Brady set Larry down without anything that looked like a hit, which fact Joe probably could not have performed against the Kopf of 1919, although he was never what one might term, a great hitter.

Larry is a quiet, unassuming fellow, and a gentleman in every way. He was a great ball player with a wonderful club, and his name has appeared on the front page of every big daily in the U. S. A.—and we'll let it go at that.

Just a word about the game itself. It was a good game, and Bellevue won it 4 to 3 for which they deserve credit, for they were opposed by some good players. Among them were Borgman, Cicona, Steidel, Kripendorf, and of course Kopf, and lots of home town amateur clubs would have wilted before them, but not so with Bellevue. However this team had never played together before, and Bellevue would, in all probability, have trouble in turning the trick again, but they did it once anyhow.

Joe Brady deserves especial credit for the splendid brand of ball he pitched against hitters of their calibre. Another feature of the game was a one-hand catch by Ryle in center field. Following is the summary:

Hits—off Steidel 10; off Brady 7; two base hits—Borgman, Black; three base hits—Black.

Struck out—by Brady 6; by Steidel 9.

Errors—Bellevue 3; Parsons' club one.

Bases on balls—by Brady 2.

Bellevue will play the Cincinnati Cardinals, another good club, next Saturday at Bellevue.

PRACTICAL MERCHANDISE

When you buy goods of one of our home stores here in Boone County, you get the results of experience. The merchant knows quite well what the people of this community like and need. He is offered all kinds of stuff that may suit fancy tastes, but he knows that kind of thing will not meet the needs of our people.

When he buys a line of goods and stakes his reputation on it, you can be sure that he knows from his experience that that stuff will make good. If you go or send long distances for your purchases, you are likely to get many articles which will not serve your purpose.

THE TEST OF FIDELITY

Amid all the protest that is made against the doings of the young crowd, it is pleasant to note that many of those who know the young folks best feel that they are doing well and promise highly for the future.

For instance, the chancellor of Syracuse University recently said he thought his students are working harder than formerly, and they do it voluntarily. That is one of the best tests of the merit of a group of people. If they are doing faithfully the work that is required of them at that time, they are willingly, they will be likely to fulfill well the duties of the various positions they are called to occupy later on. A faithful student is very apt later to become a faithful worker in his or her occupation, and later to become a loyal husband or wife.

ALIENS

According to the 1920 census the number of aliens in the U. S. was 5,229,807. The number who had taken the papers was 1,198,588. Of the foreign-born population of the United States was 13,929,992. Of these, 1,198,588, a total of 1,223,490, have declared their intentions to become citizens, and all told those who are aliens are 5,398,605.

It has been discovered that at least 2,000,000 of these aliens cannot prove their legal status. It is found that thousands of them occupy prominent positions in military, manufacturing, banking, whole sale and retail concerns, farming, instructors, and editors. In some instances they refuse to become citizens, asserting that they can see no reason why they should. It is high time some of our citizenship laws were being rigidly enforced.

THE PAY OF MINISTERS

No report has come in of ministers going on strike, and less is heard from them in the way of complaint about their pay, than from any of the various classes of people in the community. And this is probably the average salary of ministers has probably been advanced less in the last ten years than in the case of any of the various occupations.

A minister who has taken pledges to work unselfishly for the community, hates to appear in a position where it looks as if he were considering money. And yet his family needs the usual amount of bread and butter. He would feel his career had been a failure if he could not educate his children. It is well to think of the untiring service that these men render. We need to attract the highest type of young men into this noble calling, but it can't be done if the minister is not given adequate support.

COUNTRY TOWN NEWS

According to the old joke about country newspapers, they are supposed to use most of their space in printing the news of the neighborhood. But if the people of a country town want space given to a different kind of news, they can easily have it by helping the newspaper get it.

There are interesting things happening all the time in and around country towns, but the editor can't be everywhere at once. He may not hear about some of these things while he is busy attending to his many duties.

If there are business developments if committees have important meetings, if some one has plans for improvement, if some farmer is making interesting experiments in new lines of agriculture, just telephone the Recorder. The people are interested in all these things and anything that is out of the usual, and our paper is glad to print news about them.

NEW WHEAT EMPIRE

Eight hundred Montana farmers have invested $325,000 with the Great Northern Railway to build 50 miles of railway extension and a new empire about twice the size of the State of Rhode Island is being opened in Montana. These farmers have been hauling their grain to market in wagons and motor trucks, some of them being obliged to travel 65 miles to sell their products.

Five new towns will be established in this new domain, and each of these towns will draw grain, live stock and other farm products from about 15 townships. The townships are to be put on sale in September and plans are under way to build the most modern towns architects can design. By next year, when the road is completed, it is estimated an additional 1,500,000 bushels of wheat will be marketed from this section.

Farmers in other sections of Montana already are contemplating following this plan of aiding the railway in building up branch lines tapping rich frontier sections of the State.

SUMMER SOCIABILITY

The social atmosphere at different summer resorts varies greatly. In some everyone speaks to you the first day, and pretty soon some of them are calling you by your first name. They all join in together for sports and pastimes, and an atmosphere of friendliness makes the outing jolly for everyone.

Our folks in Boone county however, have run into some where the spirit was quite different. The people who had been coming there year after year would gather in closely limited circles, and if you ventured to speak to them, they acted astonished and discouraged further acquaintance.

The spirit of the first type is in some cases overdone. The friendly person whose attentions seem welcome the first day, may turn out to be an insufferable bore a little later. But the friendly place is on the whole far better than the cold and distant one. If folks want to keep to themselves, they would better hire a bungalow of their own, and put a barbed wire fence around it.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Unemployment insurance seems likely to be one of the next big reforms to find its place in the industrial progress of the country. Several large insurance companies are giving the subject careful investigation. The American Federation of Labor is considering the organization of insurance companies by national labor bodies, and some unions are already giving benefits to unemployed members. In all probability a definite plan will be adopted at the national meeting at Atlantic City next October.

Before insurance companies could take over the workmen's compensation risk, the States had to pass laws giving the privilege. Unemployment insurance has not yet been similarly arranged, but several States have shown a tendency in this direction. Compulsory unemployment insurance bills have been introduced in the Legislatures of Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

Several European nations have followed the plan adopted in Switzerland thirty years ago, which includes the employer, the employee and the State in the scheme. In this country the state is excluded, and most of the plans in force are controlled by the employing body.

YOU KNOW THE BREED

There is no mistaking a pessimist—you can recognize one as soon as you see him.

His countenance is shrouded in gloom so thick that a smile has no chance of escaping. If he has a slight toothache he is as solicitous of his jaw as a man of his first automobile.

If he has a slight touch of lumbago, he walks as if he had one foot in the grave. If he is afflicted with indigestion, as most of his kind are, he never loses an opportunity to tell his friends about it.

If there is nothing wrong physically, which is rare, he fancies in the dark recesses of his imagination that the world is going to the eternal bow-ows.

All models of pessimists are the same. That's the reason you will have no difficulty in recognizing one.

Curing them is questionable. Those in the last stages are beyond hope, but a little persuasion used on those who are not too far gone may lead to a conversion and add another good citizen to the community.

The prohibition jokes have mostly dried up, for which we should all be truly grateful.

BETTER FARMING

After we have done everything that it is possible to do toward improving agriculture as a whole it will still be true that only those who farm intelligently and carefully, who work diligently and have reason to hope to prosper. Those who fail here these standards will make at best but a bare living.

It is a mistaken notion that prices are low because of overproduction that the remedy is to take less pains and let the yields of our acres and of our animals run down. Such practice leads to but one end—bankruptcy. Whatever the price, the temerity to try the case.

It is the man that makes the highest returns on his acres who is the most prosperous. The truth is the lowest price of the product the greater the need for high efficiency in producing it. When prices are high even mediocre yields are profitable, but such yields are always unprofitable when the prices are low. Therefore the more discouraging the price of the farm products, the greater the necessity for good farming. Except for brief periods when we were farming new land that had been virtually a gift from the government those who have taken only average pains have never prospered. There is no more easy land now. Henceforth we shall have to farm old land and pay a good round price into the bargain for it. No agriculture can be prosperous in the face of declining yields and raising production costs. The surest way to cut production costs is by increasing the yields of our acres and our animals. The farmer who disregards this law cannot be saved by any outside help.

PROOF OF RURAL WELFARE

A recent analysis of the census brings out the fact, which will surprise some, that the birth rate on the farms of the country is 52 per cent higher than in the cities, and 24 per cent higher than in the villages.

Some observers will of course say that as people become more cultivated, they tend to have smaller families, while large families are very common among un-Americanized aliens.

Nevertheless, one can remark that where people prefer small families the reason is usually that they do not feel able to support more than one or two children. They would enjoy having them, if it were not for the cost of their clothes and education and all that.

The fact that the rural people are having many large families, suggests that conditions are such on the farms that they can be supported on a small cost. Thus these people can have the very great benefits and pleasures resulting from a large family, without heavy expense. As a matter of fact, the pleasure that very rural people get from their children outweighs any of the satisfactions that people gain from city pleasures.

While the people of the country tend to have heavy birth rates as those dwelling on farms, yet it is noticeable that the rate is very much higher in such villages than it is in the cities.

That also is significant. It shows how much easier it is and less burdensome, to bring up a family in a town like Burlington than it is in some big place. Food and clothes do not cost so much, not much has to be spent to keep up with styles, there are more chances for the boys and girls to work and earn for themselves. Those who appreciate family joys have a great deal to be thankful for, that these satisfactions are not so costly here as elsewhere.

THE BAGGAGE MAN

The man who handled the baggage for the summer resorters was formerly not considered much. Many of us have in our attics the old trunks that we used to carry on these outings. Some of them were of enormous size. If we packed them full of our effects now, there is a question if we could get them handled in all places. Some handlers of baggage will not go to the second floor for trunks of any kind.

Hotel porters, railroad baggage men, carriage and taxi drivers, must seemingly have suffered some injuries and strains as the result of the very heavy weights they used to be expected to lift.

The result must have been to make people careless in the way they handled such baggage. A man might argue that people had been very inconsiderate with him in expecting him to lift these enormous weights, therefore he was justified in throwing such heavy trunks around in a careless way that must soon smart them up.

These very heavy trunks must also have helped delay trains, as it would take longer than the time scheduled to load them in and out of baggage cars.

In these times the railroad baggage men must be considerably relieved of these burdens, as so many of the vacationists are travelling by motor or carrying less stuff. The tendency now seems to be to get along with fewer things. The woman who might formerly have taken several heavy trunks to a summer hotel in order to display all the finery she had, may now be travelling over the roads, and carrying what simple garments she can get into a suit case. It is well to be thoughtful of the people who are asked to handle such baggage as we want moved, and not expect them to be as powerful as the circus's strong man. Moreover, the less baggage we take with us, the quicker and easier we can get around from place to place.

While the League of Nations, the World Court, and two or three other European Courts are in session, France has an army of 150,000 fighting the Rif in Morocco. Overtures for a settlement of disputed questions made by the Rifis have been ignored on the pretext that such overtures have not come through the proper channels. Where there are a few acres of territory to be confiscated, European Courts, as a rule, gobble it first, and then take their chances in any court that may have the temerity to try the case.

ominous reports reach Washington of the impending stoppage of production in the hard coal fields despite the assurance given to President Coolidge by Secretary of Labor Davis that there existed little danger of the threatened strike on the first of September. Now that the negotiations between the mine union and the coal operators have broken down, there is an expectation here that some action on the part of the President will be necessary. The difficulty, however, is that the President has no real authority under the law to deal with such a situation, his only course being an effort to bring the warring factions into another conference through invitation rather than by command, with the understanding, of course, that the President's invitation usually is looked upon as a summons. The strike trouble has led to renewed talk of legislative action to avert such economic catastrophes in the future and it is altogether possible that Congress may look with favor upon the suggestion of the Federal Trade Commission that the gathering and dissemination of information concerning the coal industry should be made the duty of some government department.

The exact status of Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, since all his dry enforcement duties have been taken over by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, continues to be one of the leading subjects of discussion in Washington. Haynes sticks to his job, going to his office every morning and sitting at his desk as usual, but he has absolutely nothing to do. The law makes provision for a Prohibition Commissioner, but it doesn't require that the Commissioner should have any special duties. Thus his Secretary simply shifted the whole enforcement responsibility to Andrews, an "Ex-Ce" of the Army, who is reorganizing enforcement methods along military lines. The Anti Saloon League does not like his method because he is getting rid of many of the men who were picked by that organization. Their opinion has not become very outspoken, however, as that would be liable to put them in the portion of being lukewarm on the general enforcement problem.

Keep out of my swimming hole, is the message that has been sent back to Washington by Mrs. John B. Henderson, owner of the famous Brownstone castle on fashionable Sixteenth Street, from her summer home in New England. Among the conveniences at the Henderson Castle is a large swimming pool, which, during her absence from the Capital, Mrs. Henderson turned over to the foreign diplomats here to use during the summer. The pool has been the scene of some gay parties—some of the gayest perhaps ever held in Washington, but word reached the hostess at her northern retreat that a number of uninvited guests were horning in on the gayety. A sharp reminder reached the Italian attaché that he was left in charge of the pool that it was for diplomats only and that the others were to keep out, no matter how high they may stand socially.

OUR GRATITUDE

The nation is going to have an opportunity to show its gratitude for the sacrifices that men made for their country in the World War.

The rehabilitation plan of the United States Veterans Bureau will end by congressional limitation next June and the question of finding a place in society for twenty-five thousand wounded veterans will face the American people.

They have been rehabilitated and made into productive and able citizens and now await a chance to prove that they are ready to return to some occupation for which they have been specially trained.

The National Association of Manufacturers is making a laudable attempt to aid them in finding the job they are suited to fill. Appeals are being made to the Association and state and local industrial associations to assist in the placement of these men.

The theory of rehabilitation, to be carried to successful conclusion, needs the co-operation of everyone able to help some wounded hero to return to his rightful position and become a useful member of society.

Being in position to assist a rehabilitated veteran and failing to meet one's obligation in this respect would be little short of un-American.

The airplane will never be popular with the young folks until you can drive with one hand.

The home merchant is regarded by some folks as a very fine fellow when they are looking for more credit, but they are not so anxious for his society when he is looking for his pay.

In a Hundred Years the Unification of the Human Race Will Be Complete

By E. E. FOURNIER d'ALBE, in "Que Vadimus?"

ALREADY the earth is a network of lines and cables, linking continent to continent. Soon a speaker will have the earth for his sounding board and his hall of audience, and the privilege of addressing the human race will be prized above a coronation. Human sight and hearing will extend its range enormously, not only in space, but in time also.

Other progress will go hand in hand with the rapid development of signaling communications, such as telegraphs and the like. Transport of goods and passengers will gain rapidly in speed and comfort and safety until the whole earth becomes accessible to all. The tropics, original cradle of the human race, will be once more reclaimed from our most formidable enemies of the insect world and the ever-present bacterium. Everybody will be a globe-trotter, but the "globe" will not be confined to the ordinary tourist resorts. It will include every part of the world, even the poles. And wherever they go they will find friendly voices, long familiar in the home through the service of radio-telephony.

The unification of the planet which is being accomplished before our eyes will have some astounding consequences. Mankind will assume a definite mastery of his home in the solar system. In a hundred years the unification of the human race will be complete. The earth and the fulness thereof will be under the mastery of man. All animal, vegetable and bacterial life will be kept within strict bounds in the interest of humanity. The earth will be under one government, and one language will be written and understood, or even spoken, all over the globe. There will still be different races and perhaps allied nations, but travel and commerce will be free and unfettered, and calamities will be alleviated and dangers met by the united forces of mankind.

A Proper Discrimination of Place of Athletics in the College Order

By PRESIDENT EMERITUS C. F. THWING, Western Reserve University.

In the undergraduate and graduate mind the year has helped toward a proper discrimination of the place of athletics in the college order. In the past the double aim of the higher education as a sound mind in a sound body has received an emphasis too strong upon the part of the sound body. In the yet earlier period perhaps the sound mind was overvalued in relation to the worth of the bodily condition.

Administrative officers and college faculties are becoming convinced that athletics may be, not an asset, but a menace. Their dominance not only hurts the influence of the scholarly spirit, but that dominance also gives to that part of the public which is unthinking a false impression of the work and the worth of the college. That dominance, too, makes the thoughtful grieve.

A better proportion of physical and intellectual values is coming to prevail. The stadium is really getting a larger place in the life of the chapel. The extravagant compensation given to the past to football coaches is becoming less extravagant. The whole athletic system is assuming its proper relation in the academic order.

"Time Flies. If You Would Catch Up With It You Must Fly Also"

By U. S. SENATOR Hiram Bingham, Air Expert.

Permit me to call to your attention certain things which must be done if we are to enjoy the enormous saving of time which commercial aviation will permit. In the first place, we must plan to use airplanes over land and airships over sea.

In the second place, we must recognize the absolute necessity of proper terminal facilities. There must be adequate airports if there is to be much air commerce. There must also be suitable flying fields as air stations and frequent landing fields to use as anchorage in time of storm and stress.

In the third place, we must realize the necessity of developing navigable airways and providing them with adequate charts, lighthouses, buoys, beacons, radio and other necessary aids to navigation. Finally, our municipalities must aid by furnishing airports; our states must aid by providing airways. Our national government, through a bureau of air navigation in the Department of Commerce, must do as much to aid air commerce as it has to aid ocean commerce. Time flies. If you would catch up with it you must fly also.

Many a Business in the United States Suffering From Conferencitis

By RODMAN GILDER, Editor Credit Monthly.

Many a business is suffering from conferencitis. A grave case is the department head, whose confidence and courage have been emasculated by the wrong kind of control from above, who believes it necessary to confer with the chief before taking any action outside of routine.

A still more serious form of conferencitis appears when an executive calls together his immediate subordinates and, without profiting by their views, wastes many high-priced man-hours in useless repetition of his instructions.

Among the gravest conferencitis cases of all are those where the directors or partners in a business sit down together in the board room or over a luncheon table, and permit the discussion of details to obscure the real questions of policy that should be decided.

The cure for conferencitis in nearly every case is in the hands of the man higher up. He should call no conference of any kind that is unnecessary and he should at the earliest possible moment dispatch the work in hand and get every one back on the job.

Not a Hill but Has Been Wholly or in Part Fashioned by Erosion

By PROF. JULIUS HENDERSON, in "Geology and Landscape."

Erosion is the combined chisel and giant plane by which nature, speaking somewhat metaphorically and anthropomorphically, seeks to plane off all inequalities and reduce the surface of the earth to a common level.

Not a hill but has been wholly or partly fashioned by erosion; not a valley but is due partly to its handiwork; not a plain but is witness to its operations. Wherever a difference in altitude occurs chiseling begins.

If the slopes on all sides of each elevation were exactly equal and composed of materials in exactly the same chemical and physical condition, and if precipitation and temperatures were exactly equal on all sides, then storm waters would flow off in an even sheet and erosion would be uniform. There would be no rivers, no canyons, no rugged peaks.

NEW SUBSIDY SCHEME

Great Britain averted the great strike in modern history but at a frightful price, and as the significance of the government's action becomes better understood, overburdened tax-payers are enveloped in deep gloom.

Lloyd George asserts that the subsidy granted to coal mine owners will almost amount to $100,000,000 and he denounces it as a "hold-up."

The chief subject of debate today is regarding the precedent thus established. How can the Government discriminate between the mining industry and the railways, or of sailors. They are all vital and if the taxpayer is to be called on to pay a subsidy in each case both worker and employer will effectually milk the taxpayer.

And similar action is already suggested for the United States. Manufacturers may not oppose it because the increased taxes would be passed on to ultimate consumers in the cost of products.

OVERCROWDED PRISONS

While local jails have been relieved of intoxicated transients to a great extent, federal prisons are so overcrowded that new buildings are necessary. On the presumption that this increase in crime is due to the prohibition amendment, liquor people find in this condition an argument for the return to the old saloon system.

It may be true that crime and criminals are more or less related to th liquor business, but it is also true that our courts are congested and prisons crowded with criminals who are not classed as smugglers. The principal cause of most of our troubles seems to be that criminals escape punishment. If the law prescribed longer sentences on stone piles, or road work, instead of vacation work, there might exist a more wholesome respect for all laws.

Everything is entitled to a vacation. There's your jaws, for example.

All roads lead to jail if your car has speed enough and you use it.

"DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY IN A BANK AND PAY YOUR BILLS BY CHECK"

This is the advice given daily by the Newspapers, in commenting on the loss of sizable sums of money from the pockets of the owners.

Good advice and very timely. To make a deposit is a good beginning.

To build and maintain a balance large enough to pay your checks at all times, and leave a margin upon which your bank can make a reasonable profit is a long step towards building financial character.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home and a proposed husband she dies, Myrtle, a young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dumbey and Christopher Ben, are attracted by the girl's distracted appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure, they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

ter of fact, I was about to propose something else."

"Let me hear it, at any rate," he insisted.

"I watched you drive up to your father's villa in your car. Will you take me a little way in it?"

"Rather!" he assented eagerly. "Where shall I pick you up?"

"Outside the villa gates," she replied. "My aunt is absolutely certain to sleep for two hours. It is the only liberty I have during the day. Please go at once and fetch the car."

She dismissed him with an imperative wave of the hand. As soon as he was out of sight she jumped down from the rock, crossed the little strip of sand, and commenced her leisurely ascent to the villa. Once or twice she laughed softly to herself.

It was an excursion which Gerald pondered on many times afterward. Pauline had settled down in the low bucket seat by his side and leaned back with an air of absolute content. She had, in fact, the appearance of one enjoying a rare pleasure. As soon as Gerald slackened speed, however, the idea of continuing the conversation, she became curt and almost rude, and his proposition that they might take the higher road and have tea at Nice she promptly negatived.

When, after an absence of about an hour and a half, they drew up at the gates of the villa, she left him with the merest nod of farewell.

"You will come for another ride soon—perhaps tomorrow?" he asked anxiously.

She shook her head.

"I can make no plans," she replied. "I should think it very improbable. I thank you so much for your kindness. Your car is quite wonderful."

She walked away with the air of one who has conferred a great favor. Gerald drove slowly back to the Villa d'Acadia and joined his sister on the terrace.

"Do you know anything about the two women at the next villa Mary?" he asked.

"One never knows one's neighbors here," she answered. "I saw them driving, the other day—a strange-looking old lady and a very good-looking girl. Isn't there something queer about them, or is it my fancy?"

"There is something unusual," Gerald replied. "They seem curiously indisposed to forming acquaintances, which is odd in a place like this. I happened to be talking to the younger woman for a few minutes. She gave me the impression, somehow, that they were people of greater consequence than their manner of living here would indicate."

"I expect I am uncharitable," Mary observed. "An elderly lady with no friends, who takes a rather beautiful young woman about with her to public places, does certainly invite comment. doesn't she? Tell me about your little protégée?"

"We lunched with her, Chris and I," Gerald replied.

"We lunched with her, Chris and I," Gerald replied.

"Goodness gracious! Where?"

"At Ciro's. We bought her some clothes at Lenore's, this morning."

"Lady Mary lit a cigarette and threw down her book."

"I am not the guardian of your morals, Gerald," she observed dryly. "A girl, nowadays, has all she can do to look after her own—but I honestly think you ought to send that child back to her people."

"Too brutal," he replied. "They wanted to marry her to some horrible old man."

"Whatever the position was, your interference was most uncalled for," his sister declared. "As for Christopher, I am really surprised at him. I think you two young men ought to be thoroughly ashamed of yourselves for what you are doing, and I shall just look forward to an opportunity of telling Christopher so."

Gerald glanced at his sister's profile and chuckled.

"Good old Chris!" he murmured. "I'll just let him know what's coming to him!"

Chapter VI

Myrtle was suddenly tired. She seated herself upon the trunk of a tree and Christopher followed her example. Below them stretched the motley panorama of Monte Carlo, the wide bay and the glittering sea.

"Do you know," she said, "that I have not seen Monsieur Gerald for three days?"

"He has been busy," Christopher answered shortly. "He plays golf and tennis every day. Then his father and sister take up a good deal of his time."

"You always find time to come and see me every morning," she said. "He sides—it was not his sister with whom I saw him motoring yesterday."

Christopher braced himself for an effort.

"Myrtle," he began, "you know that I am fond of you."

"You have been very kind," she answered listlessly.

"Because I want to be kind, I am going to say things that may sound harsh," he went on. "You are a very foolish girl to waste your time thinking and dreaming of Gerald. You should only let your thoughts dwell upon one man continually when there is some chance in the end that that man may become your husband."

Her listlessness passed. She settled down to the subject seriously.

"But, Monsieur Christopher—"

Christopher leaned over and laid his hand upon hers.

"Myrtle dear, will you listen to me?" he begged. "Look at me for a moment. I am twenty-six years old. I have lived in cities as well as in the country. In London I am what you call an avocet. I have to use my brains every day, I have to understand my fellow creatures. Will you get that into your head?"

"It is not difficult," she assured him, with a little smile. "I think you are very clever, and you know many, many things."

"And as for you, Myrtle," Christopher went on, "when one thinks of your upbringing, it is amazing to realize how much you know. But listen to me. Nothing that one reads can teach one what life is like. You spent many hours wondering what was at the end of the road. You think now, because you have passed over the hill, that you are there, dear, you are not even at the beginning of the way."

She plucked some grasses and twined them round her fingers.

"Go on," she whispered.

"What you see here is not life. It is not even a very wonderful reflection of it. Mostly it is a little company of pleasure seekers, come to coast and bask for a time the serious side of life and gamble with their pleasures as they do with their money."

"But some must be in earnest," Myrtle protested.

"One of them, who is not in earnest is Gerald, and I tell you so, although Gerald is my friend," Christopher said. "He is here to amuse himself, and he would prefer to amuse himself without giving anyone else pain. If that is impossible, however, he is sufficiently reckless not to count the cost where the other person is concerned."

She drew a little away.

"That does not sound like the speech of a friend," she reminded him reproachfully.

"But I can assure that I am his friend, although a candid one," Christopher declared. "All that I have said to you, I have said to him, and a great deal more. You will let me finish?"

She made no reply. Her eyes were fixed upon the exact spot where the sea seemed to melt into the clouds. The grace of her slim body lent beauty even to the hunch of her shoulders.

"You are like a child who has been let out of a dark room," Christopher went on. "Everything seems beautiful, but you don't see clearly—your eyes aren't strong enough yet. What you imagine to be love is a worse thing. Gerald does not love you. He can never marry you. He belongs to that world at which you are looking with blurred eyes. Myrtle, don't you want to be good?"

"I want to be happy," Myrtle replied. "I shall always be good."

"How do you know that?"

"Because I am all good inside," she said. "I couldn't do any of the things that wicked people do."

Christopher sat for a moment in puzzled thought.

"Look here," he went on, "if you love Gerald, and Gerald doesn't love you, and you are content with the pretense of his love, and you go on loving him, and you know that you cannot be his wife then you are not good any longer."

She shook her head.

"There is only one in my life," she said, "that I have ever come near him, and that is when I thought of staying at the farm and marrying Pierre Lechamps. I love Gerald. All that I need to be happy and good is that he should love me."

"But Gerald does not love you and you will," Christopher declared bluntly. "Gerald, at the present moment, at any rate, is incapable of a stable affection, and if he were capable of it, his people would not allow him to marry you."

"I do not wish him to marry me," she declared, with a little choke in her voice.

"Perhaps not," he replied. "In that case you should listen to me more patiently. I want you to leave this place and go to some friends of mine in England."

"What, alone?"

"Alone."

She shook her head.

"Christopher," she said, suddenly slipping her arm through his, "I think you want to be kind to me. I believe that you are very good—perhaps you are better than Gerald. But so long as Gerald wants me near, I shall stay. Even if he goes about with other people, he thinks of me. He has told me, and he has promised to take me to one of his supper parties this week. I am looking forward to it more than to anything else in the world."

Christopher's face hardened.

"You will not go to one of those supper parties, Myrtle," he insisted. "I would rather take you back to the farm."

She turned her head and looked at him. There was something in her eyes from which he shrank—something very much like hate.

She saw the pain in his face and she was suddenly remorseful. She clung to his arm again. Her cheek almost touched his.

"Christopher—dear Christopher," she pleaded. "I did not mean to hurt you. I know how good you are, but just think how wonderful it would be for me to go with Gerald, to meet other girls, to laugh and talk, to sit by his side, his guest, to dance, perhaps—oh, it would be paradise! Everybody else goes to parties, Christopher."

"I will take you to the opera," he promised.

Her eyes glowed.

"It would be wonderful," she murmured, "but you must not prevent my going to the party."

"Myrtle," he pointed out, "the young women whom you would meet there are not fit for you to know."

"But what harm can they do me?" she persisted. "I know some of them are not nice. But what does it matter? Gerald will take care of me."

Christopher rose to his feet. There was a certain hopelessness about his task that he was slowly beginning to realize.

"Come," he said. "It is time we went back."

She took his arm as they scrambled down into the road.

"You are not cross with me, Christopher?" she ventured, a little timidly. "You look so gloomy—even a little miserable," she went on, clinging to his arm and looking up into his face. "I am a very great trouble to you, I fear. Are you not sorry that you ever brought me away?"

"I am not sorry yet, Myrtle," he answered. "Only hope that I never may be."

Her mood suddenly changed. She laughed, gaily.

"Oh, no," she cried. "If you look so gloom I shall sing and dance to you, here in the road, as we do at festival time. Gerald says that I must pay dancing lessons. He is going to send me to a woman here."

She pruned lightly on one foot, a miracle of buoyancy and grace. Then she went suddenly rigid, took her place by his side and clutched at his arm. An automobile whizzed past them, on its way up the hill. Gerald was leaning back in the low driving seat, the sun gleaming on his dark, closely brushed hair, his head bent toward his companion; Pauline sat a little aloof, haughty, unsmiling, her beautiful face cold, unrelieved by any light of sympathy or interest. Her eyes swept carelessly over Christopher and his companion, as they passed. Gerald did not even see them.

"Who is she?" Myrtle whispered.

"No one knows much about her," Christopher replied. "She and her aunt have the next villa to Gerald's father. She calls herself Mademoiselle de Poniere."

Myrtle laughed quietly. She was already herself again.

"Mademoiselle is a very stupid girl," she declared. "Gerald was looking at her and she looked only at the road. She does not care. Gerald will find that out."

Gerald came to the tennis courts, an hour or so later, and played several sets almost in silence. He took Christopher on one side, during one of the periods of rest, and flung his arm around his shoulder.

"Chris, old man," he confided, "I want to talk to you."

"And I have a few words I want to say to you," Christopher rejoined. "We're in this set," Gerald pointed out, rising to his feet. "Let's be alone somewhere, then—Ciro's grill at eight-thirty."

JUNK DEALERS

Women, as a rule, are far more economical buyers than men.

They study quality and learn to know it when they see it.

In buying unfamiliar merchandise they are likely to favor nationally advertised goods, for they will know what a hold they have upon the maker.

Very few manufacturers who have spent millions of dollars building up a reputation are foolish to tarnish it by not standing behind their product.

Manufacturers of standard goods in any line do not sell to chain stores or mail order houses and as a result poor imitations are offered, said to be "just as good" but everybody knows they are not.

It is not true that chain stores can or do sell the same merchandise for less money. They sell an inferior quality, for cash only, at enormous profits, no delivery, no approval, no community contributions for parks, play grounds, churches, libraries, schools, etc.

Every merchant in every town can do this with standard goods under similar circumstances and conditions.

THE BALANCE OF POWER

A vicious result of the World War is the development of the propaganda narcotic. As a people we are becoming propaganda addicts. Political parties always did use it. Now railroads, industries, financiers, public service corporations and others employ expensive publicity bureaus to either formulate public opinion or to pull it into dreamy unconsciousness.

Perhaps the most pernicious propaganda is that of the "Balance of Power" a scheme to combine England and the United States to rule the world. The argument advanced is that events have shown that a world of isolated states is impossible; that the separate states of Europe cannot be combined unless Great Britain be eliminated. Therefore the logical conclusion is that the United States of America should extend its protection over England and her colonies—but one joint navy and army be maintained and the markets of the world be divided commercially—ostensibly to prevent opium smuggling.

And this propaganda is not classed as "Bolshevik"—far from it, because it is discussed in high society and by the makers of public opinion. It is the hope of the British Empire and he object of the Rhodes Foundation.

The intellectual, political and ethical leadership of the nation has passed into the control of fluent writers at so much per line, or per column and if newspaper editors "fall" for it what can be expected of their readers?

SUMMERTIME

(By H. L. Hogan)

Covington, Ky.

Summertime, Summertime, Nature's voice again is sounding, Notices of days so fair,

Warmth and beauty now surrounds us,

Spring is past and summer's here, Fleeting clouds float above us, Sailing past the azure blue,

Gentle zephyr breezes blowing, Bubbling brook and morning dew.

Summertime, Summertime, Nature's every pulse is beating, Racing sap in budding rose,

Every sprig and tree is greening, Beauty's bloom and blush disclose,

Roses, bloom, vines are creeping, Plant and tree and shrub are smiling,

Nodding welcome, Joyous season Happy moments, sweet repose.

Summertime, Summertime, Nature's time of glorious triumph, O'er chilly days when all are still,

Now so full of gleaming brightness, Over meadows, field, vale and rill,

Summer showers, moisture giving, Budding trees and blushing rose,

O'er the rocks sweet moss is growing, Bounding forth from lap of Spring.

Summertime, Summertime, Nature's face now is smiling, Fairest days of all the year,

Maytime birds gayly singing, Mirth and joy are now supreme,

Moments that are worth the living, Rushing rampant summer gay time, Hand in hand, youth and beauty,

Beaming, joyous, happy cheer.

One good fish story deserves another, but they seldom get better—only bigger.

BURSTING PAPER BAG BRINGS BACK MEMORY OF CHATEAU THIERRY

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 11. — The bursting of an inflated paper bag, crashed against a cell door in the jail here by a playful prisoner, brought amusement to all the prisoners save one. To him, a shell-shocked World War veteran, it brought back a terrifying moment when a bursting shell at Chateau-Thierry snuffed out the lives of all his comrades in one indelible flash.

Guards picked up Charles Llewellyn from the cell floor where he had fallen shrieking when he burst-bursting paper bag had sent crashing back the hell of a battlefield scene of mud and blood. Jail physicians then learned that their stricken prisoner, apparently normal physically and mentally when he was arrested for a minor offense, as suffering from shell shock. He is the only survivor of a squad of American doughboys killed by a German shell at Chateau-Thierry.

"For months," Llewellyn told the jailers, "I fought off the horrible nightmare and believed when I landed in this jail that I would be secure of mind."

Recently, when pre-Fourth of July celebrators started their desultory firing, Llewellyn became worse. At times he was raving. He told friends he thought he was losing his battle.

Here the American Legion stepped in. They wrote to the war department in Washington in an effort to secure his record that he might be removed from the jail to more peaceful surroundings. The records were lost but rather than see Llewellyn undergo the tortures that would have befallen him had he remained in his cell during the noisy period over the Fourth, the Legionnaires took the initiative and transferred the sick man to the government hospital at Battle Creek. There, they believe, his rehabilitation will begin and his shattered mind will be restored to normal.

The upkeep and overhead of our luxuries run into more money than rent and taxes, yet it is of the latter that we complain.

Few people are interested in how you got your money—their greatest interest lies in acquiring some of the same for themselves.

Corn at this time in Boone county is looking fine, in fact to such extent that many say that the prospects for a good corn crop in the county were never better than at present. Rains during the past month have helped to such an extent that a good crop is almost assured regardless of the condition of the weather from now on.

From the talk that has been indulged in the past week, there will be quite an exodus of Burlington citizens to the State of sunshine and flowers ere the snow flies again. If all those who are talking Florida leave, the old town will be almost depopulated. After listening to the "wind" part of the trip an old resident handed us the following:

You may talk of Sunny Florida, Where money grows on trees, But, give me old Burlington, Where people live in comfort and ease.

You may go to Sunny Florida, In search of spots and wealth, But, I'll remain in the old town, And enjoy happiness and health.

You may go to Sunny Florida, And clear the Southland room, But, give me good old Burlington, My dear old "Kentucky Home."

SAYS NAVY REPORT IS "BUNK"

Col. Mitchell, deposed and sent to Fort Sam Houston as an aviation officer again disputes Naval officials regarding anti-aircraft tests. He says the report made by Rear Admiral Hughes is "worse than bunk," and then goes on to show that air planes cannot stay up at a speed of 33 miles an hour, the speed at which the targets were towed during the test. The usual speed is nearer 100 miles an hour, and if one were hit by a land gun it would be an accident.

Col. Mitchell says: "Give the air service a chance to show what it can do, and it will blow your battleship out of the water before it can be seen." He concludes with the statement that the Navy could do more good by spending some of this money on submarines and get under the water with them.

Two and a half years ago French troops invaded the Ruhr district with great pomp and power. These troops have all been quietly withdrawn, but Germany is expected to pay the expense account. Great Britain still maintains troops in one district.

Statewide Tobacco Meetings Are Held To Elect Delegates

DISTRICT CONVENTIONS TO BE HELD SEPT 21, IN COUNTIES
GROWING MOST TOBACCO

About seventy-five members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association met at the court house in Burlington last Saturday afternoon and selected delegates to the District Convention which meets at Williamstown, Sept. 21, 1925. Lexington, Ky., Aug. 22.—More than 105,000 tobacco growers in the states of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia, Virginia and Missouri, who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, were represented Saturday at mass meetings held in each of the Burley tobacco growing counties in which the Association is organized which nominated candidates for delegates to district conventions to be held September 21, in each of the twenty-two districts into which the Burley territory has been divided, and the growers will elect the delegates to each of these conventions in an all day election September 19th.

In Missouri and Virginia the growers will elect associate directors. In Tennessee, $1,400,000 worth of the Association are disfranchised by a decision of the Chancery Court at Knoxville, which granted an injunction sought by warehouse interests through the attorney general of the State, restraining the Association from further activities in Tennessee. As this case has been appealed by the Association and is now pending in the court of civil appeals of Tennessee, the Burley Association officials decided to take no chances of a possible violation of the injunction decree and will hold no election in Tennessee until it has been reversed by a higher court.

The conventions of September 21 will be held at the following counties of each of the twenty-two districts which delivered the most tobacco of the 1924 crop to the Burley Association. Boone is in the Eleventh District composed of the following counties: Grant, Boone, Campbell and Kenton counties. Convention to be held at Williamstown. It is said that most of the members of the present board of officers are likely to be returned. The present directors of the Burley Co-operative for the Eleventh District is Dawson Chambers, Walton, Ky., R. D. 1.

In the election of September 19th each grower has one vote regardless of the amount of tobacco he grows. Ballots may be cast either in person or by mail, but if cast by mail they must be in the hands of the election officers by the time set for the election between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., September 19th.

Officers to conduct the elections were chosen Saturday in each of the counties by the growers themselves in their mass meetings.

MRS. C. W. CARPENTER DIES ON AUGUST 16, AT HER HOME

With great sympathy we dedicate these stanzas to Mrs. C. W. Carpenter, Mrs. J. W. Carpenter and Mrs. Tom Carpenter, their children and grandchildren, in sacred memory of their precious mother, Mrs. Virginia Powers, aged 74 years, 8 months, who passed triumphantly to her reward on August the 16th, 1925, and after appropriate services by her pastor, Dr. Runyan, was tenderly laid to rest in New Bethel cemetery by the side of her husband in the presence of a multitude of friends and loved ones and beneath a most beautiful floral offering. May the Father richly bless and comfort their every heart as they read:

From the bright and shining portals
Of that home beyond the sky,
Is our angel mother watching
For our coming by and by;
And by grace we hope to meet her
In that fair and happy land
Where in triumph, we shall meet her
And the better understand.

For aho he's gone, she's calling
In her gentle loving tone,
One and all of us to meet her
In the throng around the throne,
Where the saved of all the ages
From all sin and sorrow free
And there singing forth his praises
Throughout all eternity.

Then as children and grandchildren
May we heed her call each day
Tnd thus hold with her communion
As we travel down life's way
To the place where we shall sever
From the things of earth below
To unite with her forever
Where the joys immortal flow.

Their friend and brother, J. M. R.
Claimed the people should be taught more facility in the use of tools, but the knockers should not be given any further instruction in welding their hammers.

PASSED AWAY AFTER SHORT ILLNESS AT RIPE OLD AGE

Henly Woodward Smith died at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, Tuesday, August 18th, 1925, after a few days illness. His death was caused from a stroke of paralysis received on Sunday before from which he never regained consciousness. Altho he had been in bad health for a year or more, his sudden taking away was a shock to his many friends in Burlington.

Houly Smith was the second of 10 children born to Dr. J. F. and Virginia (Webb) Smith. He was born in Burlington March 1, 1856, being 69 years, 5 months and 17 days of age at the time of his death. He was united in marriage to Miss Sadie Miles, of Cincinnati, October 28th, 1886, to this union one son was born, Rev. Miles Smith, a prominent minister of a Baptist church in Boston, Mass., besides his son, he is survived by two brothers, A. W. Smith, of Covington, Lewis Smith, of Pataoka, Fla., and four sisters, Mrs. Virginia Campbell, of Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. Aslie Stripling, of Florida, Mrs. Mary Coleman, of Alabama, and Mrs. O. M. Rogers, of Er-langer. His wife preceded him to the grave several years ago.

Funeral services were held at the residence of O. M. Rogers in Erlanger, Thursday, August 20, 1925, conducted by Rev. Houston Hall of the Baptist church, after which the remains were taken to Spring Grove cemetery by Undertaker Phil Taliaferro, where they were laid to rest by the side of his wife.

The pall-bearers were Congressman A. E. Reese, R. C. Gaines, J. W. Conner, Courtney Walton, T. J. Stephenson and F. A. Hall, all former citizens of Boone county.

BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL

The members of the Baptist Sunday School of the Petersburg Baptist church enjoyed their annual outing recently. The gathering took place in E. G. Cox's grove on the Lawrenceburg Ferry road with about 100 or more in attendance. Dinner served at the noon hour as per custom. Rev. Turner says: "Bill" Yates consumed thirty ice cream cones. That's a good many cones.

THE HIGHER VALUES

Some weeks ago President Coolidge in commending the movement of the Farm Bureau Federation for Fourth of July celebrations, rejoiced in such demonstrations, and felt that there is need for more community action along social, moral and spiritual lines. He referred to the old days when the church was the center of community activity, but now in many places conditions have changed.

In these days when everyone is hustling so hard in country towns to earn money and get ahead if possible, we have a tendency to forget the higher values. As a result one sees many country churches closed up, and no strong organizations in such communities working for social and moral progress.

Even if a country town becomes prosperous in a business way, there will be something very much missing unless there are strong forces working for higher ideals. The July Fourth celebration has helped in a great many places by giving a chance to extol patriotism and good citizenship.

We also need more square honesty more feeling of conscience in all business and social relations, more generosity to the unfortunate, more faith in divine providence. We need active churches that shall proclaim religious truth and high ideals. We need Sunday schools where the young people are taught moral and spiritual truth.

It may not be necessary to form new organizations. Those who have furnished plenty of opportunity for instruction and leadership. While we eagerly discuss the question how we can make more money, let us grasp the truth and emphasize it frequently, that our towns will not be good places for homes unless the highest standards of service and integrity prevail.

SOME COAL

With more than 50,000,000 tons of coal in stock dealers feel compelled to advance the retail price because of the "shortage." Some day farmers will have money enough to hold their wheat crop and create a "shortage" and then they'll be a howl that will be heard 'round the world.

The people who tear over the roads at 45 miles an hour, are not all running to a fire or hurrying to the relief of some sick person.

MRS. AMANDA ROUSE PASS- ES HER 90th BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Amanda Rouse passed the 90th mile stone of life Friday August 21st. Several persons remembered her 90th anniversary. Miss Clara Paddock, of Wyoming, Ohio, niece of her son-in-law Ben Paddock, came over Thursday and presented her with a cake with nine candles, each candle representing 10 years.

Friday morning Mr. J. C. Clore's wife presented her with a bouquet of flowers containing 90 blossoms. Mrs. Hattie Aylor gave her a white rose, Joseph Bullock and mother brought her a cake that he had baked himself. Mrs. Rouse is Mr. Harrison Clore, father of J. C. Clore, were born on the same day, Mrs. Truman Paddock, who is summing in Bayview, Michigan, sent her a card of greetings. Mr. Clore had a white rose on the lapel of his coat in memory of his father. Seventy years later Joseph Bullock was born on the 21st of August 90 years ago. Amanda Quick, daughter of Squire Neal Quick, was born two miles east of Taylorsport and has lived all but two years of her life in this county. She has been confined to her bed for over four months. She is being cared for by her only child Mrs. Ben Paddock at her home here in Hebron.

Her callers wished her many happy returns. In reading the names in the "Muster Roll" to her she knew most of the persons named there.

SHOWER GIVEN IN MISS HELEN CRISLER'S HONOR

The following news item taken from the Kentucky Society column in last Thursday's Enquirer, will be of interest to Boone county friends: "Mrs. Herbert Crisler entertained with a pretty shower at her home on Oakland avenue, Wallace Place, Covington, Wednesday, in compliment to the bride-elect, Miss Helen Crisler, whose coming marriage to Mr. Robert Clore, of Burlington, will be an event of the early autumn."

Miss Helen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Crisler former well-known Boone county citizens, and Mr. Clore is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Clore of near town.

THE PICNIC BALL GAME

American men hate to feel they are growing old or even older, so they have a strong tendency to renew their youth on many occasions. This spirit seizes hold of many of the picnics and various public affairs, when everyone is asked to take hold and play ball.

It is quite a sight to see a bunch of middle aged and even elderly men of Boone county get out and try to play ball as they used to. They hate to think, if they could play well 10 and 20 years ago, that they can't do so now. So they go trotting around the bases, they make wild lunges at curve balls, and they exercise muscles that have had no work to do for many months or years.

It is not surprising that the next day there is a considerable demand for liniment, and that many of them feel 10 years older. Still that spirit of clinging to the activity of youth is a most admirable one. If consistently followed, it will put off the coming of old age by a good many years.

GOOD TRAVELLERS

To hear some vacationists talk about the discomforts of their travels, you would not think that it did them much good to get away from home.

If in some hotel or restaurant they find the meat slightly tough or the pie imperfectly cooked, they talk for days about the poor service at that place and warn their friends not to go there. The end of it is apt to be that they are not satisfied unless they patronize the most expensive resorts, which may make their vacation too costly.

A different type of people set out on a vacation with a little more of the spirit of adventure, as on a kind of pioneering trip. If they have some vicissitudes of food or beds, they look at it as a part of the fun, and cheerfully put up with all discomforts in view of the glorious time they are having.

AVERAGE AGE 30 YEARS

According to the New York State Department of Health the estimated average age of our people now is thirty years and three months. The statement goes on to show that during the past twenty years the expectation of life at birth has increased for males by seven years and three months; for females by six years and five months. The chief factor for this extension of the average life time is said to be due to advances in preventive medicine, and but little credit is given to modern sanitary conditions and regulations that have cost thousands of millions of dollars but are directly responsible for suppressing yellow fever, malaria and typhoid epidemics.

FAIRS AT FLORENCE AND LAWRENCEBURG CLOSED

The county fairs for Boone county and our neighboring county of Dearborn paid their final respects to the year of 1925 about midnight last Saturday.

The North Kentucky fair was pronounced by the fair board as a decided success although all twenty-five sorry to have conflicted with Lawrenceburg, which many thought would seriously detract from the attendance at each fair.

However, the rain on Thursday was the only impediment in the way of attendance that either organization encountered. This slip-up in the weather man's program caused the attendance to dwindle considerably on this particular day, but it was apparently made up on the latter two days.

Notwithstanding a conflict in dates a number of Boone county exhibitors took their exhibits to Lawrenceburg and fared exceptionally well.

Tanner, Youell and Russ, the hustling hog raisers of Limaburg, did especially well with their hog exhibits, bringing home fourteen ribbons and all of the four cups which were offered for their breed of hogs.

Lawrenceburg exceeded their attendance mark of last year, however neither Florence nor Lawrenceburg desires to have another conflict in dates next year.

STATE AUTO OFFICERS BUSY AT THE FLORENCE FAIR

The crowd in town last Monday resembled an old time court day, when between fifty and seventy-five autos were parked around the Court House, which was caused by State Inspectors being at the Florence fair last week and tagged all autos bearing only one license plate and citing the owners of same to meet them in Burlington on Monday. Having only one tag on the car, a violation of the law, but when they arrived in Burlington Monday both license tags were on the cars, having lost the other tag and found them again, while others had neglected to put them on. After inspecting each car and finding them O. K. they were advised by the inspector to go home and sin no more.

MRS. ISABELLA ACREE DEAD

Mrs. Isabella Acree, aged 80 years, widow of Geo. E. Acree, passed away at her home on Sanders Drive, Florence, early Tuesday morning. Funeral services were held at the Florence Christian church, Thursday afternoon at 3:30 p. m., by the Rev. Steger of Latonia, in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives. Interment being in Highland cemetery, by the side of her husband.

Mrs. Acree is survived by two daughters and three sons, besides a host of other friends and relatives.

Undertaker Phil Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

CO-OPERATIVE TRADE

The advance of co-operative marketing associations is something wonderful. The total amount of co-operative trade in 1924 amounted to $2,500,000,000. There are now 12,000 such associations.

Those who have felt that the co-operative marketing movement was a doubtful experiment, must have seen by this time that it is securely established. It is bound to be a constantly increasing factor in the disposition of farm produce. The individual farmer is in a great many cases too insignificant a factor in the vast market, for him to deal effectively with the great buying forces that shape prices. In such cases he needs the backing of a strong organization.

THE MODERN CAVE MAN

Are Men more cruel than they once were? Is the twentieth century male of the species a cave man in fact, instead of a character of fiction and movie as we were led to believe.

The affirmative must be the answer, judging from the census bureau's analysis of statistics gathered in its survey of marriage and divorce in the United States, which showed that of all causes for divorce, cruelty has become the most common.

Forty years ago, cruelty accounted for less than one-fifth of the divorces; now it accounts for one-third. Desertion was formerly the most common cause for legal separation; now it is second place.

The old-fashioned husband just left home without any ceremony; the cave man type, we have the right to divorce doesn't leave, but his actions are so "cruel and inhuman" that the wife finds it necessary to petition the court for a decree breaking the marriage vows.

Whatever may be the causes for divorce, it must be agreed that 164,609 divorces granted in one year is altogether too many.

Forty Gallon Of Moonshine Consigned To Mother Earth

TO WRITE HISTORY OF GEORGETOWN COLLEGE

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 22.—A complete history of Georgetown College from its original beginning 137 years ago to its present time, with individual write-ups of every graduate and former student that ever attended the college, and numerous illustrations showing the growth of the institution, will be issued by the Alumni department of the College in 1926. At this time the College will celebrate its one hundredth birthday under its present name and character.

The new Alumni Secretary, G. Russell Bauer, recently elected to succeed Marvin Adams, resigned, announced today that an intensive campaign would be started immediately to ascertain the names and addresses of all former students of the institution. "The graduate files are more or less complete, but the former student record requires a lot of work that will use the time of this office some time to come," Mr. Bauer stated.

Mr. Bauer is working a large force in an effort to build his department so that it will rank among the foremost alumni departments in the country. By mail and personal inquiry he is gathering material relative to former students. Many names are being sent in by former students themselves in an effort to aid the alumni secretary in his work.

INFANT SON DIES

Geo. D. Tully, infant son of Chas. Tully and wife of Elsmere, passed away Friday after the wife's illness. Funeral services were conducted at the residence of his parents Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. W. C. Tully, pastor of the Erlanger Christian church, after which the remains were taken to Highland cemetery by Undertaker Phil Taliaferro for interment.

WHO IS GREAT?

Can you, O Man, with all your wealth
Of scientific lore,
Give to your dying loved one health
And drive death from your door?

You who with ease can calculate
Earth's distance from the sun—
How many stars can you create
Or sunbeams? Just make one.

Surely with boasted might and skill
And all your wisdom great
You can make something—if you will—
Some thing thing create.

You who can scale the mountain peak
Or drive the sea at will,
Say, can you to the tempest speak
And bid the storm be still?

You dig among the rocks of earth
And call them all by name,
And sometimes find sometimes find
Things of great worth.

That add much to your fame.
But can you when the grass is brown
And parched for want of rain,
Call forth a shower to come down
Then bring sunshine again?

Even in the air you now hold sway,
For like a bird you fly,
But take one element away—
And instantly you'd die.

You're wonderful O man, we see,
Your brain is really great,
But—far more wonderful is He
Who did the brain create.

Subdue the earth, do all you can;
Your Maker will it so,
But after all—you're only "man"—
Just a far can you go.

"Come, let us worship and bow down"
At His feet lie prostrate,
Before Him cast each earthly crown
For He alone is great.

SUMMER BOARDERS

Many families having homes in cities like at this time of year to go out to some simple country home or farm, and board for a number of weeks. They like the simplicity of such a home. It is quite a proposition to keep active children in proper order in a summer home, but place them on a farm with plenty of room to run in, and the problem of restraining them becomes less trying.

The contact thus established is useful. The city folks have found that there is a great deal of bright wit and broad intelligence in the country towns. And some of the country people have also discovered that city conditions tend toward a smoothness of manner and readiness of speech that are useful. There may not be much profit in taking summer boarders, but the farmer performs a service when he receives them. His industry teaches useful lessons, and perhaps he will learn something in return.

250 GALLON STILL RAIDED ON MONDAY NIGHT, 2600 GALL-ON OF MASH FOUND

Officers conducted last Monday night what was generally termed as the biggest raid on record in Boone county.

Acting upon information received and backed up by a sworn affidavit, Sheriff B. B. Hume and deputies Herbert Snyder and Thos. Percival proceeded to the farm of Walter Robinson near Walton, on which is located, what was thought to be a vacant tenant house. While they were watching the house a Reo speed wagon approached bringing supplies for the distillery. The officers at once took the occupants of this outfit into their custody and searched the house where they found about twenty-six hundred gallons of mash, a still with an estimated capacity of about two hundred and fifty gallons, about 60 pounds of yeast, fifteen hundred lbs. of sugar and many other articles generally used and employed in and about places of this nature.

They then loaded the still and some of the other stuff in the truck, dumped the sugar in a cistern, and started for home with the truck.

On the way out of the place they met a large Buick six roadster with one man aboard. Upon searching this vehicle they found forty gallons of moonshine in eight five gallon cans. This had been hauled from around on the back part of the place and they were of course preparing to take it to town.

The Buick and Reo both bore Ohio license plates, while the men gave their names as Thos. Newcomb, of Richmond, Clyde Anderson, 816 Isabelle Street, Newport, and Anthony Gilbert, 105 Sunset Ave, Price Hill, Cincinnati. All were lodged in jail in default of $1,000 bond.

The automobiles were owned by Newcomb.

MUCH FROM LITTLE

When you consider the work of the people who built up the western states of our country during comparatively recent years, or of the older colonists who settled the eastern states, it often seems marvellous how much they achieved with so few things to do with. If you look back at your grandparents, and remember what they used to say about the small incomes they had in those times, it seems remarkable how much they accomplished.

They built pleasant homes, gave their children a fair education, and had rather comfortable conditions, yet they saw but very little money according to our standards.

One reason for their ability to do large things with small means, was the careful forethought with which they used to plan the expenditure of money and the handling of personal resources. At present we are so busy having a good time in our spare hours, that we do not like to plan our doings in this careful way.

It is interesting to hear the old timers tell how they used to plan out the husbanding of their resources. There were long and earnest debates in families as to what they should do with this or that piece of cloth or that old garment. The expenditure of every dollar was very thoughtfully determined.

They did not have a budget system in those days, but they did not let even a small sum of money go through their hands without the most careful arrangement for getting the full value of it.

How they would have valued modern advertising if they had had it in those days! The homes would have been deserted when the stores advertised a bargain.

While we can not return to all the simple ways of those days, yet there are many families who have great difficulty in keeping out of debt, who could save money by some return of this spirit.

CLOSES REVIVAL AT THE BULLITTSBURG CHURCH

Rev. A. B. Wood, pastor of the Burlington Baptist church, has just finished a series of revival services at the Bullittsburg church. The revival lasted through a period of twelve nights and was a decidedly successful one from many viewpoints.

Rev. Campbell, regular pastor at Bullittsburg, occupied Rev. Wood's pulpit at Burlington Sunday and delivered an excellent sermon to a well filled house. Rev. Wood will begin a series of meetings at the Burlington church early next month.

Those who keep the mail order catalog on the parlor table for constant reference, instead of the home newspaper, may be the same ones who wonder why the home town does not go ahead as they want it to.

BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES

In other columns of this issue of the Recorder may be found a most absorbingly interesting and enlightening article on William Jennings Bryan. It was contributed to the Recorder columns by Edgar DeWitt Jones, of Detroit, and treats of Mr. Bryan's very distinct and notable oratorical qualities. Many readers of this page have heard Dr. Jones himself, both from the lecture platform and from the pulpit, and we need not therefore explain to them that he (Dr. Jones) is fully qualified to write on the subject of "Bryan the Orator."

If anyone we have ever heard possesses a "silver tongue" other than the Commoner himself, it is Dr. Jones. And he is as truly an interesting writer as he is a captivating speaker.

He classes Bryan as one of the world's seven greatest orators.

WHY NEGROES VOTE AS THEY DO
The following was taken from the Lexington Herald under date of August 15th. It was written by a negro to the editor of the Herald, and attempts to explain why negroes consistently vote the Republican ticket.

Editor, Lexington Herald:
Permit me to give to your readers a negro's view on the subject "Why negroes vote as they do."

In the first place, I set myself down as an independent in state and local affairs and a Republican in national affairs.

In the second place, I suppose that all of us are agreed that the voting of any group "en bloc," whether it be Protestant, Catholic, negro or southern whites, constitutes a serious menace to our government and that all of us believe that the breeding up of such "bloc" voting in the entire South, white and black, Protestant and Catholic, would be a great blessing.

In the third place, there are reasons why the negro has continued so long in his habit of "bloc" voting and has regularly and consistently cast his vote for the Republican party. Probably the strongest reason has sprung from a sense of gratitude and a desire to reward those who were largely responsible for his liberation.

It should be remembered that until quite recently in Kentucky and at this very time throughout many of the southern states, the Democratic party has boldly proclaimed that this is a white man's country and that the Democratic party is a white man's party.

Under the circumstances it is rather difficult to see how a self-respecting negro could have broken into the Democratic party had he desired to do so. The passing of the men and women and the great principles that made the Republican party and the alignment of the men of today on great present day problems have largely removed the ground for loyalty on the part of negroes to the Republican party, for the Republican party of today is no more the party of Abraham Lincoln than the present Democratic party is of Jefferson Davis.

Further, the negro fears that the voting of the Democratic ticket in national affairs will give into power the southern Democratic politician who has almost always represented the negro in his struggle for civil and political rights and who has been responsible for many of the state laws which the negro regards as unjust and un-American. Kentucky has a "white" exception in this regard. The negro has never in the South, so far as my knowledge goes, been cordially invited into the Democratic party and given a welcome in the deliberations of that party. The negro, therefore, generally looks upon the Democratic party as his natural and implacable enemy. The Democratic party in the South, on the other hand, has made the negro question a shibboleth in rallying white voters to the Democratic standard.

Dr. M. Ashby Jones, one of the outstanding white ministers in the South, says: "In all the 60 years since the war the South has not faced a single great issue that has not been overshadowed or influenced by the 'bogey' of 'negro domination' or 'social' quality,' both of which in the eyes of sensible people, negroes as well as whites, are myths, or more strictly speaking, campaign propaganda for the holding of the southern white voters in line. In the north where these conditions do not prevail, the negro has ceased to be a political certainty, as the support of Tammany Hall and Mayor Hylan by negroes in New York and the election of a Democratic mayor, Dwyer, in Chicago by negro voters, definitely prove.

I submit that if the Democratic party in Kentucky should cordially invite negro voters into its ranks and write into its state and local platform laws and enactments favorable to the negro, there would be an immediate and no inconsiderable breaking away on the part of the negro from the Republican party.

The incident of the thinking negro hopes that some great civil or moral or economic question will arise in the South, dividing the white people along other lines than the so-called fear of negro domination and social equality, and therefore giving the negro opportunity to divide his vote, lining up on one side or the other of great, pressing present-day problems, thus giving freedom from political bondage to men and measure long since dead.

Beyond doubt, there are signs of such new alignments. Hasten the day when this shall be realized, for the South and when all the people of the South, white and black alike, shall achieve their political and intelligent freedom. In the meantime I would urge the negro of the state of Kentucky in local affairs to vote more for men and measures and less for political parties, standing loyally by their friends and the friends of democracy and justice, and fair play, whether they march under the Democratic or Republican banner.

JAMES BOND
Director Inter-Racial Commission,
Louisville, Ky.

The editor of the Hazard Leader speaks of the Florida boom in an editorial in a recent issue. We think the Hazard editor should be qualified to write on the "boom" subject as their little town was transformed overnight, so to speak, when the gigantic coal boom hit the Kentucky mountains. Florida is unquestionably experiencing wonderful prosperity with real estate values soaring, but the great burning question remains unanswered—when will the boom in values be reached? The Hazard editorial says:

"From the towns, cities and villages all over the country there are scores of people who are selling out their worldly possessions and moving to Florida. Within the last three months have been located in Florida or fifty people from Hazard who have located in Florida."

"Probably nothing like this general trend toward this land of sunshine has been seen in the United States since the California gold rush of '49 or the Alaskan boom in the nineties. All towns have certain points in common and most of them are overdone and have not the substance behind them to endure. Such is our impression of the Florida boom. Florida is too far away from the big centers of population to become a great industrial center. Its future is wrapped up almost in the tourists' and vacationists' business, which too often follows the whims of the leaders."

"The state has made steady progress for the last twenty-five years, and that growth has been for the most part normal and healthy. But the last year or two have seen a runaway real estate market accompanied by high construction and high labor costs, which has put the business section of Miami in selling for more than that of State street or Michigan boulevard in Chicago."

"As long as the excitement and the opportunity for further speculation prevails, these prices will hold up, but when that is over with, the price of high real estate will drop to what such business sites will pay the merchant or retailer, which will probably be about one-fifth of their present figure."

"Most of us here went through the Hazard boom. Twelve years ago there was but one brick building in town. Now we have two hundred or more. The town boom, property went high, real estate was paid for three or four times and a year for storekeepers. Then the price of coal dropped into half and with it the revenue coming into the Hazard coal field."

"The last two years of depression have brought about a drastic shakeup in Hazard and now the city is back to a stable basis. The depression is not without its good points; it has taught people a lesson and will in the long run benefit the city. Hazard is destined to grow, and will always be a good business town, but the growth will not be of the mushroom variety. In the future real estate values will eventually be restored to where they were."

The American Federation of Teachers, affiliated with the Federation of Labor has started a campaign for higher salaries for school teachers, with a minimum of $2,000 a year, establishment of the five-hour class day, a year's leave of absence with some compensation every 7 years, pensions, participation in school government, teachers and better school buildings.

It's never the best policy to imitate a bad example. The country seems to be in the grip of a population shift. The East and West are increasing by leaps and bounds.

BRYAN THE ORATOR

ONE OF AMERICA'S SEVEN GREATEST

ANALYSIS OF HIS POWERS

BY DR. EDGAR DEWITT JONES

Washington is turning rapidly, all most overnight it seems in some cases, from a town of old homesteads and quiet, shaded streets to a bustling city where business holds the whip hand. In the north-west section of the city, business houses are taking the place of the old brick homes which are either being destroyed entirely or are being remodeled into office buildings. The result is that the residential sections are being pushed farther away and even into the nearby Maryland and Virginia suburbs. Business development is not limited either to the residential sections as many of the streets which have been occupied solely by business houses for years are undergoing improvements and remodeling which are changing the whole appearance of the city. The big change will come, however, whenever Congress goes ahead with the Government's great building program, contemplating the destruction of many of the old grimy buildings along the south side of Pennsylvania Avenue and the erection of Government department buildings in one big group on the Mall.

The early sessions of the debt funding negotiations between the United States and Belgium have moved into a deadlock over terms for paying the nearly half billion dollars which Belgium owes, but the best information is that an agreement is still possible and will be reached before the end of the month. The biggest victory for the Belgians at the American commissioners of the promise of a lengthy moratorium, during which time they will be required to pay neither principal or interest. The granting of this concession to Belgium indicates that a similar policy will be followed in the case of both Italy and France, despite the repeated denials of the Government that moratoriums were possible.

Accustomed to parades and public demonstrations of all kinds, Washington saw something entirely new in the Ku Klux Klan parade, and is still trying to get at the meaning of the great outpouring of white-robed figures which marched down Pennsylvania Avenue for nearly four hours. The parade was looked upon as a demonstration of strength on the part of the organization, despite the fact that it was given out that the national officers did not stand sponsor for the affair and that it was of local origin. Opponents of the Klan sought unsuccessfully to stop the parade on the ground that riot and bloodshed would result, but the whole thing went off quietly and without excitement.

With no local scandal of importance to attract its attention Washington has been keeping tab on the final round in Michigan of the Congressman Scott divorce case, which has now reached its conclusion. The Scotts were leading members of the Congress-Army-Navy set in the Capital and several of their associates in this group were involved in the charges and counter-charges which they made in their bills for divorce. Stories of the trial, replete with tales of Congressional drinking bouts, smuggling of liquor and other indiscretions were read with interest in all social circles. Scott will be a member of the next Congress, but it is uncertain if he will return to Washington.

The chief problem now worrying officials of the District Government is the regulation of traffic. The regulations have become so complex that the directing officers themselves admit that they can't keep up with all the changes and amendments. Every day some new rule is promulgated, traffic law violations on the part of motorists are becoming more numerous, and the municipal courts have found it necessary to keep open all night in order that the number of violators won't pile up during the day sessions. In spite of all these efforts, reckless driving continues and deaths from auto accidents occur almost without abatement.

The General Motors Company announced a new "synthetic gas" to take the place of gasoline and an engine that will give 50 miles to the gallon, no gear shifts, no carbon, no fumes. The fuel, which is the new German alcohol from coal, will be manufactured by the DuPont Co., and the distribution will be handled by the Standard Oil Company through its service stations.

When the Nation has one law for the rich and poor alike, and promptly enforces it, as is done in England, for instance, a greater part, if not all, of this increasing lawlessness will cease to exist.

"William Jennings Bryan is dead." It was early Monday morning, July 27 on a train approaching Los Angeles when I heard a woman's voice speak these words. Curiously, it was on a train in February, 1919 that I first learned of the passing of Theo. Roosevelt, and now as then, I feel sense of personal loss and the world seems a lonelier place in the taking from the stage a familiar and distinguished personality, one of the most widely known American citizens of his day, and the incomparable orator.

I first met Mr. Bryan in 1901, and during the past twelve years had come to know him in rather an intimate way. I heard him speak on thirty-six different occasions in seven widely separated states, and also in Edinburgh, Scotland. I heard him lecture and speak both on political and religious subjects. Three times during my Detroit residence he spoke from the pulpit of Central Christian church, the last time being a year ago, the latter part of June, just prior to the Madison Square Garden convention. We corresponded occasionally, and I was enriched by the Commoner's friendship.

The Orator

There have been in American history, seven men of such super-oratorical ability as to lift them above their eloquent fellow-orators into a sphere unique. These seven are, Patrick Henry, Daniel Webster, Henry Clay, Sargent S. Prentice, Henry Ward Beecher, Robert G. Ingersoll and William Jennings Bryan. There are a dozen other orators whose place is only a little lower—men in some instances whose speech changed the course of history. The last of these, more than the others, nevertheless a little reflection should convince the skeptical that the seven names listed above are "bright particular stars," and entitled to supremacy in the firmament of American oratory.

Yet William Jennings Bryan in the more than thirty-five years of his speaking career has been, in the opinion of Henry Webster, Clay, Prentice, Ingersoll and Beecher combined. First, last and all the time, Bryan was the orator.

Mr. Bryan's equipment for the platform was exceptionally good. He possessed a strong constitution, a sturdy body able to withstand such oratorical exertions as no other speaker has experienced. His appearance was impressive and magnetic. In earlier years it was singularly winsome, even debonaire. His nose was prominent and aquiline, eyes dark and piercing and capable of flashing fire. His mouth was wide; lips thin, chin and jaw firm. The latter served the man's deep-seated convictions. His hair worn long, and originally black, was graying rapidly of late. Bryan's figure was good even when most corpulent, though his arms seemed to be short in proportion to his figure as a whole. He was a man who stood out in a crowd, a commanding presence of eagle-like countenance.

A Marvelous Voice

The greatest asset to Mr. Bryan as an orator was his voice. It was a mighty organ, a noble instrument of great range and flexibility. Usually he spoke without effort, as effortless as "Woodland nooks send violets up And paint them blue."

The Bryan voice was mellifluous, musical, resonant and never failed him throughout the most laborious of campaigns, and the somnolent turbulence to which he talked. It was the finest speaking voice possessed by any orator of his generation, and I am not forgetting the remarkable voice of former Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas; the rich tones of Walter Hampton or the silver tongue of Colonel Breckinridge, of Kentucky.

In his introductory remarks Mr. Bryan's style of speaking was oftenest conversational, but quickly and readily passed from this to trumpet tones. That matchless voice reflected scorn, surprise; registered indignation, pathos, humor. I think it is generally agreed that he was at his best when attacked from under fire, especially when the question was a moral one or he believed it to be such. Then Bryan was truly great! At Baltimore in 1912 he was superb.

The element of "oratorical surprise" was used by Mr. Bryan frequently and with striking effect. In 1910 I heard Mr. Bryan in a twenty minute speech at the Madison Square Garden, Edinburgh, Scotland. He was exceedingly felicitous and captivated the audience, which was composed of some of the most distinguished churchmen, lay and clerical, in Christendom. Mr. Bryan was preceded by a Chinese scholar, the President of a Christian University, Nanking. When the Commoner's turn came, he said: "We have heard much about the Yellow Peril, but I am here to say to you that there is only one Yellow Peril and that is the lust for gold." Evidently, he said this on the spur of the second and it was so clever and so true that it brought the delegates to their feet and round after round of applause followed. At Edinburgh Mr. Bryan wore a silk hat in the sense that Mr. Bryan was Burke Cockran was Bryan's superior in classical style and melting Irish eloquence. Delivered more electric hat, a frock coat, striped trousers, patent leather shoes and carried a cane. He was, I thought, the handsomest man of orators.

Keen at Reports

At Madison Square Garden last July when interrupted by a fog horn voice from the gallery, Mr. Bryan turned in the direction of the interrupter and exclaimed, "One thing is certain, when we pick our leaders this year, we shall not go to the gallery for them." I do not think the Press generally did justice to this speech which came at the end of a four hours' debate at about one o'clock Sunday morning. The famous Garden was crowded to the roof and the aisles were jammed. Bryan was rocking with fatigue for he had been up all night with the committee on resolutions. The hall was in an uproar when he began and it was with difficulty that Chairman Walsh secured a semblance of order. The golden voice rolled out, strong, musical as of old filling every nook and corner of the huge structure. He was particularly effective when he said "The Catholic church needs no defense from the Democratic party; it can take care of itself. The Jews need no defense from the Democratic party; they have Moses and Elijah, let them hear them."

Familiarity With The Bible.

Mr. Bryan interlarded his speeches with frequent quotations from the Bible. He exceeded Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt in his habit of Biblical quotation, and it is not much to say that all men in public life in this country he was the most familiar with the scriptures. In truth, Mr. Bryan was a preacher, an expounder of the Christian doctrine and many of his lectures were really sermons.

Mr. Bryan would have become a second Spurgeon or a lesser Beecher—for he had none of the Brooklyn preachers' radical tendency in the realm of spiritual interpretation. Mr. Bryan's vocabulary was not extensive but it was strong and composed of frequent quotations from the Bible. He exceeded Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt in his habit of Biblical quotation, and it is not much to say that all men in public life in this country he was the most familiar with the scriptures. In truth, Mr. Bryan was a preacher, an expounder of the Christian doctrine and many of his lectures were really sermons.

Mr. Bryan told a story well and his speeches teemed with illustrations. Some of his stories will be long remembered, as for example, that of the fat woman who was so fat that she was obliged to get off of a street car backward and who had thus attempted three times to leave the car but each time her dismay was helped on again by some one who thought she was entering instead of leaving. This was a favorite anecdote of Mr. Bryan to illustrate his three time candidacy for president.

Another favorite was his tale of the preacher and lawyer who were talking shop. The preacher said to the lawyer "What do you do when you make a mistake in a speech to a jury?" Said the lawyer, "It depends upon the character of the mistake. If it is a slight error I let it go. If important, I correct it. What do you do when you make a mistake in a sermon?" "I follow your plan," replied the preacher. "If it is a serious error, I correct it. If slight, I let it go. For instance in my sermon Sunday, I started to say that the Devil was the father of all liars, but what I did say was, 'The Devil is the father of all lawyers.' However, it was a trifle and I let it go."

Mr. Bryan used few quotations of poetry in his public speeches, but he had three favorites, and if he quoted it all it was usually one of the three. He was fond of Bryan's lines, "To a Waterfall," for example, Burns' "Cotter's Saturday Night" and most of all, he treasured Gray's "Elegy." "In a Country Churchyard." It is not likely that Mr. Bryan read much of modern verse. He was old-fashioned in his likings in literature and art. It was only in political and economic subjects that he was a liberal.

When Mr. Bryan is compared with contemporary orators he is excelled in some particulars and equalled in others, but as the orator of the masses he was his superior. Woodrow Wilson was a much more brilliant rhetorician than Mr. Bryan. His sentences were more scintillating and his thought more distinctive. Some of Mr. Wilson's speeches are at the very pinnacle of American eloquence and nothing that Mr. Bryan achieved during his long career approached them. But Mr. Wilson never was or could be the popular or Roosevelt was more unique and picturesque Beveridge more epigrammatic. LaFollette more volcanic. Reed, of Missouri more vitriolic. Yet, take him by and large, Mr. Bryan was more supremely the popular orator than any one of this notable group of contemporaries. It is easy to think of any one of this group as conspicuous in some other realm than oratory—in law or authorship for example. It is almost impossible to think of Mr. Bryan as pre-eminent in anything else save golden speech, and of course, his noble character.

There is no precedent for William Jennings Bryan in the annals of American oratory. It cannot be said that he resembled closely any of the renowned speakers who preceded him nor for that matter any of his contemporaries, unless it be in a slight way, the late Senator John W. Daniel, of Virginia. Mr. Bryan stood halfway between the ornate and florid style so often associated with the South and the severe and more business-like oratory so often identified with the North. He was a master of the simpler and grandeur eloquence, the like of which we may never again hear.

On the occasion of Mr. Bryan's visit to Detroit last summer, a little group of us lunched together in The Detroit club. Mr. Bryan, Mr. Henry Leland, Mr. Wilfred Leland and myself. Somehow the subject of sickness came up, and Mr. Bryan remarked, "I rather expect the end will come some day when I am speaking. A blood vessel will burst and I will collapse on the platform." The end came suddenly as he had expected, but while he slept, as it came to that, other famous Americans, who next to Mr. Bryan, spoke to the largest number of the American people—Theodore Roosevelt.

MOTOR TRANSPORTATION

There are approximately 470,000 miles of paved roads in the United States. Nearly 4,000,000 motor vehicles widen the market area of the farmer, and 33 railroads use motor trucks as part of their shipping service. Over 150,000 physicians enlarge their business and incomes by reason of the motor car and 200,000 salesmen reduce selling and living costs by motorized transportation. Sixty thousand motor buses are used to transport passengers and nearly 500,000 children are transported to and from school in motor buses. The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce asserts that 60 per cent of all passenger car mileage is for business purposes.

The United States Chamber of Commerce asserts that the increased value of city, suburban and farm property because of improved roads and motor transportation, amounts to a total figure larger than the first cost of all the autos in the nation besides the cost of the roads. They have paid for themselves.

The growth of a nation depends on its transportation systems and this is one reason why America has made such remarkable advance.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK
Good crops, lifting of farm indebtedness, bank clearings at the highest level, record record, great activity in home, industrial and commercial building, revival of mining in various sections where the mining industry is not hampered by strikes, employment general, and commercial energy and confidence, accompanied by large purchases for the fall sales, are some of the major outlines of the business survey for August.

The automobile development has interfered with railroad development to some extent but as soon as the status of these two competing transportation systems are defined we may look for tremendous orders for rail development, and a decided industrial boom.

DEFECTIVE HUMANS

The question is often asked: "What is the most dangerous age in life?"

Statistics show that the heavy death rate is in the first five years of life weeds out a large number of the sub-normal and defective, and the death rate gradually falls until about age twelve. Thereafter it rises fairly rapidly until at forty it is twice what it is at twenty and after forty the rise in the death rate is very rapid.

These statistics, based on actual records, show that a majority of the human race is defective at best. There are 66 chances out of 100 that you have defective vision. There are 60 chances out of 100 that you have infection at the roots of your teeth. There are 85 chances out of 100 that you have some form of head infection, either in the tooth sockets, tonsils or nasal cavities. There are a chances out of 100 that you have tuberculosis. There are 10 chances out of 100 that you have a defective heart. There are 20 chances out of 100 that you have defective kidneys.

A brave and cheerful outlook on life is one of the fundamental principles, but these conditions cannot be corrected by ignoring them.

Formerly the boys used to wear out shoe leather on hiking trips, but now they wear out their trousers seats in the cars in which they get rides.

Mayfield—Three men injured when the engine of a work train on the Illinois Central carried three cars from a trestle near Bevier, were in a hospital here suffering from contusions, fractures and other minor injuries.

Mayfield, Ky.—Announcement was made that Mayfield's sewerage system, which has been in course of construction for the past year, will be ready for inspection soon, barring unforeseen delays or accidents.

Bowling Green, Ky.—The board of public works awarded a contract to the Nashville Surgical Supply Company, Nashville, Tenn., for supplying the new city hospital with the new surgical supplies. The amount of the contract is $1,930.

Madisonville, Ky.—J. B. Ramsey, 36, president of the Hopkins County Bank at Madisonville, Ky., left the Clarksville Hospital after injuries received in an automobile accident near here had been diagnosed at a hospital as not serious.

London, Ky.—Jake Kintzer, miner, was probably fatally injured when he was buried under a slate fall in the McNeill mine, near East Harrodsburg, this county. He was brought to the Pennington Hospital here, where an examination revealed that his back was broken and it is believed he can not recover.

Bowling Green, Ky.—Lightning shocked M. C. Graves, residing on the Small House, like, striking an electrical storm, while Graves, wife and two sons, Gale and Stanley Graves, were swimming at Bowdley's beach. Graves was knocked to the floor. The other members of the family were not injured.

Versailles, Ky.—Hugh Bower, who is alleged to be a parolee, escaped from the Ohio State Reformatory, is being held by Versailles police pending the arrival of Mansfield, Ohio, police. Harrodsburg, Ky.—The City Board of Education has advertised for sealed bids to be opened August 14 for the erection of an auditorium and gymnasium annex to the High School building, the cost to be approximately from $200,000 to $300,000. The auditorium is to be fitted up with a stage and dressing-rooms and to seat about 700 to 800 people. It will be so arranged that the seats can be taken up and stored on the stage when not in use, and the room used for basketball.

Mayfield, Ky.—Six young men who recently raided the fish pond of State Pension Commissioner Tom George, short distance south of the city compromised their cases before County Judge J. W. Monroe here and saved trial. The amount of fish caught and the total amounts paid as damages and costs by the six young men made each pound cost approximately $2. Mr. George greatly prized his pond and had forbidden fishing for the past several years. It cost each man approximately $37.

Shelbyville, Ky.—Jack Johnson, former champion heavyweight boxer, accompanied by another negro, tried to show some speed in his Lincoln line, on his way to Louisville, County Patrolman W. W. Husband was on the lookout for violators, and trailed Johnson's fifty-two mile gait from Peytona to the four-mile bright, just east of Shelbyville, before Jack would take the notice. HOPKINS COUNTY PATROLMAN, ARRESTING ALLEGED DRUNK, IS SHOT FROM THE REAR

Farmer Held as Suspect—Victim Active in Apprehending Bootleggers, Inquiry Court Learns.

Madisonville, Ky.—County Patrolman John Allen, 56 years old, was shot from ambush while attempting to drag a drunken man from an automobile parked near a dance hall in Beulah, eight miles from here. He fell dead on the running board, the top of his head blown off by a charge of shot.

The court today held soon after by officials from Madisonville, resulted in the arrest of Lee Tapp, 35, a farmer of Kirkwood Springs, on a charge of murder. He will face a preliminary hearing soon.

Testimony taken at the court revealed that Tapp was seen at the dance with a woman before and after Allen was slain. He obtained the weapon, according to testimony, from his brother, Boss Tapp, who lives above the dance hall.

Patrolman Allen had stopped at the motor car when he saw a man sawed in, it while his partner, Charles Hicks, guard at the United States Veterans Hospital at Dawson Springs, took two youths, handcuffed together, to Allen's car farther along the road. With the report of the shot, Hicks ran for cover and the two youths, arrested for drunkenness, escaped in the woods. Their names are being withheld.

The charge of shot struck Allen near his right temple. It was fired from a distance of about twenty feet. At the court of inquiry, it was testified that the slain patrolman had been unusually active against bootleggers recently. He frequently accompanied Federal agents on raids. It was said.

Allen had been a County patrolman for two years, and prior to that he served as Chief of Police at Dawson Springs. He leaves a widow.

WARREN PRISON BREAK FAILS

Moosiers in Bowling Green Jail Use Force to Escape

Bowling Green, Ky.—Capt. Porter Dodd, member of the local fire department, prevented a jail delivery when he discovered Raymond Graham, 21, a prisoner in the jail, and Frank Carr, 27, South Bend, and Rufus Rutherford, 23, Shelbyville, Ind., removing bricks on the second floor in the city prison located in the city hall building, adjoining the central fire station.

Captain Dodd called Patrolman Frank Hagerman, who inspected the attempted delivery. Patrolman Hagerman at once notified Patrolmen William N. Conroy, W. C. Crook and Paul Hinton, who were on duty. Patrolman Conroy opened the prison door and discovered Graham removing the bricks. One of the other two men was watching the door, listening for footsteps of the officers, and the third man was in an open cell, all-attired in their clothes, ready to make their escape. The six bricks had to be removed when they were caught, and they could have been removed with their hands.

The men were locked in separate cells where they will be kept until Bloomington officers arrive.

When they were asked whether they had ever been in trouble heretofore, all remarked that they were not murderers or highway robbers and when City Jailor John B. Turner remarked that they had been a little disordered in detaining the city prison, they told him that if some one had been on a close watch prisoners would not endeavor to escape. The officers were unable to hear any noise in the police headquarters.

Captain Dodd heard a noise but could not discover the location until the men had made a hole through the wall. The three prisoners climbed the iron pipes from the inventory in the men's department, also a piece of iron on one of the bunks, which were used to removing the brick. The hole which they succeeded in making was the length of a window and about ten inches in width. A telephone message was received by Chief of Police Craig from the Sheriff at Bloomington, stating that Carr and Rutherford were escaped convicts from the Indiana Reformatory and Graham forfeited a $5,000 bond on a bootlegging charge.

Graham, Carr and Rutherford were arrested here by the police when they were seen driving through the public square with a new coach, 1925 model, without license, either in front or rear. They were caught and it was later learned that they were wanted in Bloomington.

London, Ky.—Mrs. Elmer Diney, Mrs. Robert Setser and Charles Litteral, of Scotch, are in the Pennington Hospital here as a result of a head-on collision between two automobiles about a mile south of London. Mrs. Diney, who was on her way to the hospital for treatment when the accident occurred, was the most seriously hurt, and received cuts on her head and other injuries. Her husband, Mrs. Setser received severe cuts and broken bones in her right hand, while Litteral's injuries were confined to a deep cut in his leg.

WEEDING THE GARDEN

Weeding the garden is a most unpopular job. The kids absolutely groan when asked to perform this task. The householder may have laid out his garden with great enthusiasm last April, but if asked to buckle down in August and save his plants from being swamped, his courage often evaporates and the garden becomes a failure.

Yet the philosophical mind finds pleasure even in this toilsome task. There is a sense of triumphing over those arrogant interlopers who have been defying him for weeks. Also the gratitude in the faces of his plants is evident to an imaginative person.

They seem so peaked and puny when compared with those fat and coarse intruders. But with the latter cleared out of the way, the good qualities of the plants shine forth, and you can see them straighten up in a day and take a resolution for a new start.

Farm Livestock Now Profitable on Many Farms in State

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 8.—For the first time since 1920 all kinds of live stock fed on farms are now returning a profit, according to Wayland Rhoads, of the Kentucky College of Agriculture. Hogs, cattle, sheep and poultry are bringing substantial returns to Kentucky farmers, he declared, and dairying is continuing to pay well.

"The hog market now is 2 to 3 points above the price of corn," Mr. Rhoads said. "Cattle feeders have this year been realizing a good profit upon their feeding operations. Profit on steers above feeding costs are running from $5 to $35 a head. In many instances, a year ago cattlemen did well if they broke even on their feeding operations, and for the past four years feeding has been uncertain business."

"While less lamb and mutton are consumed than other meats, yet the demand is good enough to keep the lamb trade in a healthy condition. America produces only 60 per cent of the wool needed in this country, which fact plus an import tax keeps wool prices up."

Some of the factors which have been responsible for present stock raising profitability according to Rhoads, are:—the recent meat consumption; the liquidation of breeding stock, and the stocking up of farm and ranch herds and flocks. There is a good demand for both fat and breeding stock, as a result. Most of the animals now going to market are either fat, or those which have served their usefulness for breeding purposes, he said.

If the corn crop continues promising, Mr. Rhoads predicts a big demand for feeder stock the coming fall and winter.

The late rains have made a wonderful change in the hay crop and farmers will be prepared to winter a few calves.

The potato crop seems to be about the smallest and a few late ones planted now would help, together with a patch of turnips, kale and spinach.

STANDING THE HEAT

Summer heat is very distasteful to many people, who get all wilted down when a hot day comes. They go long distances to avoid heat, and then are upset if the thermometer is 10 degrees above normal.

Out in the corn field, however, the old farmer is not worrying much about the heat. If he does not get the normal amount of it, he knows too well that his crop won't mature. A hot day fills him with cheer, as he knows that it is ripening his crops and helping him market the products of his labor. His experience has taught him how to harden himself against the depressing effects of a hot day.

The people who keep actively at work can usually stand a period of hot weather. Their constitution adjusts itself to those extremes. Which suggests that the more people acquire of general physical strength, and the less they fuss about warm days, the less they feel them.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded life, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distracted appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III.—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling rooms, and is fascinated, but can only learn that she is called Mademoiselle de Poniere and is with her aunt. He is unable to secure her position. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young man's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV.—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V.—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and concealment surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI.—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but he, a natural flirt, is only mildly interested in the girl, while Christopher, Bent really loves her and would marry her.

Chapter VII

Gerald ordered the dinner and the wine. Then he started the conversation with a somewhat abrupt question. "Chris," he asked, "exactly what do you think of Mademoiselle de Poniere?"

"I don't know her," Christopher responded.

"As a matter of fact, neither do I," Gerald declared, a little bitterly. "She persuaded me to introduce myself down on the sands below the villa, and she has been for a ride with me in the car every afternoon since; yet she does this secretly, and if I meet her with her aunt I am not allowed to speak to her or to expect recognition. I am not permitted to call at the villa, I don't know where they come from, I don't know even her nationality. I flatter myself that for my few but well-spent years I have seen something of the world and its snarls, but I honestly cannot place these two women."

"What is Mademoiselle's attitude toward you when you are alone?" Christopher asked.

"Idiotically reserved," Gerald answered. "I once touched her fingers and I thought she would have struck me. Humiliated though it may be, I am half inclined to believe that it is the mortifying alone which attracts her in the slightest degree, and that I represent very little more to her than the man who is driving the car."

Their conversation was momentarily interrupted by the arrival in the place of a newcomer, a stranger to both the young men. He was tall and broad-shouldered, sallow-skinned, with a mass of black hair, good features, but with hard, almost brutal mouth. Immediately he had been relieved of his coat, he made his way to the bar, drank two cocktails in rapid succession and lit a cigarette. Then he wandered to the table adjoining the one at which the two young men were seated and, having given his order for dinner, busied himself making calculations upon some scraps of paper which he tore up as soon as they were filled with figures. Gerald spoke to the waiter who served them, with whom he was well acquainted.

"A stranger here, Charles?" The man glanced over his shoulder and lowered his tone.

"A Russian gentleman, my lord," he announced, "staying at the Hotel de Paris—Monsieur Zubin, he calls himself. They say that he has been playing very heavily."

"Russians who play high are no great novelty here," Gerald remarked, under his breath. "There are not so many of them with money, nowadays, though. Chris," he went on, as the man left them, "you asked yesterday what was the matter with me. I'll tell you. It's this uncertainty about Mademoiselle de Poniere. It's an absolute torment to me. It's getting on my nerves."

"Is it the character and reputation of these ladies concerning which you cannot make up your mind, or is it Mademoiselle's lack of reciprocity for your overtures which you find disagreeable?" "For the—er, sake, chuck that legal tosh!" Gerald begged. "It's both."

Christopher laughed quietly. "There were people who called Gerald the most spoilt young man in London, and his present predicament had its humorous side. Gerald himself made a little grimace.

"It's all very well, Christopher," he said, "but I am a great deal too near being in a similar position. Pull out self together and suggest some way of getting hold of the truth."

"If the girl herself won't help you," Christopher replied, "how can anyone else?"

"I suppose you're right," Gerald assented gloomily.

The place had become very crowded, indeed. A small orchestra was playing in the far corner. Several unattached young ladies, who preserved an air of languid indifference towards the company generally, but seemed to be on remarkably good terms with the head waiter, had brought color into the little assembly. The large man who was reputed to be a Russian had called for pen and ink and, between the courses, was writing a letter. The maître d'hotel, who knew Gerald, stooped and whispered in his ear.

"Monsieur Zubin, the large gentleman you asked me about, my lord," he announced, "has just won two million francs over at the casino. Some of these people have followed him over. He must have the money in his pocket."

To Christopher the scene was a novel one, and he leaned forward in his seat. Two young ladies had seated themselves at the next table to the Russian, and the nearest was glancing tentatively at him now and then, without, however, evoking the slightest response. People from all quarters were whispering together and glancing toward him. The object of all these attentions continued to write his letter unmoved. Presently he called for a chasseur, thrust his letter into an envelope and addressed it. The boy made a prompt appearance and stood, cap in hand, waiting for his orders. The man who had just won two million francs handed him the letter, gave him some brief directions and a handful of coins. The chasseur saluted and hurried off. Gerald gripped his companion by the arm.

"Did you hear that, Chris?" he whispered.

"I heard nothing," Christopher replied.

"I saw the address, too," Gerald continued eagerly. "The letter is to Mademoiselle de Poniere, Villa Violette."

The dispatch of the letter was the signal for certain almost imperceptible advances on the part of those who had been watching the great man. The young lady at the next table leaned over and congratulated him on his good fortune, an overture which was received a little gruffly and without enthusiasm. A seedy-looking stranger, alid from his stool, leaned over the table and whispered a few words in the Russian's ear. He was a sandy-haired man, with puffy cheeks and a nervous manner. His clothes had once been well enough, but were now shabby. He had the gambler's restless air.

"Sir," he began, "forgive my addressing you."

"What do you want?" was the blunt rejoinder.

"I stood behind your chair in the rooms. I flatter myself that I brought you fortune, as I have brought it to many others. I willed you to win. I have lost as much at the tables as you have won. Will you grant me the loan of a meal?"

"Go to h—!" was the brutal reply. "I have nothing to do with cadgers."

The man staggered as though he had received a shock. He was used to rebuffs, but not such rebuffs as this. "Monsieur!" he stammered. "Perhaps five hundred or even two hundred francs."

"Not a sou, and be off. Do you want me to complain to the manager?"

The young man edged away. Gerald smiled as he saw him cross the floor.

"Horribly bad character, that," he remarked to Christopher. "I missed him here last season and asked where he was. They told me that he was in prison for stabbing his mistress. I suppose I shall get it in the neck, Chris, but I've got to talk to the old brute. I can't afford to miss an opportunity of speaking to some one who knows Pauline."

"I shouldn't, if I were you," Christopher advised. "You see he isn't in the humor to talk to anybody, and if there really is any mystery about the de Ponières, he won't care about being asked questions about them."

Gerald was, for him, however, determined. "The fellow's manner is brutal, but I believe he's a personage. I shall try my luck in a moment or so."

Gerald waited for several minutes, until he saw a shadow had entered upon another course. Then he leaned toward him.

"You are a Russian?" Gerald ventured.

"It is entirely my business of what nationality I am," was the cold reply. "Naturally," Gerald agreed.

"At the same time, we are all human. The man who wins a couple of millions here is a public character. You will probably find old ladies rubbing their five-franc pieces against your coat sleeves, as you enter the rooms."

"So long as they do not attempt to talk to me, I shall be content," was the curt retort.

"You are not exactly looking for acquaintances, I perceive," Gerald remarked.

"I have none here, nor do I desire any."

Gerald smiled. He had reached the point at which he had been aiming. "That," he observed, "is not strictly true. You have just dispatched a note to some ladies of my acquaintance."

Monsieur Zubin had so far met Gerald's tentative overtures with the cold rudeness of one who recognizes an equal. At his last words, however, a look almost of fury flashed into his face. He struck the table with his fist.

"I ought to have remembered the sort of people by whom I was likely to be surrounded here," he declared. "You, who look as though you ought to know better, cast sneaking glances over my shoulder to read the superscription of a private letter. What a riffraff!"

Gerald bit his lip. He kept his temper.

"I saw the address. I assure you, entirely by accident," he said. "I happen to be acquainted with one of the ladies or the name would not have attracted my notice. Mademoiselle de Poniere occupies the next villa to my father's."

Monsieur Zubin rose deliberately to his feet. One realized then his extraordinary height. He must have been at least six feet, four inches, and broad in proportion. Gerald, although he himself was considerably over average height, seemed like a child by his side.

"If you mention their names again," he threatened, "I shall throw you out of the place."

Gerald looked him over for a moment, unmoved but intensely curious. The mystery of Mademoiselle de Poniere had only been increased by this chance meeting.

"Pray sit down," he begged. "You are making every one uneasy. I have no wish to quarrel with you. I simply took you for an ordinary human being."

The Russian resumed his seat. Gerald called for his bill.

During their short walk to the Sporting club, where the two young men had arranged to spend the rest of the evening, Christopher endeavored to bring the conversation round to the subject of Myrtle.

"It is time," he insisted, "that we did something a little more definite about Myrtle. You don't take her seriously enough, Gerald."

"In what way?" "She told me this afternoon that you had promised to take her to one of your supper parties."

Gerald was not altogether at his ease.

"It was rather a rash promise," he admitted, "but after all, why not? She'd create quite a sensation."

"That child's immediate future is a charge upon our honor," Christopher said sternly. "You and I know the class of young women you invite to your parties. She mustn't breathe the same atmosphere."

"Are you in love with Myrtle?" Gerald asked curiously.

Christopher leathed the question but he remained outwardly unperturbed.

"Myrtle is a child," he said. "It will be time enough to think of such things when she has become a woman. The one deadly and perilous certainty is that she is in love with you. Be careful, Gerald. You don't want to walk on the floor of hell."

They had reached the steps of the Sporting club. Gerald ran lightly up.

"My dear Chris," he said, turning around as he prepared to divest himself of his overcoat, "don't be a melodramatic ass. We're in the wrong at

A NEW DOCTRINE

For a number of years newspaper editorial writers and magazine writers have been showing signs of considerable distress because of the alleged movement from the farm to the large centers of population.

Most of the persons who have dis-couraged at length on the subject, so severely condemning those who leave the farm, were themselves, no doubt products of the soil, but with them, very naturally, it was a very personal matter.

Now comes to light a so-called new problem that is the direct reverse of what most of us have been led to believe was a national menace.

Dr. H. C. Taylor chief of the bureau of agricultural economics, U. S. department of agriculture, very boldly announced in a recent statement that too many farmers are a detriment to the nation.

Dr. Taylor declares that every farmer should insist upon a satisfactory standard of living and withdraw from agriculture when he is not able to maintain this living standard.

His reasons for this rather unusual stand are economic. He assumes that if a sufficient number of farmers are guided by this policy, the soil will be so depleted of tillers, the prices of farm products will rise to such a point, due to the reduced supply, which would increase the demand, that it will be possible to maintain the desired standard of living conditions.

The program sounds very good but like most laboratory theories is impractical of application because there is no way to regulate the movement. This process has already been at work, causing many farmers to forsake the land for the city because of inadequate returns.

When farming as an occupation becomes more remunerative, more men will remain on the farm, because farmers are on the same track all of us are—the thing the destitution guarantees for every American citizen. "Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

The greatest problem of summer is to find a place for all the truck you carried in vest pockets last winter.

Easy money is a lure that few can resist.

THE GREATEST LAND OWNER.

America's biggest landlord is Uncle Sam. He is in a class by himself when it comes to holding real estate. The lands that he owns or controls, although he has been giving them away for a century, still constitute an empire of the first magnitude, and their present value is almost impossible to calculate. The vastness of these conversations of his may be appreciated when it is said that the total is 431,000,000 acres, or about 875,000 square miles. Most of it—perhaps 97 per cent—is in California, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico. It is equal in area to France, Italy, the British Isles, Spain and Denmark combined and as large as 12 New Yorks, or 83 New Jerseys.

National forests cover 135,500,000 acres; 110,000,000 acres are grazing lands; 8,000,000 acres are national parks; 34,000,000 acres are Indian lands; 40,000,000 acres are government mineral lands, and 188,000,000 acres are public domain, or no man's land.

For years Uncle Sam's lands have been a source of worry and vexation to the people dwelling near them and it is now proposed to have a complete show-down as to their administration with a view of adopting some practical plan for their development and use.

PAPER FORTUNES

Advices from Germany indicate that the Stinnes fortune, supposed to be almost incalculable, has disappeared. Stinnes the elder a great coal baron manufacturer was the one man in Germany to see clearly that the paper mark would become valueless and that he must profit every time he exchanged it for something tangible. The more heavily a property was mortgaged the better he liked it because the mortgages were payable in paper marks. In this manner he built up a tremendous fortune—on paper. But when the depreciation of the mark and the virtual repudiation of all bonds and mortgages, public and private credit and liquid capital had disappeared. The great industrial structure was like an engine without fuel, and disintegration was inevitable.

THE COAL STRIKE

The coal strike will proceed as usual. The government will not intervene, at present at least, because it is practically helpless, and because both sides to the wage controversy seem to be pleased over the prospect of unloading an immense surplus. Neither is it at all probable that the government will be able to prevent an increase in the retail prices. All previous efforts in this direction have failed and the public has paid the bill—and then some.

There is a remedy for these conditions, to be sure, but so long as the general public is dominated by general apathy why should anyone worry?

The operators feel it their duty to protect the dear public from 10 cents per ton higher wages, but lose all interest in the matter when it becomes a question of receiving 50 cents a ton additional. Many millions will be added to the treasury.

SITTING ON THE PORCH

Some years ago, the favorite sport of summer evenings was to sit on the front porch, enjoy the cooling air, watch the folks who drove by, and gossip with the neighbors. Perhaps the young crowd of those days would get out their banjos and sing college songs.

Still further back, this would have been considered wasteful of time by the hard workers of those serious days, who found every moment filled with duties. The sitting on the porch habit would seem to have been at its height about 25 years ago, before automobiles and movies occupied so much of the time.

Today with so many forms of amusement awaiting us, the sporting crowd say that sitting on the porch has not got kick enough in it. But for many of the folks who have done a good day's work, it is pleasure enough just to be quiet, read the newspaper, catch a bit of inspiration from sky and foliage, and enjoy the pleasure of idleness for an hour.

THE SUMMER HOME

Some families in Boone county who make it their custom to take a vacation in summer, are constantly debating whether to buy or build a little cottage in some pleasant resort, or to depend for their pleasure on trips about the country and visits to hotels and boarding houses.

Many of them dislike to tie themselves down to going to one place regularly. They enjoy going hither and thither. Yet there is a great deal of pleasure in owning your own little shack, where you do not have to dress up daily to satisfy the critical eyes of hotel guests, and where you can make permanent friendships among the summer visitors.

If there are children in the family, they will vote for the summer cottage. They will want it in some place where the popular sports can be enjoyed. Youngsters miss so nothing if they can't get a chance at these summer outings close to nature.

LET'S PLAY FAIR

Our "war party" insists that we must have more money, more "gadgets" and more battleships, submarines and planes, and they will probably have their way about it, because it is a habit. On the other hand if we expended the cost of just one battleship in preparation for peace we might get somewhere.

Wouldn't it be a good idea to give one half of our funds for war preparation, and the other half for peace preparation, create a Peace Department in the Cabinet, and give both sides a fair deal? This is a Democratic government, in which the majority rules—and surely more than a majority would endorse this plan.

THE AVERAGE GIRL

A prominent police woman denies that the morals of the modern girl are going from bad to worse. She believes the average girl is a whole lot better than she ever was. Better equipped to face the world and take her own part; better equipped to be a good house wife to some man or to go it alone, whichever is to be her part; better equipped to enjoy life and make it have the most meaning for her.

We hope she is right, but it sure has been a long and sudden leap in the dark.

An excellent crop of tobacco is being housed in Boone county. The acreage is believed to be short of last year but any deficiency in this respect will be made up in increased poundage per acre. The crop has matured in from 70 to 80 days, from 10 to 20 days less time than is usually required to make a crop from setting to housing. This is due to unusual weather conditions which have prevailed since late in June.

DISSATISFIED WITH TOBACCO ELECTION

Farmers Desire Another Meeting Of Poolers on Sept. 5th

At the meeting of the members of the Association held at Burlington on August 22, 1925 for the purpose of selecting delegates, only forty-six persons were present and at least four of these were non-residents of Boone County.

The election of the chairman of the meeting and the nomination of the delegates were both done by a vote of twenty-four persons, of which the four non-residents formed a part.

We believe the action taken by the meeting does not fairly represent the sentiment of the eighteen hundred poolers of Boone County and therefore urge all poolers to meet at the Court House on Saturday September 5th, 1925 at 2 p. m. for a general discussion as to what action should be taken by the poolers of Boone County.

Signed:—J. C. Bedinger, James Elmore, John Connelly, C. C. Sleat, Van Hill, J. H. Stevens, J. E. (Bert) Gaines B. H. Berkshire.

BOONE COUNTY BOY IN THE K. I. O. ELIMINATION GAME

Ordinarily the result of a base ball game in the K. I. O. League would not command space in a Boone county paper for this county has no team representation in that league. But in this particular instance with Lawrenceburg and Ludlow, both of which are neighboring towns represented in the big series, and Leslie Ryle, a home county boy, on the Lawrenceburg club, it is no more than proper to publish a brief account of these games. Especially so since it was so evident last Sunday that the result of the Lawrenceburg-Gardner-Harvey game would have been decidedly reversed if the entire Lawrenceburg team had acquitted itself as Boone county's representative did, both behind the bat and with the bat.

The Recorder does not say this boastfully, but it does say it unhesitatingly, that "Les" Ryle seemed to be the only player on the Lawrenceburg club not visibly affected by stage-fright before the large crowd. This with the possible exception of Lawrenceburg's pitching ace, "Hick" Farrell. The only thing which might indicate nervousness on his part was a tendency to wildness, as he walked four and hit one batter twice, otherwise he has copatively cool and pitched a game which should have won with decent support.

Al Leske, born and reared in Lawrenceburg and for many years a semi-pro sensation around Cincinnati, was in the box for Gardner-Harvey and pitched a beautiful game—he clearly demonstrated his ability before his home town folks. The Lawrenceburg management did not prepare for the crowd that was on hand to witness the game, the enormity of which was freely predicted on every hand. One could have expected a crowd of five thousand in view of the fact that the other elimination game was played at Springfield, Ohio. Numbers of persons who purchased special reserved seats on the race track in front of the stand were compelled to take the sun and stand up because the overflow crowd was permitted to block their line of vision.

The Gardner won the game by a 6 to 4 score when they scored two runs in the first half of the ninth aided by some rank misplays by the Lawrenceburg club.

Ludlow scored three runs in the tenth to win from the crack Springfield club by a 3 to 0 score. This was accomplished on the home lot of Springfield at that. Next Sunday Lawrenceburg will visit Ludlow with their backs, to the wall, as it is either win or down and out with them.

A large portion of the crowd at this game will be from Boone county with allegiance pretty evenly divided between the two clubs.

The attendance at the Lawrenceburg game was estimated at 5,000 while that at Springfield was called 3,000.

DeWitt Jones, Jr., and wife of Detroit, Michigan, were visiting Miss Eunice Willis for a few days the past week, after which they passed on to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Willis for a few days. DeWitt is the eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar DeWitt Jones, who are well known in this section of Boone county.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Carpenter entertained a few guests at dinner last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Rice, Mr. Ben Corbin of Erlanger; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Shearer of Mrs. Kate Corbin of Covington; Cecil Gaines and family and Miss Amelia Corbin of Limaburg; Mrs. Alice Snyder of Burlington and Mrs. Mary Jane Snyder of Detroit, Mich.

JOHN J. HOWE GOES TO MICHIGAN MONDAY

Attends Liquor Trial in Burlington Before Leaving

Commonwealth's Atty. John J. Howe is in Detroit this week attending the 48th annual meeting of the American Bar Association of which he is a member. He will also visit his alma mater, University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, on the 5th inst., when the new Lawyers' Club will be dedicated. This club is the largest law library and laboratory in existence and was made possible by the millions of William B. Cook, the great authority on corporations, who is a graduate of the Ann Arbor Law School.

Before leaving for Detroit Mr. Howe on Monday attended a special term of the Boone Quarterly Court at Burlington where he assisted in the prosecution of Thomas Newcomb and two others caught recently near Richmond, with a 250-gallon still, 50 pounds of yeast, 1500 gallons of sugar and about 2600 gallons of mash. Newcomb was fined $300 and thirty days in jail, while the others were set down with $100 fine and thirty days each.

BASE BALL GAMES

A slight mix-up in engagements caused a double header at Bellevue last Saturday afternoon. The Cincinnati Cardinals, a "pick-up" team of semi-pros, and amateurs, and the H. Neuer Glass Co., both showed up for a game. Both were accommodated and administered a gentle beating by the home team.

The score of the Cardinal was 2 to 1, while the final decision of the aftermath fell to Bellevue by the score of 5 to 3. Rack's home run decided the second affair with two on base.

The H. Neuer Glass Co., will be Bellevue's guests again next Saturday.

Hebron administered a healthy wallop to Florence last Saturday afternoon, the score being 13 to 1. Florence plays at Petersburg next Saturday while Hebron will entertain the Coco Colas on Labor Day. Chicken dinner and chicken supper will be served to the crowd.

Petersburg journeyed to Dillsboro Indiana, last Sunday and administered a sound wallop to that club by a 13 to 3 score. Berkshire pitched for Petersburg, Keim pitching the last two innings. Dillsboro will play at Petersburg Labor Day.

BURLINGTON P. T. A. NOTES

The Burlington P. T. A. is planning a dedicatory service when the new addition is completed. A copper box, covered by a bronze plate, is to be placed in the wall, containing names of graduates, a history of the school and other interesting data. Wouldn't it be fine to put our note canceled, in the box too? We want the names and correct addresses of all graduates. Please send them to Mrs. Julius Smith, Burlington, Ky. Also any item of news concerning any of our former pupils.

The election of officers is in September.

Mrs. A. B. Renaker has charge of meetings and all work to be done this month.

The P. T. A. urges all parents to make sure their children are physically fit before entering school. Make a trip to the dentist, to the doctor and to the specialist if necessary, but see that your child is not entering school, physically handicapped. If your parents will do this we will have a far better school, interruptions because of sickness and contagious diseases.

Clarence Kirkpatrick and family, of Indianapolis, Ind., spent the latter part of last week with his relatives in Burlington, and met with quite a number of his boyhood friends who were glad to meet him once more. Forty years ago Clarence left his old home town with a pair of hands and a willing heart, and by hard work he has made quite a success in the business world—he now being Superintendent of the City Gas Co., of that city at a very handsome salary.

After a week's visit with his sisters in Burlington, Thomas Cowen returned to his home at Memphis, Tenn., last Friday evening. Before returning home he called at the Recorder's office and paid his dues for another year, so as to keep pace with the doings of his old home town, when, nothing preventing, he expects to come to his home land in the melancholy autumn, when the leaves, all tinted and rain-bow-colored are falling along the way, covering, as it were, the landscape scenes of boyhood with a land-seed of kindness to bloom when the summer days come again.

FARMERS INTEND TO SOW WINTER WHEAT

Vast Increase in Acreage of Winter Rye and Wheat

An intended increase of 4,094,000 acres or 9.7 per cent, in the acreage of winter wheat to be sown this fall compared with the acreage sown last fall, is indicated by reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from 24,000 farmers. These reports were mailed about August 1 and show the acreage with those individual farmers sowed on their own farms last fall and the acreage which they intended to sow this fall.

If the acreage sown to winter wheat in the United States this fall is increased 9.7 per cent, as compared with last year, the total sown acreage would be 46,411,000 acres. Last fall 42,317,000 acres were sown to winter wheat and 32,713,000 acres were left for harvest, there having been an abandonment of 22.5 per cent.

RYE.—The reports received indicate that the farmers reporting now intend to sow 21.0 per cent more acres of winter rye than they sowed last fall. It should be borne in mind, however, that a year ago the farmers reporting intended to sow 14.1 per cent more winter rye than they sowed the previous fall but the area of rye left for harvest in the United States this year is now estimated at only 0.3 per cent over the area harvested last year. Two years ago, (August 1923) the farmers who reported intended to plant 9 per cent less rye than they had sown the previous fall, but the area actually harvested in 1924 is estimated to have been 13.3 per cent less than the area harvested the preceding season.

REV. BUTLER ARVIN PREACHED AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUN.

Rev. Butler Arvin of Lafayette, Georgia, who has been spending his vacation with his sister Mrs. W. Campbell, of Burlington, occupied the pulpit of the local Baptist church last Sunday evening. He also favored the congregation with a vocal solo. Rev. J. W. Campbell and a number of his Bullittsburg membership were in attendance at the service.

Next Sunday will mark the opening of the revival services and Rev. Wood issues the following statement to his membership and the community in general:

The revival meeting of the Burlington Baptist church will begin next Sunday, Sept. 6th. The pastor will do the preaching. Rev. John G. Dickson of Colorado will conduct the song and devotional services. Brother Dickson is a good singer and a fine Christian. He will be a great asset to the meeting.

It is requested that all who read this and believe in prayer will pray for us. You are cordially invited to attend the services. There will be preaching Sunday morning and night and every night during the week. Come and worship with us.

A. B. Wood, Pastor

READY FOR WORK

Prof. C. M. Hook, principal of the Boone County High School, and Mrs. Hook, also an instructor in the institution returned to Burlington Monday evening ready to resume their duties when school opens on the 14th. Prof. Hook has been a student at the University of Kentucky during the summer months.

WOMAN'S DAY AT STATE FAIR

On Tuesday, September 15, 1925, will be Woman's Day, Retail Merchants Day and Market Street Merchants Day at the Kentucky State Fair. The Executive Committee of Woman's Day, in co-operation with these organizations, will on that day conduct a "STYLE REVIEW" showing the progress of woman's dress from as far back as possible to the present day. The merchants will furnish present-day costumes and the women throughout the State will have the privilege of furnishing the early costumes. If you have any costume, which was worn by your ancestors, you will want to enter the contest.

There will be handsome prizes awarded for various classes of costumes to be announced later.

Mrs. Bridgewater and children after several weeks visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler, returned to her home at Akron, Ohio, last Saturday morning. Mr. Bridgewater came down for a few days visit and accompanied them home.

Mrs. Lavina Kirkpatrick entertained Sunday at dinner C. L. Kirk and family, of Indiana; Calvert Kirk and family J. E. Froehlich and family of Ludlow, Mr. and Mrs. Albea and daughter of Cincinnati, Miss Kate Kirkpatrick and Mr. Reese of Cincinnati.

SENTENCED TO PEN FOR TWO YEARS

This Is The First Conviction Under The Rash-Gullion Act

Last week in the Carroll Circuit Court, Bryant Hunt, charged with second violation of the State prohibition law, after former conviction, was found guilty and his punishment fixed at two years in the penitentiary. According to Commonwealth's Attorney John J. Howe, this is the first trial of a felony charge under the Rash-Gullion Act in this judicial district, and the action of the jury dispels the oft suggested idea that it would be impossible to send bootleggers to the penitentiary from State courts.

Willie Russell, joint offender with Hunt in this as well as the former charge, failed to appear in court and his bail bond was forfeited. At the time of his first conviction last December, Hunt executed a peace bond in the sum of one thousand dollars that he would not violate the liquor law for a year and proceedings will be instituted against his sureties. Hunt, along with three other prisoners, was taken to Frankfort on Saturday by Sheriff Robertson.

SERIES OF ARTICLES ON STONE MOUNTAIN

Beginning next week, this paper will run a series of four articles, written by Walter W. Schuch, of Cincinnati, describing the marvelous Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial project. This stupendous undertaking—an eternal page of granite, upon which is being carved an everlasting monument to the heroism of the soldiers of the Confederacy—cannot be described, for nowhere else exists such a mountain. Stone Mountain, as its name implies, is literally a mountain of stone, eight thousand feet long, seven miles around the base, and a mile to the summit. It is the largest body of granite in the world. The foundations underlie almost the entire state of Georgia. It is located at Atlanta.

God created Stone Mountain and none but God can destroy it. In the dawn of Creation it was born; until the end of Creation it will endure as a monument to the valiant soldier of the South.

Sixty years after the halls of Congress rang with denunciation of the Soldier of the South, a resolution was introduced in Congress by members of the party whose policies triumphed over the Southern Cause, to mint a half dollar coin as a "Memorial to the Valor of the Soldier of the South." This resolution was passed unanimously without a dissenting word of opposition or a dissenting vote in both the House and Senate. Five million of these Memorial Half Dollars are now being sold at a premium of fifty cents as a means of financing the great Memorial to the Confederacy. Full significance of this rare coin will be explained by the author of this series.

Augustus Lukeman, one of the foremost sculptors of America, has been engaged to chisel the Stone Mountain Memorial. Mr. Lukeman's qualifications are firmly established by such masterpieces as, the equestrian statue of Bishop Francis Asbury, the great Methodist pioneer in Washington, D. C., a Confederate Grandmother at Raleigh, N. C., Franklin Pierce, Concord, N. H., Memorial to Soldiers of Brooklyn, N. Y., who died in World War, General Clegg, at Reading, Pa., The American Doughboy at Brooklyn, N. Y., Kit Carson at Trinidad, Colorado, The Birdman at Washington, D. C., and many other sculptural masterpieces. A full episode will be devoted on the life and works of Mr. Lukeman in this most interesting series of articles.

Richard Stephens and wife, of Huntington, Ind., after two weeks' visit with relatives and friends in Boone county, returned to their home last Tuesday. Dick was in Burlington on Thursday of last week meeting and shaking hands with old friends. It has been 35 years since he left Boone county.

LIFE IS CHEAP

Life is a cheap commodity in these days of homicide, matricide, patricide and just plain murder.

A Chicago woman paid a gunman $400 to kill her husband because he abused her daughter by another marriage. The gunman paid $200 to another gunman to have the victim slain and the second gunman's wife stole the money and spent it in Milwaukee.

This is the second story that is not uncommon. The price of life has become so cheap that men will take it undilutely for a few paltry dollars.

It is a sorry commentary on our boasted civilization that we have produced such specimens of human life.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

From Recorder Files of 1895

Next Friday and Saturday is the Boone County Harvest Home. It will be well attended and the exhibition will be good.

The Burlington and Petersburg colored ball teams played here last Saturday, the score being 27 to 4 in favor of the Burlington team.

The Bellevue boys came up Monday and defeated the Burlington ball team 15 to 14 in a ten inning game. "Podge" Alloway was in the box for Bellevue.

Sheriff Roberts left early yesterday morning with Robt. Bates, who was given one year in the penitentiary at the recent term of the Boone Circuit Court.

The primary election passed off very quietly all over the county, last Saturday, and exactly the same number of votes were cast as were cast for Cleveland in 1892.

The Greenup Gazette thus enters a protest: A Kentuckian has been fined $100 for squeezing a woman's hand. A man in Kentucky no longer has as much liberty as a corset.

Master Dudley Blythe was run over by a two-horse sled one day last week. He was riding on the front part of the sled, driving the mules, when he fell off with the result above stated. How he escaped without injury is a miracle.

B. H. Adams, nominated last Saturday by the Democrats for County Clerk, has been sworn in to the people of this county need any introduction. He has recently visited every house and seen every baby in the county, and his willing countenance will be remembered by many who saw him for the first time after he concluded to accept the nomination to him for County Clerk.

There has been considerable interest manifested in the voting for the handsomest young lady in the county during the past week. The ballots have come in pretty rapidly. A long array of old Boone's handsome young ladies have been voted for, and Miss Annie Rice, the handsome and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Rice, of Union, has captured the prize offered by the Recorder. She won by a good lead, which was gratifying to the many friends who took an active interest in her behalf.

Last Friday afternoon as Mrs. LeGrand Gaines and her little niece were coming from Bellevue, the horse attached to the buggy was frightened by some cows running through the bushes near the side of the pike near Thomas Goodridge's gate. The buggy was turned over and Mrs. Gaines quite badly hurt. Fortunately the whistle broke and the horse became detached from the vehicle, or the two occupants would have been hurt. Mrs. Gaines was taken to Dr. E. Castleman's and Dr. Furnish sent for. The little girl received only slight injuries.

Uttinger—A number of farmers have bought reapers and mowers from the wreck of the Str. Longfellow. They got them for $10 each. Some say that corn will sell at 60 cents per bushel this fall.

Petersburg—John McCune, a young butcher of Dillsboro, is spreading the week here and calling on one of our good looking girls. Just keep your eye on him, he will be imitating our friend Gus Parsons.

At the postoffice election in Petersburg last Saturday, the vote was as follows:

A. B. Parker..... 154
Mrs. Mary E. Walton..... 52
Parker's majority..... 102

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Our old and faithful correspondent B. A. Floyd and wife, of Gunpowder, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary when about 50 of their friends surprised them last Sunday by alighting in at noon with the usual number of proverbially well filled baskets at the noon hour.

Suffice it to say that everyone in the neighborhood was there, and in good spirits, for this venerable gentleman knows not what an enemy is therefore all are his friends.

Mr. Floyd has been the Recorder's ever faithful and efficient correspondent from Gunpowder since the memory of any man runneth not to the contrary and we heartily join his host of friends in the fervent hope that he and his good wife will celebrate many more wedding anniversaries.

DETOURS

One of the sorrows of the automobile touring party is created by detours. The most cheerful group of people, who were very happy as they bowed along through a pretty country, man suffer an entire change of sentiment when that ominous warning sign appears in the middle of the road: "Detour. Road Closed. No Passing."

They may previously have growled because of defective roads and found fault because the authorities of Kentucky had not repaired the same. But if the road is closed for the very repairs they demanded, then they begin to growl over the hardship of the detour, with loss of time and some discomfort.

But the only possible way to keep the roads up is to reconstruct them as they need it, and which ever way the thing is done, the motoring public will growl. If they are allowed to use one side of the road while work is taking place on half of the width, then they will complain about the delay to traffic and the rough going, and if the road is completely closed, then they find fault with the bad condition of the detour.

But these parties that are forced to go a long way around their back roads may be well repaid. They see new and pretty bits of country, the scenes along the main roads apt to become more or less conventionalized, while those along the obscure side roads may be more charmingly natural and picturesque.

Human experience also has detours. We may fret when some obstacle makes it impossible for us to follow our regular programs of work or enjoyment, and give up for a time and do something entirely different. But those detours in our daily habits frequently prove very interesting and rewarding, and give us new points of view and make suggestions useful for our development.

BUILDING

To build something is a law of the great infinite nature from which we come.

Every man is a sort of coral insect at heart. Even a little child of four piles up his blocks into a structure and then says—"Oh, Mummy, come and see what I have made!"

To build a happy home—that is a great deal. That is the unit. That is the least that any man can do.

To help to build a town—that is a larger job, that very few are strong enough to do.

The aggressiveness, industry, history and romance of Burlington are intermingled with the trials, difficulties, struggles and achievements of pioneers who have created industry, built homes, churches, schools, public institutions and utilities, beautified the town and made it a HOME for their children, their children's children, and the rest of us. The road has been rough and rocky, but civility, perseverance and sacrifice have overcome many obstacles and we all take pride in the work of their heads and hands.

If you abolish or cripple individual business as is now proposed by chain stores and mail order concerns, you can still have plenty of politics but you can't have much, if any civilization.

They don't carry your account when you need credit; don't contribute to municipal expenses; never put a brick in additional smoke stacks; never subscribe to charitable affairs or community chests; have no pride or interest in schools, libraries, Y. M. C. A.'s or public enterprises. Their only interest is to take out of town the dollars other loyal men are trying to bring into town.

The inevitable result will be a dull dead place—a small cog-wheel in a gigantic grinding machine.

You who are stockholders in the community organization by reason of residence in Burlington must give this question serious consideration and do it NOW.

POOR BUILDING

Complaints are heard in many places about the lack of thorough work being done in a large number of the houses that are being put up. It is said that some of those erected during the recent years are already showing serious defects.

The average person really knows very little about the building game. The majority of people have not attempted to build houses for themselves, and when one desires to own a home, it is more common to buy one already built. Consequently there are many who would not know the difference if defective material were being used or there was a lack of thorough work.

This should not discourage people who would like to build a home for themselves, as there are plenty of honest men in the business who will help one put up a well made house. It does not pay to skimp on good work in anything built to last like a dwelling.

PROGRESSIVE COUNTRY FOLKS.

The idea has been held by many that country town people are not progressive. The exact opposite is the truth. There is no class in the community that is naturally more progressive than the country people.

They get a progressive point of view by their reading habits. The average country town family reads more than the average city family, and when they read, it is more apt to be good stuff, substantial and informative newspapers and magazines rather than silly story papers or worse. They know what is going on in the world. If you want to know about modern progress, ask the country folks rather than the city people.

GIRLS SHOULD TRAIN THEMSELVES

In these days of shifting fortunes we have the new poor as well as the new rich, and no woman knows how soon she may be called upon to earn her own bread and butter or starve. If she has been taught how to do this, losing her money is merely an inconvenience to her. But if she does not know how to earn a dollar, it is a tragedy.

There has been a most decided decline and fall in matrimony and home life, and it is foolish for girls to think that they have the same chance of marrying as their mothers had. If girls get a professional education and make enough money to indulge herself in the luxuries that women love, marriage becomes to her merely an incident in life, not the whole thing. The world to her is full of desirable things besides wedding rings.

Being able to make your own living sets you free. Economic independence is the world. As long as you must look to another for your food and clothes you must bend your will to his. But when you can stand on your own feet you can snap your fingers in the face of the world and let it where it goes.

If the right man comes along, well and good, but it is not wise to take any sort of a poor stick as a prop to lean upon.

Fit yourself to earn your own bread and butter, and cake, too. And remember that it is efficiency that pulls down the pay envelope.

LEARNING TO SWIM

There was a time when only a minority of the people learned to swim. Women who could do it were very much the exception, owing to the long and encumbering bathing suits they had in those days.

Now it is regarded as one of the essentials that both boys and girls learn an art that makes for both safety and health. Probably the majority of them do so, but there must still be a large number in the cities who do not have easy access to the swimming places, who have not acquired this form of skill.

Communities should make it easier to learn this necessary art, by providing artificial pools if there are not suitable swimming places handy. Many parents are so fearful of having their children go near the water, that their youngsters never learn, and consequently get into trouble later as a result of unfamiliarity with the water.

AUTOMOBILE RACING

Automobile racing is no doubt a very fine sport, but those who think they and their cars excel in it, should adjourn their competitions to some public race track, and not try it on the highways. One of the modern road perils in Kentucky comes from the fast crowd who thoroughly enjoy getting out on the road, and seeing how many cars they can get ahead of.

They have no particular desire to save their time, but it gives them satisfaction to be able to distance anything on the road. Some of them take special pleasure in mooning along at a slow rate, and inviting some car to pass them, and then step on the gas and show that it can't be done.

It may be said that these folks take their own chances. But some of them become so absorbed in trying to get ahead of a car that refusing to let them pass, that they fail to pay attention to a driver who comes along in the opposite direction, and they may force him into the ditch.

If you want your home town to advance, you don't accomplish much toward it at a slow rate, but you money to build up business in some big city.

Some folks in Boone county who object to having their names in the paper, will look through the sheet quite carefully to see if they are there all right.

VACATION VALUES

Lives there a man who doesn't view with sadness the day that he returns from vacation to take up the daily grind once more?

He thinks of the happy care-free days he enjoyed, with no responsibilities, no worries for his troubled brain, and the undisturbed nights of restful sleep.

Some folks look upon the return from vacation with dark forebodings, much as they do when they arise on a sunless morning, with no enthusiasm for the day's work.

But vacations help to throw off the depression that comes with monotonous work. They give the tired muscles opportunity to relax, the jagged nerves a rest and the fagged brain a chance to begin to function normally.

The return to work may seem irksome, but the feeling soon passes, because the daily routine of the business man's life has had an opportunity to recuperate.

Vacations have value. They send us home with a new appreciation of our job, and better work results.

THE FARMER AND POWER

The use of power, together with labor-saving machinery, has greatly benefited the farmer, and he has not been slow to see its value in increasing his capacity to till the soil.

The average farm worker now cares for approximately three times as many acres of crops as did the worker of seventy-five years ago, illustrating that the farmer has taken the advantage of opportunities to improve his condition.

The farmer ranks second only to the railroads in the use of power and he does not depend entirely any longer upon the patient plow horse to get things done.

Tractors provide seventeen per cent of the power used on American farms, the United States department of agriculture has computed but animal power is still sixty per cent of that utilized. Although electrical installations account for only 5.5 per cent of farm power, this form is rapidly growing.

The old-fashioned wind mill still furnishes a little more than one per cent of the farm power in America, but it is gradually giving way to more up-to-date methods.

Almost every city and town in the country has its list of natives who have made high marks in the big city. Organizations are formed to encourage local industries and to bring in new industries. But one never hears of any community holding a special meeting of its Chamber of Commerce in an effort to prevent a superior young man from leaving.

Bright men and women move out quietly and unobtrusively and are not until they are heralded as business leaders in other communities. Communities are anxious to have their towns advertised by students and women by offering them suitable jobs. If a number of this kind be done this town might show a remarkable natural growth.

For three months in succession, sales of ordinary life insurance in the United States in July were 16 per cent ahead of the corresponding months last year. The figures show the very large total of $658,000,000 of new paid business in the country as a whole. So widespread was the evidence of good business conditions that practically every state in the Union showed a gain over the record of a year ago.

Some communities never bother the motoring public by closing up the roads by detours, as they never do anything to the roads.

May not be without significance that the words "jazz" and "jag" sound alike and seem to come from the same root.

Arizona wants 15,000 cotton pickers. Heretofore this labor has been obtained from Mexico, being returned after the harvest, but the new immigration laws prohibit this system.

New South Wales pensions all widows one pound per week—about $4.86. The Australian government gives the mother of every baby born five pounds, and the gift is not refused even by the well-to-do.

The average income of the American people is $1,000 per year for every man, woman and child. This sounds like real money, but the trouble is about 85 per cent of us actually get about $250 a year.

Towns that can't spend a few dollars improving the ditches along the sides of the roads, are usually the same ones who later have to spend hundreds repairing the damage done by washouts when the rains come.

A German expert is constructing an airplane said to be capable of a speed of 400 miles an hour. It will be entered in the races for the big trophy next October.

The contents of the bottles enjoyed by the sports would seem to make enough trouble, without throwing said bottles on the streets to puncture automobile tires.

After the motor tourists burn up the road getting to a place, they almost get smashed up hurrying to get out of it.

MRS. LILLIAN WALTERS IS AGAIN FREE

MAY FACE A THIRD CHARGE IN EDDYVILLE PRISON GUARD SLAYING

Admits Plot in Trial Testimony—Is Third Time Woman Has Been Tried Companion to Face Court.

Eddyville, Ky.—Mrs. Lillian Walters, indicted on three charges of being an accessory in the murder of three Eddyville penitentiary guards, said in real life a prison break, went free on the second charge. A jury of Christian County, men, who began deliberations at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, but received until morning because of the illness of one, returned the acquittal verdict after resuming consideration of the case.

In May, Mrs. Walters was acquitted of aiding in the murder of Hodge Cunningham, one of the guards. This time the charge was aiding in the murder of William M. Gilbert. She yet is to face trial on a charge of aiding in the murder of V. B. Mattingly.

When the jury announced its verdict, Mrs. Walters, wife of the leader of the prison break, was moved to tears. She had been in charge in the prison of the inmates of one, an associate matron of the Joseph L. Edmund Settlement House, who was appointed by the Court to stay with the accused woman while the jury deliberated.

Vigilant arguments by prosecution and defense attorneys were concluded recently. The jury had begun its work of deciding the case when one member was taken ill.

It was the third time the accused woman had stood trial, as in the first case, a hung jury resulted at the initial trial in April, 1924.

Whether she will face trial another time is a matter of speculation. Jim Sparks, all, C. H. Knudson, indicted with her, will go before the court immediately, and it is believed here the outcome of his trial will in a large measure affect the third charge against Mrs. Walters.

Mrs. Walters admitted during her trial that she and Sparks conspired with her husband, Ted Walters, while he was in the penitentiary, to smuggle pistols and cartridges to him and also stated on the witness stand that the weapons and ammunition were taken in the defense was based on lack of homicidal intent.

Walters and two of his confederates, Lawrence Griffith and Harry Ferland, killed the three guards in an outbreak October 3, 1923.

The three prisoners, after struggling down the three guards, barricaded themselves in the prison dining room and were besieged by guards and State troops for four days. On the fourth day a guardsman entered the dining room and found the convicts dead.

TWO DIE IN GAS FUMES

Ashland Youth, 14, Lowered into Well Smells Gas Calls For Aid; Father Dies in Rescue, Son Dies Later

Ashland, Ky.—A father of seven children was killed in a vain attempt to rescue his eldest son from natural gas fumes which had been released by a charge of dynamite he was using in digging a water well for his family's convenience at his home, one mile from here.

The father is William Moore, 38 years old, laborer for the Smet Steel Company, who with his young son, Hubert, 14, has been employing spare time from his work for the past month in attempting to reach a natural spring nearby his home.

After attaining a depth of twenty-three feet in the well, Moore set off a charge of dynamite to loosen rock he believed was obstructing his task. Immediately after the shot, he let down his son by means of a rope into the well to fan away the smoke and fumes of the concussion.

When Hubert reached the floor of the well he smelled gas fumes and called to his father to pull him out, that he was being overcome. The request was immediately obeyed but after clinging to the rope about half way up, he collapsed and fell to the bottom.

After calling to William Cooksey, a resident nearby, Moore started to climb down the well to rescue his child, the rope being secured to a wooden post on the brink of the well. On Cooksey's arrival, it is said, he had fastened the rope about the boy's waist, and in this fashion the latter was brought to the surface in an unconscious condition.

L. Richardson, County Coroner, after an investigation pronounced the deaths due to asphyxiation by the fumes from a natural gas well, a hundred yards distant.

Moore is survived by his wife and six other children.

Two Men Injured By Explosion—Covington, Ky.—Two men were burned and the plant of the Petroleum Refining Company in Latonia was badly damaged as the result of an explosion, said to have been caused by a gas leak in a gas line. Fire that followed the explosion seriously threatened the plant, but efforts by Covington firemen kept the blaze under control and from reaching stores of gasoline and oils.

Charles Due and Clyde Smith, employees, were badly burned when the explosion occurred.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Covington—George F. Egan, 33, an employee of the postoffice, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $247.

Ashland—William Long, 50, a junk dealer, was killed at Catlettsburg when he was struck by Chesapeake and Ohio passenger train No. 8, east-bound.

Frankfort—With but 1 point actual supremacy, Ed Pfeiffer, Southern team champion, defeated Sid Appel, former State champion, both of Louisville, in exhibition play at the camp of Edmund Watson Taylor.

Greensburg—The 3-year-old child of T. J. Gorin, ex-sheriff of Green County, while playing with matches ignited its clothes. Before aid could reach it, more than one-half of the body was burned. It is lying unconscious and there is but little if any hope of its recovery.

Columbia—News has reached here of a distressing death that recently occurred in the Big Renox section of Cumberland County. Mrs. Lula Mae Taylor, who was the wife of Earnest Taylor, committed suicide by bringing a bullet thru her heart. Why she chose to take her life is a mystery.

Winchester—The new rural school at Pilotview, Clark County, will be dedicated with formal exercises. This structure, modern in every detail, was completed only recently. It is situated in the center of a beautiful two-acre campus, and is one of this vicinity's most attractive schools.

Eddyville—Jim Sparks, tried as an accessory in the outbreak at the Eddyville prison in October, 1923, was found guilty by a jury in the Lyon County Circuit Court, and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. The conviction of Sparks is the first growing out of the prison outbreak.

Whitesburg—The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company has closed a deal whereby it becomes the owners of the Whitesburg Telephone Company with lines in Whitesburg and Letcher County and the Eastern Kentucky Home Telephone Company known as the Stookey lines in Pikeville and Pike County.

Greensburg—Articles of incorporation have been filed here incorporating the Green County Fair Association, and was being purchased at Sardinia, Ford on Green River, one mile from town, for fair grounds, and a crew is now at work building a race track, stables and other necessary buildings for a fair advertised to be held in October of this year.

Bowling Green—A large stock barn owned by J. Mont Downey, a farmer, situated near Koodburn, 12 miles southwest of Bowling Green, on the Nashville road, was destroyed by fire. The origin is unknown. The owner also lost some oats, farming implements, and J. C. Pike, a neighbor, had a separator which was destroyed. Downey did not carry insurance.

Columbia—Aaron Rogers, who was a well known citizen of Adair County, was fatally injured by a falling tree near his home a few miles west of Columbia. Rogers and a helper were cutting timber for fire wood. They cut a large tree, which split up and kicked back, catching Rogers under it. Rogers lived about three hours. He leaves a wife who recently underwent an operation for cancer.

Ashland—Promising to remedy a condition that has been an embarrassment to Ashland industries, merchants and householders for several years, the Consolidated Power & Light Company has issued a statement from its Huntington office declaring that within a few months power line connections will be made with Ashland and Boyd County circuits which will provide more than 20,000 kilowatts, doubling the present supply of electrical energy available in this territory.

Carrollton—S. M. Lacedfield has resigned as Jailer of Carroll County and Judge B. L. Hardin has appointed Sheriff B. T. Robertson to fill the vacancy until a regular appointment can be made. Mr. Lacedfield is 38 years old, and is the only surviving Confederate Cavalryman in Carroll County. He was serving his third term as Jailer, and his resignation was caused by the work and risk of keeping and caring for ten to fifteen prisoners—mostly convicted of violations of the liquor laws—who are continuously making efforts at jail-breaking.

Revensburg—James Powell has been appointed traffic officer for the city of Irvine and Revensburg. He is ordered to arrest all violators who exceed fifteen miles an hour. Mr. Powell served as deputy sheriff of Basil County for a number of years.

Berea—M. E. Vaughan, for many years secretary of Berea College, editor of Mountain Work and member of the Kentucky Legislature, will give up his work here next October to go to Ashland, Ky., to take charge of a large brick corporation.

Apparently the only way to prevent people being run over at the railroad crossings, is for the trains to stop until the automobiles get by.

The modern housewife prefers a small home. She can perhaps see now why in the days when every one wanted a big house, the girls get their prejudice against house work.

Of the present population of the United States, it is estimated that about 40,000,000 are members of families in which automobiles are owned. This leaves about 60,000,000, not including inmates of public institutions, to patronize the railroads. Notwithstanding the growing transportation of freight by truck, the railroad freight loadings are highest in history. Passenger business, however, has declined, and the roads are beginning to realize that they must meet this competition by lower passenger rates.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dye and son, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Goodridge and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hossman, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Rouse and children, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Criger and children, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Tupman and children, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. SCHOOL NOTES

Our schools will open Sept. 14, all districts under the control and management of the County Board of Education.

The dealers in books will please arrange for a supply of books for their customers. There are no changes of books this year.

No books may be exchanged for new ones unless the dealer takes them in at his expense, the time has passed for exchanging old books as part pay for the latest adopted books.

The Teachers' Conference will be held in Burlington Sept. 10 and 11. This is in lieu of the Old Institute. It is necessary that every teacher under the employ of the County Board of Education be present. Please do not offer any excuses for non-attendance because none will be accepted.

This meeting is very important, for we expect to master and outline our work in accord with the "New Course of Study," which is now of the press, and each teacher will be supplied with one copy. The teachers at this meeting will be supplied with their respective Teachers' Record Books and its use will be explained. There must be uniformity in use of Record Books. The teachers at this meeting will be supplied with crayon, erasers, &c. At this meeting contracts will be completed with teachers.

We expect to call the roll of teachers at these meetings. All must be present.

PARIS TO NEW YORK

A new airplane designed to make a nonstop flight of over 2,000 miles is being tested at LeBourget, near Paris. These tests are among the most important ever made in aviation. The machine which has been used in the experiments has a 480 horse-power engine and has double control. The first test will be from Paris to Aleppo. If this succeeds, there will be a second flight from Paris to Bagdad a distance of 2500 miles. If it is shown that such distances can safely be negotiated with fair regularity there will be nothing to prevent flights from Paris to New York.

European writers look to this breaking down of the barriers of distance as the first step toward making America part of Europe—or Europe part of America—and perfecting the much desired unity of nations.

The fortune teller used to warn us against some "dark woman," but the sun miner, at least, is free of a peril in these times.

Remarkable how the fruit will come off a tree when the kids unintentionally lean up against the trunk thereof.

As suspicious characters are being rounded up everywhere, the kid element should beware of being seen looking around the pantry.

Claimed there is more excitement in cities than in the country. The city folks certainly get considerable of it, dodging their creditors for their high expenses.

The idea of some as to safe automobile operation is to drive so fast that the people who are run into will be the only ones who get injured.

President Coolidge does not seem to be stimulating business by wearing out automobiles, but he must be consuming a good deal of shoe leather.

Formerly the pioneer used to blaze trails on the trunks of trees, and now our motorists mark their trails on the trees along the roadside by skidding onto them.

Erection of highway warning signs is appreciated by the younger element, as they are considered by the kids to make good targets for air rifle practice.

The motorist who saves 20 seconds by not looking at his gasoline tank before starting out, may have to spend an hour walking to the nearest filling station.

Claimed the country is facing a crisis, but just now it seems to be facing the better to see if he will strike out.

Would you hire yourself for your present job if you were the boss? If you were the boss would any other man hire you for a similar position?

What has become of the old-fashioned grocer who used to put a potato on the mouth of the oilcan to keep it from spilling?

One of the worst faults with the delivery system, is found in the politicians who fail to deliver the goods.

Some folks can't help walking in their sleep, but they can't expect full pay when they work in their sleep.

Present day ships that pass in the night are carrying the mail for Uncle Sam—and you don't have to live on the seashore for them to pass.

Hard knocks don't hurt very long and never matter much; it's the disconcerting never-ending raps every day that try our patience.

Denmark produces and exports about the same quantity of eggs that China does—more than a thousand millions per year. The world's trade in eggs totals annually about seven hundred millions dozen. About one-fourth of this is dried, liquid and frozen whole.

"DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY IN A BANK AND PAY YOUR BILLS BY CHECK"

This is the advice given daily by the Newspapers, in commenting on the loss of sizable sums of money from the pockets of the owners.

Good advice and very timely. To make a deposit is a good beginning. To build and maintain a balance large enough to pay your checks at all times, and leave a margin upon which your bank can make a reasonable profit is a long step towards building financial character.

Tobacco Growers Met Again At Court House Saturday

AGREEMENT REACHED AT THE MEETING TO WRITE OTHER NAMES ON BALLOTS

Approximately one hundred tobacco growers of Boone county met at the court house last Saturday afternoon for the purpose of discussing the result of the convention of the week previous.

C. C. Sleet was made the Chairman of the meeting and D. Hesa Vest of Walton, despite his protest, was made the secretary. Various speakers were called upon and from what they said the following opinions might be deduced: First, that the regular meeting was very poorly attended, for which each one present held himself entirely responsible, second, that the growers present had no complaint whatever against the four men nominated at the previous meeting, but the impression had been circulated that these men, if elected, were normally bound to vote against the present administration, meaning Dawson Chambers and V. P. Kerns in particular, third, that the growers present were of the opinion that the sentiment of the growers of the county was overwhelmingly in favor of the retention of these two men in their present capacity; fourth, that since each grower had the privilege of "writing in" the names of any two additional men upon the ballots when they received them, this meeting should be on record as favoring this procedure.

At the close of all the discussion the names of Joe W. Cleek and Chas. Hemphing were unanimously chosen as the names to be "written in" by the growers upon the ballot when received by each individual grower. Several speakers expressed their preference for the two men for the following reasons, viz: because they favored the retention of Mr. Dawson Chambers as director from this district and V. P. Kerns as manager of the Walton warehouse, and further on account of the fact that they Mr. Hemphing and Mr. Cleek in short talks according to the proposal to write their names on the ballot, said that they were of the opinion that Dawson Chambers was one of the strongest directors in the state, and that the Walton warehouse under his direction of Mr. Kerns was one of the most efficiently and economically managed warehouses in the state.

At the close of the meeting Marcus W. Ryle and Eli P. Williams, two of the nominees at the first meeting, expressed their desire to have their names stricken from the ballot, if possible, and, if not possible, that they wished to support Mr. Cleek and Mr. Hemphing for nomination.

The other two names on the ballot were Rod P. Hughes and L. L. McMullen.

POULTRY MEETING—

There will be a meeting of the Florence poultry show committee at the Florence Farm Bureau Saturday evening, Sept., 11th at 7:30.

LIME CRUSHER—

Those planning to use the State Lime Crusher should keep in mind that the limit is 100 tons per farm. Also try and pile rock so that crusher can easily get to them. The State machinery is very heavy and farmers should try and accommodate the operator as much as possible.

STATE FAIR—

Boone county will be represented at the State Fair next week by a county exhibit of apples, special exhibits by several of the local growers.

Four Chester White club pigs have been entered and some club poultry.

Sixteen Jr. Club Sewing Girls are also sending their work.

JUNIOR JUDGING TEAM—

Boone county will be represented at the State Fair with a Junior Live Stock Judging Team consisting of William Townsend and Hubert Townsend of Union, and John Crigler and Marion Bullock of Hebron.

The team has been awarded free transportation over the L. & N. They will leave from Walton Monday morning at 6:45 and will return Thursday evening. They will compete with 60 other teams from other counties of Kentucky.

BOUGHT PUREBRED—

Paul Ayler bought a Registered Hampshire Buck last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hickman entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fryman and family and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and family, of Cynthia, last Sunday and Monday.

SHENANDOAH WRECK VIEWED BY H. J. AYLER

Boone County War Veteran Writes About The Air Disaster In Ohio

My Boone County Friends:

Perhaps I am not the only representative of Boone county to view the wreck of the great "Shenandoah" but I'll try in my crude way to describe some of the things in connection with what I saw.

I happened to be in this part of my territory at the time of the disaster, and like thousands of others wouldn't miss seeing the fallen monster of the air.

Mr. Trotter of Pleasant City today told me how he first saw the ship stand on end and start upward, then righting herself and breaking in the middle. He was one of the first to reach the wreck and helped remove the bodies.

The control cage was first to fall and fell in a man's garden barely missing the house, what was a few hours ago a nice cabbage and bean patch, is now blood soaked ground where twelve of the Shenandoah's heroes perished beneath their heavy mortars. The rear half of the ship fell in a beautiful little valley. The front half floating several miles farther yet before coming down.

Not since the busy days of nineteen eighteen have I seen so much excitement or such heavy road traffic. Steady streams of cars both ways on the narrow hills country roads make them practical death traps, for the red dust is inches deep and make it almost impossible to see and drive at all. Cars over banks, wrecks and collisions are numerous and its a grand and glorious feeling when you finally get out.

Most very state is represented by cars as this is not so far off the National Road, and the tourists are all pouring in as they pass through.

Airplanes are also numerous and several aviators in hotel here tonight. Souvenir hunters have been carrying off everything from bits of the gas bag and aluminum frame to the cans of tomatoes that fell out of the provision supply. I myself was able to get a small piece of brace wire. I also have two fine original photographs of the wreck that I bought today, and which I prize very highly.

Mr. Trotter has the nicest souvenir I have yet seen. It is a beautiful pennant bearing the name "Shenandoah Lakehurst, N. J." and having a picture on it of the Shenandoah at anchor. He found it under one of the dead men he helped remove from the wreckage, and the pennant is the only one of the kind found.

I can't give you an estimate of the thousands that are coming in to see this great wreck but I'll say the farmers are making a young fortune parking cars in their fields at fifty cents and a dollar apiece.

I don't want to play press reporter on this job, but I have tried to give you a personal touch of this terrible disaster by telling some of the little things that the papers don't give.

Very Truly Yours,
HOWARD J. AYLER

THE OHIO UNUSUALLY LOW

The Ohio river has been at a lower stage here this week than it has for several years. This condition was caused through the repairing of the wickets at the Markland dam and because the water is being held above to create a sufficient stage to allow the shipment of coal down the river.—Rising Sun (Ind.) Recorder.

BRIDGE PARTY

Miss Mary Bess Cropper entertained a number of friends at bridge last Saturday evening in honor of her guest Miss Sue Renaker of Dry Ridge. Those present: Misses Isabelle Duncan, Mary Olive Elder, Nell Martin and Mesdames John M. Leasing, B. C. Gaines, G. W. Tolin, L. T. Utz, C. G. Kelly, Raymond Cropper and Carroll Cropper.

Jacob Rich, who has recently returned from a trip thru western Indiana and southwestern Kentucky reports that he passed through the country he ever has seen from Mallow on through the remainder of the trip. He says that the dust was so deep that the axle of his car dragged in some places.

They have had no rain in those parts since the 13th of June, and crops are past redemption even though they could get rain now.

Mr. Rich made the trip of 568 miles in a Ford touring car, occupied by his family and Alvin Rick. He reports that Indian roads were boulevards while those of western Kentucky were disgraceful.

H. W. Shearer wife and daughter Helen Hall, of Newport, spent Sunday and Labor Day with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall.

CAMPAIGN WILL OPEN FOR CHILDRENS HOME

Representative of Kentucky Children Home Arrives in Boone County

Miss Ida Cozart, Representative of the Kentucky Children's Home Society arrived in Boone county Saturday for the purpose of making preliminary arrangements for a campaign to be launched here soon for the Building Fund of the Kentucky Children's Home Society.

This is a most deserving drive and should be well patronized. The project is state-wide and every county is glad to have part in this wonderful movement of caring for the little children of the State, not eligible to church and paternal homes is being waged, county by county. The goal has been set at $500,000 to enable the Kentucky Children's Home Society to adequately meet the needs of the thousands of homeless children of our commonwealth. Every county of the State has committed children to the Society's care.

To date approximately $400,000 has been pledged in eighty of the 120 counties of the state. The remaining counties are to be visited this fall and organizations of local citizens forced to canvass the various communities in an effort to raise the $100,000 deficit needed to complete payments on the new buildings already erected.

The Kentucky Children's Home Society was incorporated in December, 1895, largely through the work of Judge Reginald H. Thompson, who was its first president. The object for which the Society was organized is to take destitute, neglected and mistreated children not eligible to other similar institutions. After the necessary training in the receiving home to fit them for their future homes, they are placed in good moral, comfortable and Christian homes, where they are received as members of the family and sent to school, Sunday school and church and given every advantage they would have had if born into that family. Since the society was organized about 4,000 of these waifs have been received into its care. Every child home to the society with an order of court, giving the Society absolute control until he is of age. A family history is also obtained.

After being placed in the home a strict supervision is kept over the child until he is of age to see that he is properly cared for. If at any time the child is neglected, mistreated or is a misfit, he is at once removed from the home and placed elsewhere. One of the strongest points of the work is the supervision of the children who have been in homes. They are visited once every year, and often if necessary. The Society now has a daily family of about 1300 including 200 in the receiving home and 1100 placed in good Kentucky homes.

The present home, located on a beautiful eighty-six acre farm ten miles east of Louisville, consists of two splendid one hundred capacity dormitories, one for boys and one for girls, an administration building, part of which is used for school rooms, two reception buildings, hospital, laundry, farmer's cottage, and superintendent's home. These new buildings have been made possible through the cooperation and generosity of the citizens in the eighty counties in which campaigns have already been waged. The Superintendent, having faith in the people of Kentucky, erected these buildings, knowing that every county in the state would gladly respond and do its part to help pay for them.

It will be remembered that the thousands of children who have been committed to the Society's care were taken from the very dregs of poverty. In many cases, the parents had died and the children would have been charges upon the bounty of the public. Others were children who came without welcome into a cruel world thru no fault of their own and through no love of their parents. Then this institution, organized and conducted by God-fearing and humanity loving men and women, reached out and took these waifs to its bosom and stood in the place of parents until such proper steps could be taken to adopt them. The campaign will be in the hands of Boone county's best citizens, chosen for their reliability to put forward any work entrusted to them. It is a nonpartisan move and actuated by the noblest sentiment of love and charity.

Only one child has been committed to the Children's Home Society from Boone county. There have been a number of others who would probably have found a haven there in recent years but for the crowded conditions which have made it impossible for the Society to answer all the calls made upon it.

Miss Ruth Hensley, of Petersburg, agent the week-end here the guest of J. M. Lanning and family.

Automobile Thief Captured After Long, Thrilling Chase

ATTY ORIE S. WARE TO SPEAK AT P. T. A. RALLY

Rally Will Follow Baptist Church Services Next Saturday Night

With the opening of the coming school term drawing nearer, and realizing their comparatively heavy obligation incurred in the construction work now in progress at the school building, the Burlington P. T. A. has decided that renewed activity must be incited. In other words something must be done to re-awaken them, and again stir up that enthusiasm which has naturally waned somewhat during the torrid summer months.

That the local P. T. A. has indeed performed wonders can be attested by the fact that less than a year ago the idea of a new auditorium and class rooms was looked upon as more or less of a dream.

But in less than a year since the idea was born in the thoughtful brain of some P. T. A. member, the new addition, at a total cost of about $20,000 is being constructed at an astonishing rate. One fourth of this total cost has been pledged by the P. T. A. and, if necessary, about $15.00 could be paid from the treasury now. These facts are stated merely to show what an organization with real "pep" can accomplish.

However the organization must "carry on," and accordingly something in the nature of a rally has been arranged for Saturday night Sept., 12th with Orie S. Ware, of Covington, as the principal speaker. There will also be other speakers on the program. This selection of a speaker was made for several reasons, principally because Mr. Ware has been so prominently identified with the P. T. A. work, being a member of the state advisory board of that organization.

The meeting will take place in the court house immediately following church services at the Baptist church which have been very considerably advanced one half an hour by the Pastor for this occasion. Mr. Ware's ability as a speaker on most any subject is well known throughout this locality and a full house is expected to hear him.

Mrs. Ware is also a prominent P. T. A. worker, being President of the Sixth District organization. She will also be present. It will indeed be an evening well spent for any one interested in the welfare of this community.

FORD COUPE, TOOLS AND TIRES COMPRISE LIST OF STOLEN GOODS RECOVERED

Last Thursday morning about 2:30 o'clock Deputy Sheriff L. T. Utz received a call from Al Rogers, of Bellevue saying that some one had just stolen some tires from Charles Dolph garage and was on his way to Burlington. Utz hurried into his clothes, called Mr. Hume and Deputy Snyder at their boarding house and hurried in his machine to the court house. He had barely arrived at this point when the machine came through at top speed. Nothing had been said about a stolen machine, but Utz made a good guess that such was the case and ordered him to stop. He failed to do so and two shots were fired by Utz at his tires in a futile effort to bring him to a halt. Utz called to Snyder and the two jumped into Utz's Ford touring car and one of the most exciting chases ever held in this county was on.

The officers did not reach sight of the fleeing thief until they had reached Florence, but when they did it was simply "Henry" against "Henry." The pursued machine was a Ford coupe.

Down the highway with both throttles wide open they sped and neither able to gain much on the other.

Both officers being caught off guard and having no time to prepare for a "gun chase" were short of ammunition, therefore they reserved firing until they could get close enough to make every shot count.

In Covington they got close enough to fire two shots at his tires with no effect, they sped across the bridge into Newport, overlooking the formality of paying bridge toll. Two more shots were fired in Newport, on through Newport and Fort Thomas, turning corners on two wheels. As they were returning from Fort Thomas to Newport over the Waterworks Road Snyder fired one shot through the back glass of the coupe. This seemed to take some of the "crust" from the driver and he concluded that he had better slow down.

The officers pulled along side, arrested him, took the coupe to the Kentucky Motor Car Co., and then returned the prisoner to Burlington.

The telephone call came in at 2:30 the officers had made the loop, including stops, and were back in Burlington at 4:00 o'clock. Pretty good time at that.

The telephone call from Bellevue had said there were two machines, and Mr. Hume waited for the second to come through, which it did. When ordered to stop he also failed to obey and the high sheriff took two cracks at his tires also.

However, by the time Mr. Hume got his car out of the garage the fleeing car was so far advanced that the sheriff never caught sight of him again.

The Ford coupe had been stolen from Conner Carroll, of Big Bone, some tools were stolen from "Dode" Pope at Rabbit Hash, and two tires from Charles Dolph at Bellevue.

The slightest hesitation on the part of Mr. Rogers in calling the officers, or Deputy Sheriff Utz at any moment from the time he received the call until the man was caught and he would certainly have gotten away.

Snyder broke all records for dressing in a Ford running 40 miles per hour, he says he doesn't want any more of that kind of dressing. The captured man gave his name as Eddie Hodges of Newport. He is now in jail awaiting trial in December.

The most peculiar part of the whole affair is that the chase was conducted through Covington, Newport, and Ft. Thomas and several shots were fired but "nary" a "cop" could be seen. However the next day when Deputy Utz was in Covington looking for the second man he attempted to cross the street at the wrong time and there was one on the job immediately.

COMMUNITY FUNCTIONS

While the small towns of the U. S. have been progressing in maintaining schools and the various activities of local government, they have been a little slow in providing for certain functions that are necessary for progress.

Every town needs some kind of an organization that shall work for its business success, and remove difficulties in the way of its industries and trade, and strive for development and co-operation.

Every town also needs some kind of organization that shall work for improved physical appearance, more beautiful conditions, for culture and popular education and enlightenment and social relations. Are we functioning as we should in Burlington along these lines which are neglected in many places?

LOCAL PRIDE

What do you tell your children about your home town? Do you speak slightly of it, so that they obtain a contempt for it, as a pretty show out of a place?

Do you take pains to point out its good points? It makes a big difference to the future of your family, which of these two attitudes you take?

Tell them all the good and fine canable and energetic and tireless they were in building up this place, and what difficulties they had to encounter and overcome and keep plishing what they have. Also speak favorably of our business enterprises and our schools and churches and social organizations, and tell them they will find no better or kinder people anywhere. Do something to make them love their home town, and they will be loyal to it.

DANIEL BOONE, KENTUCKIAN

Missouri has on foot a movement to make a memorial of the old Boone homestead. Many furnishings and relics have been gathered, quite a few from Kentucky, to be taken to Missouri and placed in a national shrine dedicated to the memory of the noted pioneer.

Missouri is doing a good thing and can not be criticized, but rather should be commended for the honors she pays to the sturdy woodsman.

But Daniel Boone, though coming to Kentucky from a quiet home on the Yadkin in North Carolina and spending his declining years in Missouri, was nevertheless a Kentuckian. It was here he trod fame's trail through the wilderness, "a hatchet in one hand and a rifle in the other." Here he pitched his tent, here he carved his initials on the trees, here he "killed a bear," here he lived a captive among the Indians here he surveyed, explored and built.

There should by all means be in Kentucky a permanent memorial to Daniel Boone and those relics of his pioneering in Kentucky should be kept somewhere near where the Boone trail, which he blazed from Cumberland Gap to the westward runs into the heart of the commonwealth which has grown from the little community he captained when a stockade was a castle and when the knighthood of the backwoods was in flower.—Lexington Herald.

Many of us, in looking back at boyhood days, are impressed with the aimlessness of the school vacation periods. There did not seem to be much for a healthy kid to do. Of course we were expected to help around the home more or less. But it was so much trouble to get any work out of the boys, that the older people often thought it was easier to do things themselves.

There was of course, the "ole swimmin' hole," but you could not spend all the time in it. The boys of those days were apt to have a pretty dull time of it, and were constantly asking "What shall we do now?"

As a result many of them used to become very dreary and they acquired a habit of mooning around with idle thoughts that did no good. It was often a great relief when the vacation days which looked so sweet at the time were over and school was back in session. It is much more healthy which says that children need constant activity.

INSTRUCTION IN THE CONSTITUTION

Studies made by the U. S. Bureau of Education show that during 1922 and 1923, 22 states passed laws requiring instruction in the constitution of the United States, and many also require instruction in their own state constitution. Probably the laws passed in 1924 and 1925 will show still more such legislation.

It would be interesting to inquire as to what caused this widespread movement. Probably it was due in part to a desire to counteract agitation by bolshevik sympathizers.

The people have evidently gotten sick of having orators wandering around the country, claiming that our government, which has done so much to produce universal welfare, is a tyrannical power which is not giving the masses of the people a chance. By instruction in the constitution, the financial writer, asserts that the one thing that has contributed more than anything else to the great improvement in living conditions has been prohibition. While the country is far from being absolutely dry, it is true that the phenomenal growth of building and loan associations, the unprecedented increase in savings bank deposits, the vast extension in life insurance, the amazing multiplication of families able to own an automobile, the overcrowding of colleges and universities, the nation wide acceptance of the radio, and the abolition of slums, poverty-stricken districts and jails, have a decided bearing on the subject.

PROHIBITION AND PROSPERITY

After traveling more than 10,000 miles and visiting many states, B. C. Forbes, the financial writer, asserts that the one thing that has contributed more than anything else to the great improvement in living conditions has been prohibition. While the country is far from being absolutely dry, it is true that the phenomenal growth of building and loan associations, the unprecedented increase in savings bank deposits, the vast extension in life insurance, the amazing multiplication of families able to own an automobile, the overcrowding of colleges and universities, the nation wide acceptance of the radio, and the abolition of slums, poverty-stricken districts and jails, have a decided bearing on the subject.

In Great Britain conditions are far different. Her worst curse is drink—not only because of the money spent, but because of the effects of hard and steady drinking. On Monday's the busiest places are the pawn shops, and suffering is seen on every hand.

Drink and depression seem to go hand in hand—so does prohibition and prosperity.

BREEDING TROUBLE

For more than half a century the coal operators and coal miners have quarreled over the question of wages. Union after union has been destroyed, but they always come back stronger than ever, because the miners' demand is just.

After half a century of struggle miners have, at a terrible cost, improved both living and working conditions to some extent. Yet it is true that notwithstanding all the legislation and regulations but few self-respecting men could be induced to move in the trade or profession at any price.

The plea of the operators that they are protecting industry and consumers by holding wages to the lowest level, has been so thoroughly exploded that both industry and consumers are not convinced that it is pure bunk. The fact that prices are rising every day, and that the reports already beginning to soar the reports indicate a stock sufficient for months, is the final answer to this plea. An increase of 25 cents per ton for the worker does not justify an increased selling price of $3.00 per ton as some of them claim.

The latest quarrel between the anthracite mine owners and miners merely confirms the conclusion long since reached by unbiased minds that this is the worst-managed industry in the United States and both parties are contributing to an inevitable radical change in a system that now threatens suicide for industry. If national peace is to be maintained, and by and by the firm victim in likelihood to be anthracite industry. Its treatment of the public has been that the public's treatment of it is not likely to be characterized by solicitude for the sensibilities of those affected.

PLAYGROUND SIGHTS

There is no prettier sight to a lover of humanity than to see a group of children having a fine old time on a well conducted playground.

If those youngsters are just left to themselves, they will not get so much out of it. In accordance with the time honored custom of childhood, their plays and sports are likely to mean a row.

But if a city is able to afford some leader to organize boys and girls and the different ages into games to which each group is adapted, you have a wonderful picture of youthful happiness. The pure merriment of these youngsters, the serious earnestness with which they try to perform well their various stunts, give these budding natures their chance for expansion.

Their minds work more quickly, and if properly disciplined, they get the idea that the world is ruled by an instead of by individual whim.

LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE

States, graduating classes, etc., mottoes, supposed to express their dominating thoughts. If some towns had mottoes, and the same always expressed with sincerity the dominating thoughts of those communities in many cases, "Let well enough alone" would be the one chosen.

Many country towns seem to be based on that theory. The sentiment of inertia is strongly developed. If some progressive fellow suggests a new idea, the passive element begin to speak of difficulties. We are getting along fairly well now, they remark, and such a scheme will be sure to fail. So the objectors disseminate an atmosphere of doubt, and the hopeful people who had proposed the project find sentiment all against them. They may lapse into silence and very likely the opportunity to accomplish some big thing passes over.

No town can go ahead on that spirit. The country was not settled and built up on that theory. If our ancestors had worked on that idea, the great west would never have been opened up, and in an earlier day this country would never have been settled.

It takes a little courage to get the things that are out of the way of this world. But when you take hold of a new proposition with some vim and confidence, you will find that you get a lot of support. There are plenty of folks who are sick and tired of the "It can't be done" attitude.

Of course a country town must be reasonable in its projects. It has to do things on a smaller scale. But it can accomplish to some degree all the main ends of modern civilization, if its people only have faith in themselves, and are willing to devote some attention to public causes as well as to their private affairs. We must expect here in Burlington to give some of our time to the development of the town, if we want it to make progress.

STOCK SWINDLERS

Do you know when buying stock how much money actually goes into the treasury of the company? Many parasites live by their wits promoting fraudulent or highly speculative companies. Their sole idea is to sell stock and get huge commissions.

In one case recently investigated by a Buffalo banking company, it was found that the promoters took 75 per cent for selling the stock, only 25 per cent went into the treasury of the company. No company can successfully operate if its resources are drained by the promoters at its inception. Before purchasing stock, learn what commission is paid for selling it and ascertain who receives the commission. Ask the salesman how much of the stock he purchased for himself and what he did with it. If he sold it as a "bucker" and lose your money. Remember this: Thousands of financiers are ready to take an entire stock issue if it is any good. Even comparatively safe stocks don't have to be peddled.

BETTER CITIZENSHIP

The widespread movement to promote knowledge of the constitution is no doubt due in part to the feeling that we need a better quality of citizenship.

Our various forms of government are theoretically about as good as can be devised, but the ordinary run of people do not attend to their civic duties. We need a new generation who will look after the duties of citizenship as well as they attend to their daily business. The thousands of financiers are ready to take an entire stock issue if it is any good. Even comparatively safe stocks don't have to be peddled.

DANGER OF HUNGER

The French revolution had that cried for "bread, bread" is not forgotten history, and hunger among the working classes is just as dangerous today as it was more than 50 years ago.

Looking over the situation in Europe today one may well pause to ask, "Who really won the war?"

The British government is faced with a far more serious battle than that of providing bread for its 1,300,000 unemployed. A royal commission and a food council are trying to solve the problem and the government may yet be driven to the expedient of embarking in the buying of wheat and meat for the people without the intervention of trusts, profiteers and jobbers.

Britain now pays over $500,000,000 a year for frozen meat principally from Argentina, and more than a third of the wheat and flour consumed comes from points outside the British Empire.

Sir Auckland Geddes, recent Ambassador to the United States, and head of the royal food commission, asserts that the visible food supply in Great Britain is not sufficient to feed the people for more than three weeks, and already the pangs of hunger are being felt among the people.

To buy food the nation must have a market for its manufactured products—and Germany means to be again making serious inroads in the United States and the near East. It is a serious situation.

New York authorities state that fruit and vegetables are hauled an average distance of 1,500 miles to this city. It is also estimated that it requires 150 wheelbarrows full of produce to get the final sale price goes to retailers, jobbers, wholesalers and shipping organizations.

The famous old Phoenix Hill brewery at Louisville, Ky., is now the nation's largest mushroom production. The former brewery superintendent has charge of the plant.

THE COMING WEEK will enable you to find out how much income tax your neighbor pays as the collectors of Internal Revenue, with the consent and approval of the Supreme Court through their books open to the newspapers. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon thinks that it is bad policy to make the income tax figures public property, and upon his recommendation, the President probably will ask the next Congress to definitely repeal the publicity section of the income tax law. Opinion is divided on the question, one group insisting that publishing of the figures helps to get the tax-dollars, and others declare that the figures made public mean nothing anyway unless all the deductions of every taxpayer are made public at the same time.

AMERICAN OFFICIALS are becoming more skilled in the wily and devious ways of foreign diplomats. It only took the Treasury and members of the Debt Funding Commission a few hours to see in the last settlement agreement ready to be signed by France and Great Britain nothing more than an attempt to over and admit, to help France in getting a big reduction when she is in debt of four billion dollars to the United States. It was plain that England had extended a helter-skelter to France in virtually agreeing to cancel the French war debt to Great Britain, contingent upon similar action by this country. The result has been given out, however, that the Government here sees through the latest European bluff and will insist upon full payment.

A SURVEY is being made to learn how much money is scattered thru out the world. It has developed that, despite all the watchfulness of those responsible for paying out the Government's money, there is no absolute check upon the amount which goes annually for personal services. The estimate is in the neighborhood of eight hundred million dollars a year. It get an accurate figure the Bureau of Efficiency is sending questionnaires to all employees, requiring them to report back to Washington how much they get each year. This will include every one from the President to the scrubwomen in postoffices and from Ambassadors to negro messengers.

SENATOR KING of Utah is back from Turkey more than ever convinced that the Senate has followed the right course in refusing to ratify the Lausanne and declaring that he will continue the Senate fight to have the treaty rejected or kept in a pigeon hole. King is especially critical of the Turks for their treatment of the Armenians, who he declares have not received a square deal in the pact between Turkey and the United States. The Near East, according to the Senator, remains a hot-bed wherein the seeds of the war are at any time likely to find a convenient place for exploding.

FROM THE SUMMER White House at Swampscott the President has found it necessary to sit down hard on alarmists in the Army and Navy who see all kinds of perils confronting the country unless they can have more money for their respective department. The Administration, however, has refused to be turned from its economy program, ordering that several millions of dollars be cut from the national defense appropriations. Mr. Coolidge's view is that the United States is threatened with no war and can get along with smaller forces. One of the results of the reduction in expenditures will be a curtailment in the peace time operations of both the Army and Navy, which is being opposed by high officials of both services who look upon it as a return to the condition of unpreparedness which existed before the World War. The President does not agree with them.

PROMISED TAX reduction will receive its first official consideration about the middle of October when the House Ways and Means Committee will meet here to go over the entire problem and frame a tentative tax revision bill for presentation in December.

The Continental Motors Corporation is preparing to produce what in Europe is called the "Bug" car. It will be of the closed type, carry two people, give 50 to 60 miles on a gallon of gas, and take up about as much room as a kitchen table.

Burlington property is a good investment right at the present time. It is a healthy place to live and is growing in population.

Certainly Neither Politics Nor Litigation Will Build Dams or Canals

By HERBERT HOOVER, Secretary of Commerce.

I BELIEVE that if full consideration is given to the combined necessities of large storage for irrigation, for flood control, for the development of power and the supply of domestic water to the Los Angeles district, the first step in development of the Colorado river should be the construction of a high dam at either Boulder or Black canyon, as the engineers might determine.

Other dams on the river either above or below would not be interfered with by such construction if it is properly conceived. It is my view that the high dam is urgently needed now and for the next 25 years in order to accomplish the necessary objectives at the earliest moment. I had hoped that the federal government would undertake or largely contribute to this development because it involves divergent interstate and different group interests covering storage, irrigation, power, municipal waters, etc., and will have so much human life dependent upon it that it should be directed by some authority in the interests of all.

The failure of the California legislature to ratify the compact with the Northern states with respect to water rights in the Colorado river will most probably delay the securing of any authorization from congress and consequently the development of the many projects dependent upon the river.

I understand that the Northern states wholly reject the California proposition and will strenuously oppose in congress any authorization until their water rights are protected. And in these times, when the Eastern states are in no humor to tax themselves for reclamation and other works in the West which will increase agricultural production, the opposition coming out of the West through the Northern basin states is likely to be very damaging.

The first and foremost thing needed on the Colorado river is constructive co-operation. Certainly neither politics nor litigation will build dams or canals.

A Realistic Literature of Hope Always Warns Us Against Optimism

By GLENN FRANK, in Century Magazine.

While mooning optimists may write a literature that will give us the spirit of hope, only responsible scientists, philosophers, administrators and authentic spiritual seers can write a literature that will give us the anatomy of hope. Social cheer leaders might do a little toward dulling the despair of a new Dark Ages, but only social engineers can usher in a new renaissance. A realistic literature of hope has nothing in common with the facile and foolhardy optimism of men who regard optimism as a profession rather than a deduction from the facts in the case. It is, then, a literature of hope, not a literature of optimism, that I am discussing. Between the two there is a difference as wide as the difference between a spirit of expectancy that blindly believes a renaissance lies ahead. A literature of hope is a literature that uncovers for us the unused resources of health in our civilization and suggests to us a workable technique for using them. And a realistic literature of hope always warns us against optimism unless we set ourselves manfully at work to harness the forces of health it has pointed out to us.

The Federal Government Has Strayed Far From Its Legitimate Business

By CALVIN COOLIDGE, at Budget Meeting.

Unfortunately the federal government has strayed far afield from its legitimate business. It has trespassed upon fields where there should be no trespass. If we could confine our federal expenditures to the legitimate obligations and functions of the federal government, a material reduction would be apparent.

But far more important than this would be its effect upon the fabric of our constitutional form of government, which tends to be weakened and undermined by this encroachment.

The cure for this is not in our hands. It lies with the people. It will come when they realize that the laws under which the federal government hands out contributions to the states is placing upon them a double burden of taxation—federal taxation in the first instance to raise the moneys which the government donates to the states, and state taxation in the second instance to meet the extravagances of state expenditures which are tempted by the federal donations.

This Verse Is the Very Negation of the Poetry of Walt Whitman

By G. K. CHESTERTON, in Illustrated London News.

Read through any collection of free verse published today, and count up the number of utterances that are concerned with some form of distaste or even disgust. On the lines of the old songs of these might be called the songs of the seashell. There is nothing in which the new poet fancies himself so much as in saying, like a barnard at a breakfast, that he does not fancy anything. There is nothing more notable in his literary experiments than the incessant statement that things obtrude themselves repulsively or look loathsome and unclean. Now, whether we think this poetry or the negation of poetry, there is no doubt whatever that it is the very negation of Walt Whitman's poetry. It exists to say the exact opposite to what Whitman existed to say in poems like "This Compost." Whitman said that even things that look dirty to everybody else looked healthy to him. The new poet says that things which look healthy to everybody else look dirty to him.

Country Will Be Covered by Windmills Working Electric Motors

By J. B. S. HALDANE, University of Cambridge.

The country will be covered with rows of metallic windmills working electric motors which in their turn supply current at a very high voltage to great electric mains. At suitable distances there will be great power stations where during windy weather the surplus power will be used for the electrolytic decomposition of water into oxygen and hydrogen. These gases will be liquefied and stored in vats, vacuum-jacketed reservoirs, probably sunk in the ground. If these reservoirs are sufficiently large, the loss of liquid due to leakage inwards of heat will not be great; thus the proportion evaporating daily from a reservoir 100 yards square by 60 feet deep would not be 1-1,000 of that lost from a tank measuring 2 feet each way. In times of calm the gases will be recombined in explosion motors working dynamos which produce electrical energy once more, or more probably in oxidation cells.

AFRICAN ANTELOPE HARDEST TO CATCH

Their Horns Easily Harmed, Says Hunter.

New York.—The most difficult animal to catch alive is not the ferocious lion, the tiger, the elephant, the hippopotamus or the bear, but the African antelope, according to Ellis S. Joseph, who has spent a lifetime, nearly studying the habits and the haunts of wild animals of the jungle and the forest. He has captured alive nearly every kind of animal known. His catches are always in great demand by zoological gardens and circuses.

Mr. Joseph claims Australia as his home, though it is apparent that he spends the greater part of his time in the wild, out-of-the-way places, where wild animals and savages abide and where the face of a white man is still a strange and terrifying object. While in New York, Mr. Joseph makes his home at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

"The African antelope is extremely difficult to catch alive and untamed," said Mr. Joseph, "because of its extreme delicacy, particularly of its horns. Unlike the horns of the elk or deer, the horns of an antelope are permanent. They do not shed them in certain seasons, and if these horns are broken or injured the damage is irreparable."

"The traps set for antelopes must be watched day and night. As soon as an antelope is captured the guards must rush forward immediately to prevent the high-strung animal from smashing his horns."

Lions Easily Caught.

"Lions, on the other hand, are the easiest animals to capture. A cage is made in the jungle by setting tall, strong stakes firmly in the ground, upon which a roof is fastened. A sliding door that drops from the top is then arranged with ropes, pulleys and weights in such a manner that the slightest touch of a rope will cause the door to drop. The rope is placed in such a position before the opening of the cage that the lion is sure to touch it as he bounds in to get at the bait—usually a live animal—which is used to lure him within."

"Once the door is slid into position Mr. Lion is securely captured. Then a cage with steel bars is rolled up to the trap door. The door is then opened and just when the lion thinks he is making a dash for freedom, he finds himself securely fastened in the steel cage."

"Monkeys are captured by guile. They are very fond of a certain variety of tuber that grows in profusion in Africa. Therefore snares are baited with this luscious food, and in this way they are easily captured. Once caught in the snare, the guards rush forward and throw nets over the heads of the monkeys, thus preventing them from escaping."

"I had a pet chimpanzee which I took with me on one of my journeys into the interior of West Africa. In the jungle I took the chain off my pet and let him roam at large in his native haunts. No, he did not run away and return to his natural element. He disappeared into the wilderness, but he returned after a few days, glad to see me again."

Home for a Visit.

"It was as though he had simply gone home to visit his relatives and told them that he was prospering in civilization and intended to remain among men. Thereafter the chimpanzee came and went at will. Sometimes he would be gone two or three days, but he always came back."

"Chimpanzees grow to be very large. It is not unusual for them to reach the weight of 300 pounds when full grown. It is not known just what the average length of their lives is. Eighteen years is the longest any have been known to live in captivity, but, on the other hand, the age when captured was not known."

"The chimpanzee is extremely intelligent, and there seems to be no limit to the things they can be taught. They become very attached to humans and are very affectionate and demonstrative—too much so at times. I had a big chimpanzee at one time in Australia. Once when going on a journey I left him in the zoo at Sydney until I should return. I was gone about eight months that trip."

"When I came back I went to see my pet. As I entered the cage he simply went crazy with delight at seeing me again. He threw his arms about me and began to bite my face, which is one of their ways of expressing affection. But this time his joy overcame his judgment, and instead of biting gently, as he meant to do, he just about tore my face to pieces. It took 48 stitches to close the wound."

"The chimpanzee is about the nearest approach to man in the scale of animal life. I have been much interested in experimenting with fingerprints of these monkeys. So far I have finger-printed about fifty chimpanzees, and I find that there is as much difference in the prints as there is in the finger-prints of men."

Produces Big Flower

VALUE OF HUSBAND IS $1, SAYS JURY

Wife Who Sued for $50,000 May Take Appeal.

Millington, Tenn.—What is a sixty-year-old husband worth?

Mrs. Fannie Burnger, fifty-six, named a price of $50,000.

A jury in Judge Ben L. Capell's court said he might be worth $1, but no more than that.

Whereupon Mrs. Burnger declared that she was going to prove that Daniel Webster Burnger, to whom she was wedded more than 35 years ago, is worth $50,000 if he's worth a dime. If she has to carry the matter up to the United States Supreme court.

"I admit he's a gay Lothario and awfully kind with the women, especially those of the grass variety," Mrs. Burnger told the court, "but I value his love and himself as a husband at $50,000."

Daniel Webster Burnger's bosom swelled and he felt quite complimented when his wife sued Mrs. Mary Fleming, fifty-four, wealthy plantation owner, for $50,000 for "stealing my husband." The bill as filed by Mrs. Burnger's attorney described the offense as "alienation of affections."

"But I call it stealing," said Mrs. Burnger. "She stole Daniel Webster, didn't she?"

"Anyway, when the jury deliberated over the situation a few hours they decided that Mrs. Fleming had, at least, alienated Daniel Webster's affections, but they weren't worth over a dollar. So Mrs. Burnger was awarded $1 as compensatory damages for the loss by theft of her husband."

Feminine and financial charms, according to Mrs. Burnger, won away her husband's love. She alleged in her complaint that Mrs. Fleming presented Daniel Webster with "love gifts," ranging from "a nice red apple" to an automobile. Burnger was employed by Mrs. Fleming as her plantation manager.

"As to the widow presenting me love gifts," he testified, "I may have kidded my friends by telling them she had given me a horse, finger rings, an automobile and a gold watch, but I was just kidding—they didn't belong to me. And the widow didn't promise me a life of ease with all my heart could desire. That ain't so, I don't care what Fannie says."

4-opts 30 Children on Policeman's Salary

St. Louis.—Police Sgt. Joe Schneider has fathered thirty children in twenty years on a policeman's salary.

Since 1904 his home has been a rendezvous for a score of youngsters without at least a dozen youngsters living under his roof.

Schneider and his wife, never blessed with children of their own, first adopted the orphaned daughter of old friends. But the little girl, they soon saw, was lonesome without her old playmates. So they got some for her.

From then on adopting homeless youngsters became a habit with the Schneiders.

Until his recent promotion to a sergeant, Schneider was a traffic cop on St. Louis' busiest downtown corner. On that job he was paid $145 a month. Today he gets $185.

"But big pay," he tells you, "is only a late thing. It's only been a few years since we were getting $70 a month. And it's comparatively recently we were getting $80."

"Yet it was just as smooth traveling in the old $70 days as now—maybe more so. The wife runs the business of the household and she never gets in the 'red.' We live well and don't worry."

His forty-second betrothed became suspicious and caused the arrest. When the young man was searched by the police an extraordinary diary was found in his pocket, containing precise details of his many daily engagements, the meeting-places, and the name to be assumed in each case by Grunwald, who used eighteen aliases. The forty-two fiancées must all give evidence against him.

Adverse and Drastic Legislation Could Close Every Coal Mine in Kentucky

The proposed tonnage tax on coals mined in Kentucky would, if enacted into law, eventually work such a hardship that the owners would have to close their mines and get out of business.

Production and marketing costs now total such a staggering figure that they will not stand any increases. Do not be misled or misinformed about the matter of coal taxes in Kentucky or about the conditions which surround the coal industry.

The Kentucky mine owners are not trying to avoid any just taxation. They are now paying their fair share of taxes and want to continue to pay an equitable amount into the public treasury. "Special Taxes," suggested and sponsored by the uninformed, would curtail production in every section of the State.

Kentucky coals are consumed in far distant sections of the country, and are sold in competition with mines located much nearer to the manufacturing centers. Kentucky coals have been able to compete with those mines in Northern states only because of fair taxation, aggressive sales methods, and the utmost economy in management. Adding to the expense of production will make it impossible to compete with other mines where the freight differential is a substantial one, in their favor.

The welfare of the State of Kentucky and of all its citizens is too largely dependent upon the coal industry to be interfered with by unfair legislation.

FIND RELICS OF VEGETARIAN RACE

Interesting Discovery Made in Mammoth Cave.

Louisville, Ky.—Relics of an ancient vegetarian race have been found in one of the subterranean chambers of the Mammoth Cave area. It is asserted in reports issued here by three engineers of the Louisville Gas and Electric Co., R. B. Anderson, Aaron Baer and Roy Hunt, who made the discovery while exploring the cave to decide upon a location for a proposed power dam.

Mrs. Anderson's report says in part: "Salts cave (where the relics were found) was at one time inhabited by a race of people who no doubt preceded the Indians. Indications show there must have been a large tribe or colony living here for a great length of time. Throughout the entire cave the walls are blackened with soot from the many fires that burned during the stay of these people.

"The floor and the crevices between the broken rock are filled with twigs and bark, which fell out as they dragged their firewood through the cave. You can question the fact that any wood left many hundreds of years ago would still be preserved, but the cave is very dry. The temperature probably is a little above 54 degrees Fahrenheit, and even now crystals of saltwater are being deposited on the walls, and the presence of this preserving salt in the atmosphere no doubt has made possible the remarkable preservation of things found in the cave.

"Some of the evidence leading to the belief that this people preceded the Indians is that proofs have been established that they were entirely vegetable-eating people, quite contrary to the Indians.

"Many moccasins have been found. These are made of woven grass and not of animal skins, as were those of the Indians. A few quilts or blankets have also been found, made from the same woven grass. Had they killed animals for food they undoubtedly would have used the more serviceable and much warmer skins for their wearing apparel, especially when there was so much saltwater at hand to cure the skins.

"No bones or teeth of animals have been found among the relics. This race probably inhabited this cave before the chestnut tree was native to this country, as hulls of all nuts now growing were found in the cave, with the exception of the chestnut. Many crude instruments have also been found, such as stone axes and wooden bowls, hollowed out by fire.

Raise $100,000 and for Sulgrave Manor

New York.—The ancestral home in England of George Washington, Sulgrave manor, in Northamptonshire, will henceforth be maintained and preserved by the income of a fund of $100,000 raised in this country, by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. John R. Lamar, national president of the society, explained that the organization was directed, under the terms of its constitution, to preserve and restore buildings connected with the early history of the United States. Before the World War it sent $30,000 to England to restore the manor.

The greater part of the $100,000 was given by the dames themselves, but generous aid was also received from the public. Not a dollar has been deducted from the subscriptions on account of collection expenses, all of which were paid by the societies or by individual dames.

Snow Worms Bore Into Glaciers Like Hot Wire

Seattle, Wash.—Snow worms have been found in the Cascade mountains of Washington and on glaciers and mountains in Alaska, Trevor Kincaid, professor of zoology in the University of Washington, declared after an investigation.

"The snow or ice worm is not really pink as many assert, but is more of a brownish hue," said Professor Kincaid. "The brown pigment in its skin is a source of heat which enables the worm to bore its way through glacier ice like a heated wire. It grows to a length of about an inch, feeding on debris in the ice."

Strand Widening Costly

London.—The widening of the Strand, in the heart of London, is an expensive proceeding, according to H. H. Gordon, a former London county councillor. He places the cost at $25,000,000 a mile. Traffic congestion makes the work necessary.

"GET THE SACK"

One of the terrors which the wage-earner sometimes faces is that of losing his job, in other words, "getting the sack." Workmen formerly carried a sack of tools to their work. When they were fired their sack was given them to pack up. The expression is also reminiscent of the custom of a certain sultan, who disposed of his extra wives by tying them in sacks and throwing them in the river.

Of the more than 10,000,000 workers employed in the country's manufacturing plants in 1923 New York had a total of more than 600,000 employed in over 25,000 factories and plants. The State Department reports show that these employees earned an average of $27.62 per week for the four weeks of February 1925.

The Department of Agriculture has $238,266.46 it doesn't know what to do with. This government collected a large sum in excess profits on wool in 1918 part of which has been returned to the growers, but it is impossible to obtain a record of the owners of this balance. It will probably be turned into the treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy boy, Myrtle, young French girl, wanders in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to friends in Paris, and leaving her with mother having been an educated woman.

Chapter IX

Gerald found Pauline waiting for him at the accustomed spot, after luncheon that afternoon. She was in the shadow of a great magnolia shrub, dressed in lace and gray, with a veil thicker than the exigencies of motoring necessitated.

Pauline, stepped lightly into the place by his side, without waiting for him to vacate his seat.

"Turn round, please," she directed. "We will go the other way. I do not choose to pass through the town."

Gerald obeyed, although her request only added fuel to the smoldering fire of his resentment. He turned away towards the mountain road and maintained a silence which was not without its significance. His companion, after a few minutes' glance toward him indifferently. He was leaning back in his place, his eyes, as usual, fixed upon the road, his left hand firmly grasping the steering wheel. The humorous twinkle, however, had gone from his mouth. There was a distinct frown upon his forehead.

"You are perhaps weary today?" she suggested. "You should like to shorten our drive?"

Gerald turned and looked at her. "I am not weary," he replied. "I am puzzled. I hate mysteries."

"The old complaint," she yawned. "With a new reading," he retorted. "I have shown myself ready, as you must know," he went on, "to study your rather peculiar whims in every way, but when it comes to meeting you face to face at the club and receiving nothing but the stoniest of stares, I must admit that the situation grows beyond me. I am not—well, I am not a disreputable acquaintance, am I?"

She laughed quietly. "Not in the least. You belong to what they call in England the middle-class aristocracy, do you not—two or three centuries old, with a damp house in a park and an armful of undistinguished titles?"

"Are you afraid to present me to Madame de Poniere?" he asked, after a moment's pause.

"Terrified," she admitted frankly. "Because my quarters are insufficient? I might remark that my father is the ninth earl and that I am his only son."

"It is not that at all," she assured him indifferently. "There is really no reason why we should not meet in a place like this on equal terms, but my aunt is a woman with only one idea in her head, and for the successful development of that idea it is advisable that we make no acquaintances whatever here. There, my Lord Dombey, have I not been kind to you? I would see more of you if I could, because in a place like this the escort of a man is an advantage. As it is, I can assure you that I risk a good deal in taking these afternoon rides. If you know how wearisome my life was and how grateful I really am to you for these few hours of escape, you would feel more kindly toward me. See, I give you my hand. Let us be friends."

It was the first time during all their acquaintance that she had recorded him the slightest mark of favor. The touch of her fingers thrilled and surprised him. He held her hand unreluctantly for several moments. Then she drew it quietly but firmly away.

"Well, that is settled," she said. "Now talk to me about other things. Is there no news at the rooms? Has no one been breaking the bank?"

"There was something I was going to tell you," Gerald replied, with a sudden flash of recollection. "I sat next to a man at dinner last night in Ciro's grill, who they say broke the bank several times during the afternoon. I believe they said that he was a Russian. I suppose you know all about him, however."

"It," she exclaimed. "Why should I?" "Because, between the courses of his dinner, he wrote a letter and sent it off by messenger. He was at the next table and it was impossible for me to avoid seeing the envelope. It was addressed to Madame de Poniere."

She looked at him, amazed. "To my aunt?" she repeated. "But we received no letter from any one last night. What was this man like?"

"They said that he was a Russian and that his name was Zubin," Gerald replied. "They also said that he had won two million francs in the afternoon."

"Zubin!" she exclaimed, with a little start. "I have heard of him, but I do not know him."

"That is my own affair," she said. "He must have been an accident, that."

"One gathers that you have not been fortunate today," Gerald remarked, after a brief silence.

"That is a matter of fact, my knowledge of them is of the slightest. Actually, I do not know them at all. I happened to have a few minutes' conversation with Mademoiselle de Poniere, and I mentioned your winnings."

You will remember that I saw a letter from you to Madame last night."

Madame Zubin sat for a moment deep in thought.

"Are you charged to deliver a reply to this message?" he demanded.

"Certainly not," Gerald answered. "I have not the privilege of visiting at the villa."

"I should think not," the other growled. "I wondered only whether you had been told to take a message to the back door."

"You are a very impertinent fellow," Gerald told him. "You appear to have come from a country where manners have ceased."

The man laughed brutally. "One puts off manners when one deals with spies and meddlers," he declared. "Get on about your business."

He walked back and took his place at the table.

Gerald left the room a few minutes later and strolled out into the square. He was in some doubt as to what he ought to do. Pauline had absolutely forbidden him to communicate with her in any shape or form, yet he had a conviction that Zubin's exploits in the casino should be made known to her. He strolled across to the establishment of Madame Lenore. Madame greeted him with a peculiarly knowing smile. He drew her on one side.

"Madame," he said, "you make gowns for Mademoiselle de Poniere."

The smile disappeared from Madame's lips. Her face became impassive.

"It is true, milord," she admitted. "What of it?"

"Just this. You are doubtless in frequent communication with her? I have some slight acquaintance with Mademoiselle but I am not permitted to communicate with her. It is important that she should know that the Russian, Zubin, is gambling in the casino and losing heavily."

"A big man," Madame asked quickly. "Almost giant?"

"That is he," Gerald assented. Madame turned toward the telephone.

"Demand the Villa Violette," she told the operator. "Say that I wish to speak to Mademoiselle de Poniere without delay."

Gerald turned away.

"Madame de Poniere dismissed the servants with a little wave of the hand and looked thoughtfully for a few moments into the fire of pine logs which had been kindled in the grate."

"Pauline," she said, "Zubin is already four days late."

Pauline made no immediate reply. Her aunt pointed to an easel with which stood in a corner of the room. "These people," she continued, "be more abusive. Even Lenore has sent account. You dispatched the telegram."

"I dispatched the telegram," Pauline assented. "but it was needless. Zubin is here."

"Here in Monte Carlo? Madame de Poniere demanded quickly."

"I have heard so," Pauline replied. "Tell me at once what you understand that he had sent you a letter last night."

The pallor of the other woman's face seemed suddenly deepened. Her eyes glittered ominously.

"Jean spoke of a note that had been found and taken away," she muttered. "Tell me at once what you know, Pauline."

"I have no definite information," she reiterated. "but I understand that he has been seen at the casino."

Madame de Poniere sat like a woman who has received a shock. The glow of fear was upon her face. "You do not know Zubin?" she

Madame de Poniere sat like a woman who has received a shock. The glow of fear was upon her face. "You do not know Zubin?" she oaned. "If he once smells the atmosphere of that place, it is like a deadly drug to him. And he loses! He always loses!"

She leaned over and struck a hellish chord upon a table.

"The car in a quarter of an hour," she ordered. "Pauline, get ready. We must seek Zubin. He has begun to gamble, he will go on to the end."

They drove first to the casino, where they explored only the Cercle. From there they went to the Sporting Club, where there was still a sign of him. Madame de Poniere looked upon him with a certain interest.

"He is perhaps resting in his hotel," she said, "preparing to visit us."

"It would never come without sending word beforehand," Pauline reminded her.

They sat side by side on one of the settees, two other lonely and disheveled women face to face with tragedy. Pauline saw Gerald in the distance and determined upon a bold step.

"Aunt," she said, "there is a young man standing by the easy chair there, whose father lives at the adjoining villa to ours. He has once or twice offered me some small courtesies. He is alone and I am sure he would be glad to be useful. Let me send him to the casino."

"Send him to the casino," Madame de Poniere demanded.

Pauline pointed him out. Her aunt sighed.

"One breaks a cherished tradition," she said, "but it must be done. I leave the matter in your hands."

Gerald and Christopher, strolling round the room, came presently to within a few feet of the table at which the ladies were seated. He was passing on after one swift glance at Pauline. She leaned over, however, and touched him on the arm.

"Lord Dombey," she said, "my aunt permits me to present you. Lord Dombey—Madame de Poniere."

Gerald, taken by surprise, bore the shock well. He bowed low and murmured a few polite words.

"I am afraid you will think that we are very mercenary," Pauline continued, "but we are going to ask a favor."

"It is granted," Gerald assured her swiftly.

"There is a Russian gentleman in Monte Carlo named Zubin."

"I know him by sight," Gerald declared. "Besides—"

"Then the rest is easy," Pauline interrupted, with a warning look. "Our request is that you search his casino for him, and if he is there, that you bring him to us."

Gerald bowed.

"Mademoiselle," he promised. "If he is there, I will bring him to you within a quarter of an hour."

Gerald, on entering the casino, made his way at once to the table at the farther end. The seat which had been occupied by Zubin, however, was vacant, though the table itself was crowded. He was on the point of continuing his search in one of the other rooms, when he suddenly saw the man of whom he was in search seated on one of the sofas against the wall. He made his way thither at once.

"Sir," he said, "I have brought you a message from Madame de Poniere."

The Russian lifted his head, and for a moment Gerald was afraid that he had had a stroke. His eyes were horribly red, the flesh about his cheek bones seemed to have become drawn tight, and his cheeks to display new hollows. His hands were trembling. All his truculence of manner had departed.

"From Madame de Poniere?" he repeated. "Where is she?"

"She is waiting now in the Sporting Club," Gerald replied. "I will take you to her if you will accompany me."

The Russian rose to his feet and the two men left the place. Many of the bystanders gazed after them, and Gerald heard something of their whispers.

"I'm afraid you've been having rather a bad time," he remarked.

His companion made no notice. He walked down like a man in a nightmare. Not only was he unshaven, but his clothes were creased and tumbled. He was altogether a disheveled-looking object.

"Might I suggest," Gerald said, as they descended the steps of the casino, "that you visit your hotel and freshen up a little before you come to the club?"

Zubin seemed suddenly to step down from another world. He looked vacantly at Gerald for a moment, at his smoothly brushed hair, his well-cut dinner coat, his faultless linen. Then, with a little start, he glanced at himself and shrugged his shoulders ponderously.

"You are right, monsieur. Come this way."

He crossed the street with great strides and entered the Hotel de Paris. He turned once more to Gerald as he passed.

"A quarter of an hour, monsieur," he said. "I give you my word that I will not keep you longer than twenty minutes."

"I will be waiting here," Gerald promised.

After the departure of the lift, Gerald made his way by means of the private passage to the Sporting Club. Madame de Poniere and her niece were seated where he had left them, the elder lady sipping some coffee. Pauline looking around her with a languid air of half-amused interest.

Save for the fact that Madame de Poniere's lips tightened a little as she saw Gerald alone, there was not the slightest indication in their manner or expression that they were confronted in any way with an exceptional situation.

"I have found our friend," he announced. "He is making some alterations to his toilet. I am meeting him in a few minutes and shall bring him here."

"Was he playing?" Pauline enquired.

"Not when I arrived," was the cautious reply.

Madame de Poniere stirred her coffee negligently.

"Find he," she asked, "the air of a man who has been drinking?"

"I fear," Gerald admitted, "that he rather gave me that impression."

Pauline smiled up at him. "It is very good of you to give yourself so much trouble," she said. "My aunt and I are greatly indebted to you. Please do not lose any time in bringing Monsieur Zubin here."

The words were almost a dismissal. Gerald made his way back through the passage and took a seat in the lounge of the hotel. Within the time promised, a transformed Gerald Zubin made his appearance. Gerald found it difficult to restrain his surprise. His dinner suit was faultlessly cut, his black pearl studs were marvellous. He had been carefully shaved and his hair had been trimmed. He carried white kid gloves in his hand, a glossy silk hat, and a monocle case under his arm.

He came over at once to Gerald and signed to a waiter who was hovering about with a bottle upon a tray.

"You will give me three minutes," he begged. "I was interested in a series of numbers, and I forgot to dine. You will perhaps join me."

"Very good of you," Gerald replied. "It is rather between times for me. I'll have a fine champagne, if I may."

Monsieur Zubin bowed gravely and the brandy was brought. Without turning a hair, he drank two tumblers of the wine. Then he turned coarsely to his companion.

"If you have no objection," he proposed, "we will walk outside to the Sporting Club. The distance is the same and the air is fresher."

Gerald assented readily, and they started off side by side. The Russian was walking with his shoulders back, like a man on parade, and Gerald suddenly felt that his own stature had become insignificant. All the way his companion seemed to be reciting to himself in some foreign tongue, reciting something which now and then seemed to have the swing of blank verse. As they reached the steps which led up to the Sporting Club, he came to a full stop and looked around.

"Young man," he said, facing Gerald, "you are prominently a little curious about me. This is the truth. Let those know it who may be interested. I, the steward of Madame de Poniere, and the trustee of as much as is left of her revenues. I came here to deliver the expression of my undying devotion to Madame and Mademoiselle."

His right hand, which had been fumbling in the pocket of his dinner coat, shot out like lightning. A small revolver, flashing in the electric light, was pressed to his temple. There were two almost simultaneous steps which led up to the Sporting Club, he came to a full stop and looked around.

MAIL FRAMES IN FOUR COUNTIES ARE PROBED

25 WOMEN SAID TO BE INVOLVED IN ALLEGATIONS IN MOUNTAIN DISTRICTS

Grayson Men Indicted—Ex-Postmaster and Two Sons Charged With Swindling Postal Order Houses.

Louisville. — Wholesale mail order frauds, in which at least twenty-five women are said to be involved, are alleged to have been recently perpetrated in Magoffin, Wolfe, Breathitt and Perry Counties and are under investigation by Government Postoffice Inspectors. It was disclosed at the Federal Building.

At the same time, it was revealed that W. T. Cherry, former Postmaster at Dickey's Mills, Grayson County, and his two sons, M. L. and W. H. Cherry, are under Federal indictment for fraud, as the result of an extensive swindle of which a large number of mail order houses, it is said, were victims.

There is no connection between the Grayson County charges and the inspectors' allegations concerning fraud in the mountains. Different methods are alleged to have been used in the two cases.

According to the indictment, Cherry and his two sons would order goods from mail order concerns and then file claims that the orders had not been received or that they had been received in a damaged condition. When the firms wrote to the Dickey's Mills postoffice to verify these statements, the senior Cherry, it is alleged, would reply that they were true. His official position made the scheme an easy one to work, Federal agents said.

The swindle which, it is charged, has been practiced in the mountain counties depends, it is said, on the use of printed letter heads and checks of mythical banks. In ordering goods from mail order houses, the alleged swindlers would enclose one of these checks made out for the amount of the order. Then, when the firm would write to the bank named on the check for reference, those involved in the scheme would use the fake letter heads to reply, giving themselves a good financial rating.

Federal officials declared that the scheme was in vogue in mountain counties about a quarter of a century ago and has recently been revived.

The indictment returned by a Federal grand jury at Bowling Green in May, the case having been presented by Claude Hudgins, Assistant United States District Attorney. The case has been transferred to the Louisville docket and each of the defendants is under $4,000 bond.

Among eighteen concerns said to have been victimized by the Cherrys are the Weatherly-McKenna Company, Louisville, and W. G. Barrett & Co., Owensboro. To what extent the men profited by their alleged scheme was not estimated by Federal officers. Frank Robeson, a special agent of the Illinois Central Railroad, assisted in the investigation.

W. T. Cherry was succeeded as postmaster at Dickey's Mills October 23 by Charles Sanders.

WET WEATHER FAILS TO DAMPEN SPIRITS

Orie S. Ware and Judge Lassing Speak at P.T.A. Meeting

The P. T. A. meeting at the court house last Saturday night was fairly well attended although the weather was very unfavorable.

However the dampness of the atmosphere failed to "dampen" the spirits of enthusiasm of those assembled as the results of the meeting will attest.

Hon. Orie S. Ware, Commonwealth's Attorney of Kenton county was present and delivered a very interesting and inspiring address, which was followed by a statement by the Chairman Mrs. B. C. Gaines, which was even as a "bomb thrown into the camp," so to speak. Mrs. Gaines said that some of the leaders of the organization had decided to fully discharge their obligation for the construction of the addition to the school house before the same was completed.

This caused most of those present to gasp for breath as all knew that the organization was something like four thousand dollars in debt. Mrs. Gaines however announced that Judge Lassing had been made the chairman of the finance committee, which caused the situation to take on a different hue, as everyone has the utmost confidence in the Judge's ability to raise funds, which was so astoundingly demonstrated in the Liberty Bond campaigns during the late war.

Judge Lassing announced at the very outset that he himself would donate five hundred dollars which was followed by donations of like amount from W. A. Gaines and A. B. Renaker. These donations were followed by two of two hundred fifty from each of the banks, then one of two hundred, followed by several one hundreds, and others of smaller denomination.

Mr. Ware, though not a resident of the county was generous enough to donate one hundred, which was more than appreciated by the organization.

Approximately $2800 was raised in a very few minutes. Mrs. Gaines then appointed a committee for canvassing purposes with a pledge to raise the balance in one week. Thus in a very few minutes was a very great burden to the P. T. A. more than half discharged, and the raising of the balance practically assured.

A generous vote of thanks was informally extended to Mr. and Mrs. Ware, who made a most favorable impression upon those of the community who had never before had the pleasure of meeting them.

The annual meeting for the election of officers will be held in the court house on Wednesday evening, Sept. 23, immediately following prayer meeting.

MRS. ELSIE J. THOMPSON PASSES AWAY LAST WEEK

Mrs. Elsie J. Thompson, aged 76 years, widow of John Thompson, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cody, of Elsmere. She had been in failing health for some time due to her age. The remains were forwarded to Corinth, Ky., Sunday morning to be interred by the side of her husband who preceded her to the grave two years ago. She is survived by a son and a daughter.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY GUESTS AT BIRTHDAY PARTY

That a good time can be had in the country was conclusively proven to about 170 of Harmon Jones' neighbors and friends on Labor Day. The occasion was Harmon's birthday. The entire number lined up on the pike some distance from the house and at a given signal paraded to the home.

They say that Harmon thought it was a misdirected circus parade. The occasion also celebrated the birthday of Noah Zimmerman and the fifteenth wedding anniversary of Shelly Aylor and wife.

POOLERS WILL HOLD ELECTION SATURDAY

Poll Will Open at Eight O'clock A. M. and Close at Four P. M.

Tobacco growers in six states of the Burley District who are members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association, will hold their annual election next Saturday between the hours of 8 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Every member has been mailed a ballot from the Lexington office of the Association, but to guard against forgetfulness and to be sure a sufficient number of ballots has been prepared twenty per cent of the total number has been printed and sent direct to the election officers in each county.

No election is being held in Tennessee this year, because of the tendency of a suit to oust the Association from that state, which was engineered by the warehouse interests of that state, who induced the attorney general to bring the suit in the name of the state, so that they might avoid any possible suit for damages due to the holding up of the business of the Association while it is pending.

One hundred and five thousand growers may participate in this election, voting either by mail or in person. The elections are held in the county seats, except in West Virginia, where in some counties the growers will vote at other places as a matter of convenience to them. The county seats in all the counties not being the center of the tobacco growing sections.

The delegates elected Saturday will meet Monday in their respective districts and elect a director for each of the twenty-two districts. These directors will elect three directors at large at the October meeting of the board and the twenty-five will elect the officers of the Association for the ensuing year.

BAPTIST REVIVAL IS INCITING INTEREST

Rev. J. C. Wood, Pastor, is Making Good Impression

Rev. Paul Gillespie occupied the local M. E. pulpit last Sunday morning for the first time since his assignment to the conference recently closed. Rev. Gillespie gave away at his evening service in favor of Rev. Wood's service at the Baptist church. Although the revival at the local Baptist church has not been strengthened by any additions at this writing it is no secret that none conducted here in recent years has been excelled by this one in the point of interest taken by the membership and the community in general.

Rev. Wood has shown that, in addition to being a pastor of exceptional "mixing" ability, he also possesses marked evangelistic qualities in the pulpit. His sermons grow more interesting each evening.

Indeed not a secondary feature of the meeting is the song service, which is being conducted by Rev. J. G. Dixon of Colorado. Not in years have Burlington audiences been favored by better vocal renditions than his solos. By special request he sings two each evening and especially were those of Sunday night well worth coming miles to hear.

Barring a change in plans, the meeting will close next Sunday evening.

ARVILLE MARTIN OF ELS. MERE DIES WEDNESDAY

Arville Martin, aged 16 years, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Martin, of Elsmere, passed away Wednesday at St. Elizabeth Hospital following an operation for removal of his appendix. Miller, in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were interred in Highland cemetery.

Arville had only been complaining a few days and was rushed to the hospital Monday and operated on immediately but complications had already set up which resulted in his death. He is survived by his parents and one brother.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

PETERSBURG WON FROM HEBRON, AND LOST TO FLORENCE

Petersburg defeated Hebron last Saturday afternoon in a close and well played game by the score of 3 to 2. The deciding run was scored in the ninth inning. Petersburg was reinforced by the Bellevue battery—Brady & Kyle.

Florence succeeded in taking the scalps of the Petersburg club last Sunday at Florence. The score was 5 to 3. The Petersburg boys played a very ragged game in the field.

The Recorder Is Fifty Years Old With This Weeks Issue

With the publication of this issue the RECORDER celebrates her golden anniversary, having completed fifty years of continuous circulation. It was on the fifteenth of September, 1875, that the late W. L. Riddell and C. C. Conner published the first issue of the RECORDER with four hundred and fifty subscribers. Mr. Conner is now a noted minister of the Universalist church. The firm of Riddell and Conner dissolved after about a year and the business was continued under the sole ownership of W. L. Riddell until 1883, when the firm of Riddell & Hall was formed. This firm published the paper until 1894, when Mr. Riddell again assumed complete control. He continued until the year of his death. Mr. Riddell died in the month of June 1921 after just 46 years of newspaper work.

The plant was taken over after W. L. Riddell's death by Judge N. E. Riddell, who was the sole proprietor until June 1st, 1924, when he disposed of a one-half interest to R. E. Berkshire, who purchased the remaining half interest on Feb. 21, 1925.

From a circulation of 450, fifty years ago, the paper has grown until at present there are more than 3,000 copies being printed each week.

Mr. F. A. Hall, who still has a business connection with the paper, has been with the publication for 47 years.

Howard Kirkpatrick has been on the force continuously for about 25 years, starting in the office as a mere news boy.

If the RECORDER's subscribers remain as faithful as have the employees, it will never want for a circulation.

Since February 21, we have had our difficulties, variations and worries, but through the loyalty and support of our friends, we have overcome many perplexing problems and placed in the hands of our readers regularly each week during the past nine months a copy of their old home paper.

For fifty years—a half century, the Recorder has circulated among the good people of Boone and adjoining counties, carrying praise for the living and tribute to the dead, telling you of the doings of your neighbors; of the many bridegroom and fair bride; of the advent of a darling babe that came to make home brighter; ever upholding the moral side of life and denouncing lawlessness and crime in all its forms.

We have done our very best to merit the generous patronage, we have received since February. If we have failed, it cannot be attributed to a lack of desire on our part to please and work in the interest of our patrons, town, county and state. To our good, loyal friends we extend our most sincere and heartfelt gratitude for the valuable support they have given the Recorder, under its present management.

We are still yours to command for the best interests of Boone county.

High Water Mark of Daredevilry

"The Cowboy Houdini" is a new sobriquet to which Buck Jones could honestly lay claim after his amazing performance in "The Desert Outlaw" his newest William Fox starring vehicle, which comes to Burlington and Petersburg Theatres Friday and Saturday of this week.

"Luck for the first time attempts and gets away with a super-stunt which he might well challenge Houdini, the world-famed handkerchief king, to duplicate.

A double-crossed by the party but a brave girl he has saved from a stage coach buck Jones as Sam Langdon, prospector hero, mounted on his horse "Silver," and handcuffed, is in the hands of the Sheriff. The charge is highway robbery and murder. The howling mob wants to lynch him.

Still handcuffed, Buck charges the Sheriff and mob, and breaks through. Still handcuffed, he leaps from the horse to the last car of a moving train. Still handcuffed, he crawls under the car and perches precariously on a brake-beam. Then he frees himself from the handcuffs by holding them against the carwheel till they're cut in two.

After this exploit, Buck Jones must rank as the "handcuff king of the cowboys" with due credit to his wonder horse "Silver," thru whose intelligent co-operation alone this most novel, ingenious and daring stunt was made possible.

The show at Burlington will begin at 8:30 p. m., after church.

NEW DISTRICT DEPUTY

Louis Steinfeld, of Latonia Lodge 107, Knights of Pythias, has been selected by the Grand Lodge of the order to be District Deputy for the Grand Chancellor, according to an announcement made yesterday by Grand Chancellor Joseph B. Dunkie. Mr. Steinfeld will begin his duties at 10 o'clock on Monday at the Boone and Grant counties.

MISS VIOLA DECK AND JESSE LOUDEN MARRIED THIS WEEK

MARKLAND REUNION WAS WELL ATTENDED

More Than Eighty of the Family Were in Attendance

The Markland reunion was held at the home of Nellie M. Markland and son on Labor Day. More than eighty of the family were present and it was indeed a meeting of unity. Four generations were present in one instance. So much musical and dramatic talent was present, the program was one worth going far to listen to. The recitation by the wife of Prof. U. D. Clepham of Evanson, Ohio, was fine, as was also that of the wife of Rev. Wm. Markland of Aurora, Ind. The songs of Harold Crigler, accompanied by his mother were as usual, received with great appreciation and applause, and other songs rendered were well received.

The big "spread" at noon time and the happy social feature will never be forgotten by those fortunate enough to be present.

Some of the family in the course of the day visited the grave yard of one branch of the ancestors of the family—known as the Hayden burial place, located on lands now owned by Tom Balsly and incidentally visited the first settlement of the pioneer Marklands just across the road on land now owned by Edgar C. Riley, where the Marklands purchased land in 1798, remained until 1805 when they crossed the river to North Bend and Green Township, where they bought sections and many of the descendants still have holdings there.

With a song by all the happy day came to a close to be taken up again when we will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roudesh, Harrison, Ohio, next year on Labor Day.

BARTON MASTERS OF CONSTANCE DIES LAST WEEK

Barton Warren Masters was born at Constance, Boone county, Ky., on January 23d, 1845. He was the son of Perry and Catherine Masters. The storms of life are o'er; Your bark has crossed the silent deep Life's conflicts come no more.

THE SCHOOL BELL

The sound of the school bell on the days of early September used to be considered a melancholy one by the kids of years ago. But that was before students had so many activities to keep them interested about.

Today school work is not disagreeable. Some claim it is not disagreeable enough, and that the young crowd are having too good a time and not learning to work as they should. However, you get a lot more out of a kid when he is thoroughly awake and interested.

Though youngsters begin the school year with a feeling that certain rewards are being offered that they would like mightily to win. They are not indifferent to their book work. It has been shown them that if they want to get anywhere in this world, they must begin right now and learn that hard old lesson. Wherefore the school bell, instead of a sound of sorrow is a kind of challenge to them here in Boone county that they must get about to begin and they must play it well.

AURORA FARMERS' FAIR

Good premiums are offered in all departments and every farmer in Dearborn and adjoining counties should show up with as many entries as possible.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL DEDICATED SUNDAY

Interesting Historical Facts About Early Catholic Church

The new St. Paul's school was dedicated at Florence last Sunday with a large assemblage witnessing the ceremony. Rev. Ebbing the local pastor of St. Paul's church has worked very hard for the completion of his school.

Some very interesting was disclosed at the dedication. In 1851 there were but three Catholics in Florence, which name the town was given by the Legislature in 1830, being changed from Connersville.

A Rev. Butler held the first mass in Florence in a log cabin. He was invited to the Christian church to explain the Catholic doctrine on the occasion of his first visit.

The names of the pioneer Catholics in Florence were Cornelius Ahern James Kennedy, Martin Farrell, Jos. Sullivan, Andrew Collins, Thomas Golden, John Usher, Jos. Fernandez Thomas Dorsey, Michael Carey, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Fred Culb, Mrs. Fred Rich and Mrs. Henry Oelsner.

HAS A NARROW ESCAPE LAST MONDAY EVENING

Mrs. J. W. Goodridge, of the Bellevue pike had a narrow escape from being killed or seriously wounded last Monday afternoon when her auto in which she was riding backed over the bank at the bridge just at the edge of town, but, fortunately, she escaped injury. She had brought her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Trumble, who were leaving for their home at San Diego, Calif., to town to catch the three o'clock bus, after their departure she started for home and had crossed the bridge and from some cause the auto backed to back and before she could check it, it went over the bank a distance of some 10 or 12 feet. She escaped without a scratch and very little damage to the auto.

AGED CITIZEN PASSES AWAY IN BURLINGTON

Was A School Mate Of The Late Gen. Basil W. Duke

At 7:00 o'clock Wednesday evening, Sept. 9th, 1925, the gentle spirit of Mrs. Martha Francis Hawes, aged 88 years, 9 months and ten days, winged its flight to Him who gave it. Deceased was the widow of Joseph B. Hawes, who preceded her to the grave thirty-seven years ago. The cause of her death was from the infirmities incident to old age and after a week's illness she closed her eyes on this world without pain or suffering.

Martha Hawes was a daughter of Edward and Susan Fowler, and was near Richmond, Va. 19th 1836. When thirteen years of age she moved to Burlington with her parents, where she made her "home" until death—seventy-six years. On Feb. 27th, 1865 she was united in marriage to Joseph Hawes. To this union three children were born, two daughters and one son, one daughter dying in 1888. She is survived by one son, Edward, of Covington, and Miss Marie Hawes, of Burlington and with whom she made her home. She is also survived by one brother C. A. Fowler, of Burlington and one sister Mrs. Laura Tilley, of Clearwater, Fla., who had left her sister's about two weeks ago.

In the death of Mrs. Hawes a truly good christian woman has passed to her reward, leaving many surviving relatives and friends to mourn her demise. She was a member of the Presbyterian church, having united with the church in early life.

Funeral services were held from the residence at 2:00 o'clock p. m., Friday, Sept. 10th, 1925, and after a short service at the grave, conducted by Rev. Paul G. Gillespie, of the M. E. church, the remains were laid to rest in the cemetery, just north of town, by the side of loved ones gone before.

The pall bearers were: R. S. Cowen, S. W. Tolin, Geo. Blythe, F. A. Hall, J. M. Eddins and Grover Jarrell. Undertaker C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Hawes was born on a farm which was once owned by the father of the late Basil W. Duke. She was a school-mate of Basil Duke at one time.

been in love with Gerald at some time or another. Sooner or later, the wise ones find him out and the butterfly ones fit away somewhere else. It may seem unattractive, but I am more concerned about you, Christopher, than Gerald."

He passed his arm through hers, an action which their increasing intimacy seemed to render perfectly natural. "Mary," he heard, "you are just the one person in the world to whom I could confess an impulse of folly, and this is, I suppose, the one place I could do it in. I frankly don't understand what you mean by being in love. When I have thought of marriage, it has been in connection with some dear woman friend who would make a home for me and be a companion. Of course, I expected to care for her and all that, but—promise me you won't laugh at me?" "I shall not laugh," Mary promised. "For the first time in my life, that child has made me think of other things." Christopher acknowledged simply, "I don't know that it amounts to anything. I dare say really it is an unsuspected vein of kindness which she has touched; but there it is. I have an absurd feeling of fondness for her. The idea of her becoming a plaything for Gerald or anybody makes a madman of me."

"Looks upon me as a kind person but an intolerable nuisance. She dreams of nobody but Gerald. If he lifts his little finger, she is his." "Really?" Mary frowned coldly. "Please don't judge her too harshly." Christopher begged, "Myrtle is temporarily incapable of a mean or an immoral action. She is just a child of nature, only instead of being away by the lower instincts, she is away by the higher ones. She loves Gerald, and nothing else counts with her. She would have thrown herself into the river sooner than have given herself in marriage to the innkeeper. She is equally capable of giving her life and her soul to Gerald, if he requires the sacrifice."

Mary turned her head towards the window. "I think that father wants his game of backgammon," she observed. "We had better go. I am afraid. We must talk of this again some time. Will you go first and say that I shall be there directly?"

Christopher stepped obediently through the window, and Mary passed on to the farther end of the terrace, where the shadows were deeper. For a moment her self-control slipped away. Her fingers gripped the ivy stalks fiercely. There were tears in her eyes, rather firm but sensitive little mouth quivered miserably. It seemed so much, that she, Christopher had first represented to her all that she desired in manhood—a man of character, a worker, a sportsman when the time came, always ambitious, always ready to pit his brain against the best, a man who would be in parliament, a cabinet minister later in life, perhaps. She had thought with happiness of the many ways in which she could further his career; had dreamed with pleasure of playing hostess for him in a joint establishment. She had known that the consummation of her wish was inevitable unless something should come between. And something had most unexpectedly come between—this peasant girl, this birth of a spurious sentiment—nothing in a man like Gerald, but very much to be dreaded in a person of Christopher's calm and steadfastness. She had a proud young woman, for all her gracious ways, and, although she refused to find anything final in his attitude, the pain that she suffered in those few moments was not only of the heart.

Christopher and his host, in the intervals of their game, talked of the latest suicide. With the usual amazing secrecy of the local press, not one word had appeared in any paper published in the vicinity. "I feel a great deal of sympathy for our neighbors," Lord Hinterley remarked. "Old Colonel Huskinson, whom I met on the terrace this morning, told me that the man was bringing the money for some estates he had sold, which were practically their only means of subsistence."

Lord Hinterley picked up his cards. Mary came in from the terrace and seated herself by Gerald's side. The quietness of the evening, however, was almost immediately disturbed. The butler threw open the door, announcing guests.

"The Ladies Victoria and Millicent Cromwell, Mr. James Cromwell, Lady Eshedon." They all trooped in—intimates of the young people of the house. "We want you to come down to the club for an hour or two," Lady Victoria, who was always the leading spirit, suggested. "Dad's just paid my dress allowance, and I'm dying to lose it, and Jimmy's going to give us supper and take us to which some where afterwards."

an early morning stroll and displaying an almost feminine partiality for the shop windows, when the former suddenly felt his friend's hand tighten upon his arm. They had paused to look through the plate glass window of a jeweler's shop in the Rue de Paris.

"What is it, old chap?" Christopher asked. "Gerald pointed to a pearl necklace which hung in the window. 'You see that?' he exclaimed. 'That belonged to Pauline—to Mademoiselle de Pontiere. And that marquis ring below—I am perfectly certain her aunt was wearing. Wait a moment, old fellow.' Gerald entered the shop hastily. A very suave Frenchman came forward to meet him.

"Can you tell me anything about that pearl necklace and the rings below?" Gerald inquired. "But certainly, sir," the man replied. "One moment." He manifested the window and brought out the stand on which the necklace hung. The color of the pearls was wonderful. They were not large, but they had an almost pink glow.

"I have no doubt Monsieur is a judge and I need say little about these pearls," the shopman began. "I would point out to you, however, that they were matched for royalty itself, and the quality of each one is superlative. If Monsieur is a purchaser, I could give him seven thousand pounds, and for that sum there is not such another necklace in the world."

"I recognize the necklace," Gerald admitted. "I might, under certain circumstances, be induced to buy it. I came in, however, to ask you how you obtained possession of it, and the rings below?"

"The man's number changed," the jeweler explained. "I was able to explain exactly how this jewelry came into our hands. There are certain conditions which, in the interests of our clients, we are forced to respect."

"Quite so," Gerald agreed, "but I can assure you that I am not an impatient inquirer. This is my name"—he handed the man a card—and I was an acquaintance of Mademoiselle de Pontiere, from whom you must have obtained this necklace. I last saw Mademoiselle and Mademoiselle de Pontiere under very tragic circumstances, and I understand that they have now left Monte Carlo. I am most anxious to obtain word as to their whereabouts."

"I regret deeply that I am entirely powerless in the matter, Monsieur," the man replied. Gerald held up the pearls and let them slip through his fingers. He remembered something which Pauline had once said to him—"Pearls are the maidens' children. They love and care for them as such."

"I have reason to surmise," Gerald went on, "that a misfortune has befallen these ladies. If they had confided in me, it would have given me the greatest pleasure to have offered them assistance."

ent marked interest. "Any bond on $30,000 nursery governesses' salary, it seems silly," Christopher said, lowering his voice a little as Myrtle drew near, or so," Christopher replied. "They can't take her for a nurse on $30,000 a year, can they?"

Gerald laughed. "And you don't trust her here with me, old chap, is that it?" "Something like it, I'm afraid," the other admitted frankly. Gerald sighed.

"What a Lothario you must think me," he declared. "As a matter of fact, Chris, I don't think that the ingenuities do attract me very much. I am too young and unsophisticated myself. It is hardened sinners like you who are bowled over by rusticity and morals. I prefer something a little more advanced in the world's ways."

"Then, for heaven's sake, leave the others alone!" Christopher enjoined. "We have a difficult task before us with Myrtle, especially as for once in her life, Mary doesn't seem inclined to help us. Treat the child sensibly for heaven's sake."

"What do you mean by 'sensibly,' old chap?" "Well, remember that she has to be a nursery governess and not a Parisian demi-mondaine. It is idiotic to take her to these smart restaurants and dancing places. It's outside her life. It gives her false ideas."

"Frankly, you bore me about Myrtle," Gerald declared. "You ought to have been born in the days of dear old Oliver Cromwell. My idea is that girls were made to live like butterflies, to be happy just in the few hours when the sun shines."

"You have not even the philosophy of the puzen," Christopher retorted. "You forget that the butterfly enjoys the supreme advantage of being uncumbered with a soul."

The street door was suddenly opened in their faces. They had arrived at Myrtle's lodgings, to find her issuing into the street. She seemed to look through Christopher at Gerald, who was a pace or two behind. Her smile was wonderful.

"I know that something pleasant was going to happen this morning," she exclaimed. "I felt it when I got up."

"You were quite right," Gerald assured her. "Something very pleasant is going to happen. I am going to take you over to Nice in the car to-morrow."

Myrtle clasped her hands. "Wait one moment," she begged. "I must go and get some different gloves. I'll be back before you get to the corner of the street."

"It will be very largely my responsibility," Christopher said, lowering his voice a little as Myrtle drew near, "whether that beauty is going to be a curse or a happiness to her. Don't you forget that, Gerald."

Chapter XI. Gerald was absolutely amazed as he led Myrtle back to their seat in the palm court of the hotel. They had lunched, wandered about the town, and afterward made their way back to the hotel lounge, where a tea daint was in progress.

"Why, where on earth did you learn to dance like that, Myrtle?" he demanded. She laughed softly. "Learn?" she exclaimed. "Why, there has never been any one to teach me. I have never had a lesson in my life. I just listened to the music and watched the people, and then I saw that it was quite easy. Oh, how I love it!"

"What a pity it can't have you to my supper party tonight!" Gerald sighed. She leaned toward him. She was still a little out of breath. Her cheeks were pink, her eyes aglow.

"I shouldn't come, please," she begged. "I should be so happy." Gerald looked doubtful. "There would be the devil to pay with Christopher," he pointed out. "And, besides, it really isn't the place for you."

"What do you mean?" she persisted. "Well, it's a bohemian sort of affair," Gerald explained, a little awkwardly. "The girls aren't all of them just what they should be."

Myrtle laughed again. "But what does that matter?" she protested. "They will not hurt me or I them. When I am not dancing with you, I can sit alone and talk to no one."

Gerald shook his head. "Can't be done, little girl," he decided, regretfully. "Christopher is quite right when he says I ought not to encourage the taste for that sort of life in you at all. These girls all drink a lot of champagne, and smoke furiously—lead rosy lives, most of them—and their conversation is sometimes—well, it wouldn't be fit for you to listen to. Some evening or other I'll have quite a small party—just one or two who I know are all right."

"That isn't what I want," Myrtle declared. "I want to go to the party to-night. You will dance with other girls if I am not there. I don't want you to—tomorrow, at any rate. You have danced with me, and it was wonderful."

"I begin to think that I don't want to dance with any one else myself," Gerald confessed, looking at her admiringly. "I'll think it over on the way back."

They made their way out to the open space in front of the hotel, where Gerald had left the car, and very soon they were on their way homeward. Driving for the first half-hour, absorbed Gerald's whole attention, and Myrtle leaned back in the low seat by his side, filled with the joy of their rapid ascent, the smooth, birdlike motion which seemed to be taking them with scarcely an effort, up into the clouds.

"Gerald!" she whispered. "Myrtle!" he begged, "you must not."

Then all Gerald's good resolutions crumbled for the moment. Her lips were pressed to his, warm and sweet, passionate with the fervor which comes from the soul alone, which takes no count of lesser things than the heaven where, to the innocent, love only dwells. She rested in his arms, tumultuously happy. Somewhere in the field below was a bonfire of fallen pine boughs, and for years afterward the smell of burning wood, fragrant and aromatic, brought back to Gerald the memory of those few seconds. There was a flash of lights below from an approaching automobile. Gerald drew away, pale and a little remorseful. Myrtle's face was like the face of a child who has seen Heaven.

"We must get on," he said hoarsely. She lay back in her place without moving until they began the last descent into the town. "May I come to your party tonight, Gerald—now?" she whispered. "No!"

She laughed quietly to herself. There was no longer any shadow of disappointment in her face. "That you are very foolish," she remonstrated. "How can you think that it would not be well for me to be where you are? Besides, I want you to dance with me. There are very beautiful young ladies who come to your parties—Christopher showed me some of them at the opera."

"There is not one of them so beautiful as you are," he declared. She smiled happily. "Will you think so tonight?" she asked. "I shall think so all the time—and I shall miss you horribly," he assured her.

"Perhaps you will, perhaps you will not," she replied emphatically. "You must put me down here. This is my corner."

She jumped lightly down, with only a touch of his fingers for farewell. Gerald, although he had set a stern face against the rush of ideas and anticipations which were crowding into his brain, felt a little pang of disappointment as she left him without further protest. He would never have allowed her to come, he told himself, as he drove slowly off. Yet at that moment he had a vision. He escaped a taxicab by a few inches.

Myrtle waited until Gerald was out of sight. Then she crossed the square, walked a few steps along the Rue de la Paix, paused before the door of Madame Lenore's little establishment, and pushed it open. Madame Lenore herself came forward. There was something sinister, though not unfriendly, in the smile with which she greeted her visitor.

"Can I do for mademoiselle?" she inquired. "What I have the clothes for the evening which you showed me when I first came here?" Myrtle asked, a little anxiously. "But certainly, mademoiselle," the Frenchwoman answered graciously. "Mademoiselle desires them for this evening?"

"I want to wear them tonight," was the happy reply. "There are some other things mademoiselle will require," Madame said, thoughtfully. "And it will be necessary for mademoiselle to have the coiffeur. Mademoiselle will place herself in my hands for the evening? I'll promise that there is not a girl in Monte Carlo who will be half so beautiful."

"Are Either of you in Love With Her?" Mary Asked.

Mary asked, raising her eyes and looking her companion in the face. "Christopher hesitated for several moments before answering. Mary began to tear into small pieces the sprig of oleander which she was holding. Her face seemed suddenly to have become very white and tired. "I am sure that Gerald is not," Christopher answered. "As for me—well, that sort of thing is a little out of my line, isn't it? The most serious part of the situation is that I am afraid the child is in love with Gerald."

"She will get over that," Mary said dryly. "Most of the girls I know have

"That Was Rather My Idea," He Admitted. "Have You Anything Against It?"

Christopher passed his hand through his hair. "I don't know," he said. "I don't know whether I have a right even to say so much," he continued, after a moment's hesitation. "But it suggests itself that it was owing to Monsieur Zubin's embezzlements—he is reported to have lost several millions at the tables—that the ladies whom we have been discussing found themselves temporarily embarrassed."

GIRLS MEN LIKE
What kind of girls do men like? As a rule men like good looking girls. Providence, however, has mercifully ordained that beauty shall lie in the eye of the beholder, and so many men are so constituted that they are able to find beauty in girls who bear no resemblance to Venus in the eye of other beholders. Men like simplicity. The girl who simper, and smirks, and rolls her eyes; who walks with a mincing gait, and who adopts a broad "a" when a flat "a" prevails in her community, does so at her peril.

Men like the girl who is honest enough not to pretend to be anything but what she is. Men like jolly, good-natured girls. Girls whose laugh is hung on a hair trigger and who are always willing to make the best of things and who fit in easily anywhere. Girls who don't get peeved at every little thing that goes wrong. Girls who are good sports. But most of all what men like is the eternal feminine. It is the womanly woman that men flock around as bees about a honey pot. No real he-man likes to see a woman dressed up in trousers. The frillier and fluffier a woman's clothes are the more men admire them.

SCHOOL BEGINS
September brings the pupils back to the schools of Boone County. The people of our community wish these teachers and pupils a good year of work, and hope that the youngsters will take advantage of their opportunities. We have always had good schools in this community, and on the whole the children have shown a willingness to work.

We may not have all the facilities that are given in the big schools of the cities, but enthusiasm on the part of the pupils will count many times more than the most costly equipment. If these youngsters want to make their way in the world, they have got to begin right now to learn their lessons. The doors of success open wide to the boy or girl who demonstrates ability as a student.

BACK TO THE COUNTRY
Interest is excited by the news that Henry Ford has been buying large tracts of land in one of the most rural sections of Georgia, and it is reported that he contemplates spending some time there each year. Thus it will be found that a very large part of the country's wealthy men are buying country tracts and old farm and village homes, showing how deeply country scenes interest them. It would quite likely be found that a large majority of rich men now make their homes in the country and spend all the time they can there.

Some may remark that it may be very fine for a rich man to select a country location for a home, when he can spend money to fit it up with every conceivable comfort, and when he can afford to go away and travel whenever he feels the need for a change.

But it may be claimed that when the ordinary person buys a country home, such a one has to settle down there and spend most of the time there, very likely in a home having many inconveniences and limitations. Also it will be said that the chances to make money in the country are commonly not very good.

Yet the fact that all these wealthy men and city folks desire the country homes has to be explained somehow. It suggests that those who have tried the pleasures of city residence usually get tired of them after a few years. But there are certain pleasures that are enjoyed in the country that touch the human heart more deeply, and they do not wear out.

Many people have found these satisfactions of the rural home so sweet, that they make up for a good deal of limitation in the way of money and luxury. The friendships of a good country town, its simple and cordial relations, the loveliness of natural scenery, are some of these things that no money can buy. Any one can have them in a country town and it is worth making great sacrifices to get them.

The coal situation promises to be one of the big questions before Congress this winter, the strike in the anthracite fields having raised a number of problems which probably will call for Congressional action. John Hayes Hammond, former Chairman of the Federal Coal Commission which conducted an investigation of the soft and hard coal industry, and urged that arrangements be made for permanent federal regulation, is again urging that serious consideration be given to these recommendations. In the meantime, the Federal Government, taking its cue from President Coolidge, has adopted a hands off policy and is sitting back to see what happens between the warring miners and operators in Pennsylvania. Luckily there is plenty of hard coal above ground to care for present needs and the Government is prepared, should emergency arise, to help the public get substitutes for anthracite. In some quarters the belief prevails that the anthracite miners and operators are merely cutting their own throats and that the result of the strike will be that the public will learn how to get along very well without hard coal.

The Navy Department has determined that there will be no set-back in the development of aviation despite the fatal crash of the dirigible Shenandoah and the disastrous attempt to fly from San Francisco to Hawaii. Hard luck always hits the Navy in big batches. Let there be one serious disaster and another is always sure to follow on its heels. This has been true many times in the case of naval vessels at sea, but the Shenandoah wreck was probably the most spectacular disaster that has hit the Navy in recent years. The big airship was about the best known vehicle in the country and had been seen and admired by hundreds of thousands of persons from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The attitude of aviation officials, however, is that the officers and men killed on the Shenandoah and in other aerial crashes were victims in the cause of science and that the work must go on until man has finally conquered the air and rendered it absolutely safe. One of the tragic things in this connection was that the Shenandoah was regarded as the safest craft that had been sent into the air, its collapse means that greater efficiency will now be necessary.

The belief is growing that the biggest debt now due the U. S.—the four billion dollars owed by France—will be adjusted and arrangements made for payment before the end of September. Members of the American Debt Commission feel that Finance Minister Caillaux of France and his advisers, who are coming to Washington within the next two weeks, are anxious to settle the debt as is anyone in this country. No reasonable offer will be turned down by the American Government as the adjustment of this big war obligation at the earliest possible date is regarded as essential to the economic betterment of both the U. S. and of France. American holders of Liberty Bonds and other war time securities will be protected, however, as this is one of the things that Congress has insisted upon.

Congressional leaders have been advised that President Coolidge wants tax revision placed at the head of legislative business in December. A definite tax reform plan will be prepared and submitted to Congress by Secretary Mellon, but many conflicting views of the complex problem of federal revenue and taxation are expected to be forthcoming before a new revenue bill is finally drafted and started on the way to enactment. One of the important collateral issues will be the subject of publicity for income tax payments especially in view of the great chorus of objections that have gone up throughout the country since the income tax records were made available for public inspection on September 1. Newspapers almost without exception have condemned the publicity provision, despite its approval by the Supreme Court, and loud demands for prompt repeal will be in order, backed up by the Administration.

John W. Weeks continues as Secretary of War, officially at least, keeping the President and his friends busy denying that he intends to resign, but the understanding in authoritative Washington circles is that he will quit, probably in the near future. Reports reaching here indicate that Weeks is slowly regaining his health, but that he does not feel strong enough to undergo another winter in Washington as the head of a busy Government Department. The understanding is that he has told the President that he wants to resign.

James G. Smith sold Tuesday afternoon to J. J. Duncan, his house and lot on Gallatin street in the town of Burlington. Consideration not known.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Smith and children have returned to their home in Lexington after spending three weeks in Boone county visiting their kinspeople.

W. M. S. NOTES

The Women's Missionary Society met at the Bellevue Baptist church July 3rd. Twenty-five women were present to study the lesson on Stewardship as given in the Royal Service.

These lessons are helpful to us, and we would be glad indeed, if every woman who is a member of our church would feel it her duty and privilege to meet with us the first Thursday in each month to learn more about Mission Work.

There were two meetings which I failed to report. One in May at the church, the other in June at Mrs. Robt. Aylor's. Do not forget the meeting at the church on Sunday, the 27th of September for special prayer for State Missions.

GOOD BUSINESS

Thirty years ago the Standard Oil Company demonstrated to the business world that competition was the "death" of trade instead of the "life of trade." By applying modern business methods it cut the price of kerosene 75 per cent. It early recognized that the American wage earner wants no paternalism—just a square deal—and as a result the Standard is never troubled with strikes. It has cut the cost of labor turn-over to the minimum by making ownership not only desirable but possible. The company adds 50 per cent bonus to the amount invested in the company, and under this plan the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey will this year distribute $27,000,000 in stock to employees. The company provides death and disability benefits, opportunities for special training, old age pensions and vacations with pay.

The labor policy has been adopted, first, as a matter of simple justice to the employee; and second, in the confident belief that fair and liberal dealings in industrial relations are worth while from the standpoint of the stockholder—in short, that they are good business.

THE COST OF LIVING

The cost of living is now 73 per cent greater than it was in 1913, according to U. S. Department of labor figures. But this level of prices is still far below the peak of 1920, when prices reached 116 per cent above 1913. Nevertheless, prices are still far too high. This level must have a tendency all the time to prevent many families from buying goods, and thus help to unsettle business and cause unemployment.

One reason why these costs have increased lately, is that food prices have not been as high relatively as the general level of values. The farmers have been complaining bitterly over this discrepancy, which has led to much suffering in agricultural districts. A great many have quit farming, which has tended to reduce the surplus of agricultural products, and thus enable them to command higher prices.

Prices ought to come down. Yet it is difficult to see how they can be reduced, unless the cost of labor is lowered, and the wage earning people will fight bitterly any reduction of their pay unless the same is preceded by lower costs for commodities. When the price of an article gets too high, the public can do something to keep it down by restricting purchases thereof, and using something else in its place wherever possible. Not all prices can be controlled in that way, but if people use ingenuity in such ways, they can very often teach a lesson to those who are forcing values up to a point beyond reason.

It is well to remember that the extremely high prices of 1920 were controlled by a buyer's strike. This sudden refusal of people to buy may have done harm in many ways, but at times this form of drastic action has to be taken to keep the level of values within reason.

The people who have been growling because it was too warm, will soon be grunting because it is too cold.

"THE FINEST APPLE IN ALL THE WORLD"

—That's what Luther Burbank calls Stark Delicious, "The King of all Red Apples." Do you know that YOU can raise as fine

STARK DELICIOUS apples as ever came out of the Northwest—or Missouri? Just in your backyard—or in a spare acre or two on your farm. Or—plant THE APPLE TREES, THAT BORE WHEN TWO YEARS OLD IN 33 STATES—

STARK'S GOLDEN DELICIOUS This is the famous "$5,000. Tree in a Cage"—the apple that was awarded the Wilder Medal by The American Pomological Society. Can be bought only through Stark Bros. or their Representatives.

Why not plant a few acres to fruit? Within an hour's drive of which is being fed from the North West. Freight on fruit from Oregon and Washington is 9 to 11 hundred dollars per car. You can grow as fine apples with much better flavor. Make money if you had only what they pay for freight. 130 Golden Delicious apple trees last year bore 1220 Boxes which sold for $4.57 per box F. O. B. Car brought $5,583.00 or $42.25 per tree. We sell all kinds of fruit shade and ornamental trees and shrubs, Flowers and Roses. Leading varieties of apples 2 to 3 feet 50 cents; Peaches 3 to 5 feet 45 cents. We furnish up-to-date instructions on how to plant, grow and spray orchards for profit FREE. If you want anything in our line write me and I will call and assist you in making the best selections.

FALL FESTIVITIES

The removal of the activities of the community organizations is a pleasant feature of the early fall weeks. The women are appointing those committees who later will prepare those gorgeous suppers for the churches and fraternal societies. Already our prize cooks are dreaming about those festive triumphs by which they will make social events interesting in Boone county during the coming months.

The promoters of entertainments are also meditating over the jolly stunts they propose to spring on us. Those who get up plays and concerts are laying plans for performances that will attract the bright folks of our community. A great many interesting things happen in this county during the fall and winter, and much credit is due to the enterprise and energy of those who plan and arrange for them.

It is always possible for a candidate to get elected if he shouts for economy, but more often difficult to get re-elected after he has practiced it.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Lexington—Charles M. Boyd, 8-year-old negro of Keene, Jessamine county, was fatally injured when struck by an automobile driven by C. B. Porterfield of Lexington.

Owensboro—Miss Sophia Hazelrigg, 16, was declared by judges to be the most beautiful young woman in the beauty parade at the Daviess County Fair and Exposition. There were fifty-two girls in the parade, all riding in automobiles.

Owensboro—Otto Dodson, 23, held in jail on a charge of possession of liquor, was formally charged with manslaughter in a warrant sworn to by Powers Logsdon, whose brother, Joseph Logsdon, died from the effects of drinking alleged poison liquor.

Paducah—Eight black saw blades and a small knife, which three prisoners in the McCracken county jail had been using in an attempt to escape from their cell were found in the cell after the men had been removed to the jail basement for breakfast.

Nicholasville—A violent electrical and windstorm, accompanied by hail and but little rain, swept over the eastern section of this county blowing down barns, uprooting trees and breaking out windows. The total damage done by the storm is estimated at upward of $25,000.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—John Hamilton, farmer, of near Side View, this county, surrendered after a shooting affray in which he seriously wounded Oscar Tally, a neighbor. He has been released under bond of $1,000. An argument about a money account is believed to have led to the shooting.

Newport, Ky.—Attempts of two negro prisoners to escape from the Newport jail were frustrated by Jailer Edward Mulder. Hearing suspicious sounds coming from the cell room, Mulder investigated and discovered several kitchen knives that had been secreted by the negroes and fashioned into crude saws.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—In Menifee County an automobile turned over on a curve above Frenchburg. The driver, a 100-foot embankment. Morton Faulkner, 33, and a young son of 10, were killed. Several other persons were otherwise injured. They were removed to the Presbyterian Hospital at Frenchburg, where they are unconscious and it is feared they die.

Lawrenceburg—Crossing the Kentucky River at Clifton, the ferryboat, carrying a live-truck and its cargo, a cow and several sheep, sank on the Woodford side of the river. The machine was the property of J. W. Rankin of Lawrenceburg, who was driving it. Rankin and Ed Wilkins, owner of the stock and the ferryman, reached the shore safely. The truck and boat will both be recovered.

Lexington, Ky.—Col. M. F. Elkin, this city, State Macabre commander, received word of the drowning of his friend, Dr. A. J. Irwin, near his home at Goshen, Ind. Irwin was preparing for a visit to Lexington. According to the report to Elkin, Irwin was fishing in Wasee Lake when a sudden wind arose, swamped his boat and Irwin drowned. Irwin was 69 and was recently nominated for mayor of Irwin.

Georgetown, Ky.—Scott County remains in the grip of a drought unprecedented in its recorded history. The water in Big Spring, Georgetown's source of drinking water, has reached a very low level and, while no immediate danger of a water famine is entertained by Manager S. L. Allen, the citizens of the town have been asked by Mayor Z. Y. Myers and the City Council to use the water as conservatively as possible.

Princeton—Kimball Underwood, Jr., 4 years old, had a remarkable escape from serious injury here when he was struck by an automobile in front of the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Underwood, Sr. The little fellow while crossing the street was struck and knocked down by an automobile, the entire length of the car passing over him. An examination by a physician showed that he escaped serious injury.

Paducah—Fred Jones, 7 years old, son of a McCracken county farmer, mysteriously shot near the home of his father on August 23, has confessed to his father that the shooting was accidental. It was learned. The boy told his father that he picked up a shotgun cartridge, threw it against a tin can to see what it would do, and the shell exploded. The boy's body was peppered with the shot and physicians found it necessary to amputate two fingers.

Mayaville, Ky.—Fire at Heifa, this county, destroyed the home of Best Wood, a blacksmith shop and an unoccupied dwelling owned by Mrs. Robert Cook, of this city, and an old house stored with tobacco. The loss is about $5,000 with no insurance.

Henderson, Ky.—Altho three men have been arrested and charged with robbery and arson in connection with the crime wave that has struck Henderson in the last three months, police are still involved because of a $20,000 fire and a series of robberies lately.

Boone County Apple Exhibit Takes First At The State Fair

Livestock Judging Team and Sewing Clubs Also Take Honors

Boone county apples won first tie in the County Display at the Kentucky State Fair held at Louisville, last week.

In competition with seven other Kentucky counties Boone-co, fruit selected by our county agent, surprised all from authorities of the State when the judges tied first ribbon on it. This was the highest award in the fruit show and carried with it a $100 premium.

The exhibit was made up of 50 trays and 50 plates of at least 10 varieties of apples.

Our fruit came from the orchards of Liston Hempling, Constance, J. W. Goodridge, Burlington; Sterling Rouse, Pt. Pleasant and O. C. Hafer, Hebron. The fruit won on its being of good size and free from all disease. This proves that our men are spraying and taking care of their orchards.

Jefferson county won second and Warren county third. The Jefferson county fruit was taken from one orchard and the Warren county fruit from two.

Boone County Jr., Sewing Girls won $65.50 of the $200 offered at the State Fair. This gives them the credit of winning more than any other county in the state, although some counties have as high as $4 clubs and Boone has only four.

Girls exhibiting were Rhea Clair Walton, Dorothy Jean Hood and Virga Lee Walton, of Hebron and Hillma Satchell, Francis Blankenbaker, Edna Jetter Carrie Florence and Dorothy McHenry, of Florence. The Florence Sewing Club received a big write up in the Louisville papers as being the highest winners in the state.

They were lead by Mrs. Matson and the Hebron club was lead by Mrs. J. W. Goodridge.

WINNING TEAM

The Boone County Jr., Livestock Judging Team which competed with 62 other teams from as many Kentucky counties finished in sixth place in the contest. William Townsend of Union, scored highest on the Boone county team, Hubert Townsend, Union, second and John Crigler, Hebron third. The L. & N. Railway gave free transportation to the four members of the team.

The Recorder wishes to congratulate the winners and urge that they keep the good work going.

PEACE IS RESTORED IN HEBRON AT LAST BY EVANGELIST

Herrin, Ill., which became a byword for lawlessness and crime, has been converted, according to report, and harsh words and gun toting have given way to Psalm reading and Bible carrying. Howard S. Williams, tall and peppery evangelist, once a newspaper man, is hailed as the peace negotiator.

Williams hails from Hattiesburg, Miss., and when he decided that he could be of some service in "Bloody Williamson County," he went in and began preaching a new doctrine—the men shall be their brothers' keepers instead of their destroyers.

His arrival followed the last memorial street duel, in which Glenn Young, Ora Thomas and two other men had been shot down. This had been a chapter added to the period of hate that had swept Williamson county since 1922.

Williams opened a small revival service, as many another evangelist had done. The town at first paid little attention to this stranger who spoke of the "Brotherhood of Man."

But as Williams unlimbered the crowd increased. Bitter factionalists started to attending the tabernacle where Williams held sway. The conversions began to mount.

Then one day Williams surprised everyone by walking into the lobby of the cigar store where Glenn Young had fought his last battle. With very few words the evangelist started his little group of helpers to singing a hymn. There was a brief talk and a prayer.

After that Herrin and Williamson County belonged to the youthful evangelist. Stores closed at noon for an hour so that everyone could attend the noon-day services. The night services were packed.

Sheriff George Galligan, whose name a few months ago evoked a hasty oiling of pistols, went into town unmolested. His deputies walked at his side. They visited the tabernacle and following the service some 5,000 persons walked up to shake the hand of the sheriff.

Williams has closed his meetings and departed. However the town continues peace bent, with eyes turned toward improving the land—rather than "bumping off" opponents.

FIVE HUNDRED ACRES ON DIXIE HIGHWAY

Will Be Sold By Master Commissioner At Court House Door

On Monday October 5th, 1925, the Master Commissioner will sell to the highest bidder at the court house door one of the largest and most valuable pieces of property that has been sold in this county for many years.

There are about five hundred and forty acres of this land which lies in several different tracts, and it will be sold in order to settle the estate of the late Lucy A. Carpenter. The Walton Bank & Trust Company, represented by Chas. Strother and S. D. Rouse, attorneys, is the administrator. O. M. Rogers, of Covington, represents two of the defendants.

One of these tracts containing about 4 acres lies in the town of Walton with considerable frontage on Main street. One tract containing 181 acres is one of the finest blue grass farms in this section and also possesses a frontage of about one-half mile or more on the highway. There is another tract on the opposite side of the highway abutting thereon and which contains about 35 acres. The old Carpenter homestead with dwelling and out-buildings and containing about 133 acres lies within about 1/2 mile of the Dixie and is adjoined by another tract containing 98 acres. Both of these tracts adjoin the Richmond and Beaver pike which is one of the best roads in the county with a daily bus line running directly to Cincinnati in one direction and Carrollton and Warsaw in the other. There are also various other tracts. Those interested in real estate should not overlook this sale.

Slavback was purchased at the close of last season by the Norfolk club from the Morristown, Tennessee team of the Appalachian League. He played the first month of the past season with Norfolk during which time his batting average was .257 but was farmed out to the Hanover, Penn., team of the Blue Ridge League, due, it is thought, to some trouble with the Secretary of the Norfolk club.

After playing with Hanover for a month, during which time he belted the pellet for an average of .420, he was recalled by Norfolk, where he finished the season. His batting for the rest of the season was .359, an enviable average. He made 222 home runs during the time he was with Norfolk, to say nothing of the large number of triples and doubles he was credited with, showing that he continued to crash fences as he started with the Maysville club.

ADAMS NOW TEACHING IN EASTERN COLLEGE

Former Local Pastor In Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary

The Recorder has just received a letter from W. W. Adams, former pastor of the Burlington Baptist church. When Rev. Adams left Burlington it was his intention to go to Japan as a missionary, but for reasons explained in the letter he could not go. For the enlightenment of Mr. and Mrs. Adams' numerous friends in Boone county, we will quote the letter herewith:

Philadelphia, Penn., Sept. 19th, 1925.

Dear Berkshire: We received the roll of Records and spent an entire afternoon simply devouring them. Thanks to you and time I look for the Recorder like a homesick girl looks for a letter from home. You put out a good paper and I enjoy it.

You may be interested to know that I have come here to teach in The Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary. I have the chair of New Testament. Interpretation, Greek and English. The outlook is very fine. On account of their indebtedness the Foreign Mission Board people could not send out any new missionaries, and as teaching is to be my work, I am delighted to have this opportunity to be training further for teaching wherever I may be, at home or abroad.

I had a great summer in Alabama. Preached in almost every part of the State, held meetings, organized a weak church. Left them with a full-time pastor.

Mrs. Adams and I are well. We have already planned to visit Burlington to or from Alabama next summer. Let me hear from you.

Mr. Rouse is one of the best fruit men in North Kentucky and takes great pride in his orchard. He uses power sprayer, and latest method of pruning and spraying, and attributes part of his success to knowledge acquired thru Extension work. Besides looking after his own orchard he does the spraying for many others in this part of the county.

Mrs. Laura Martin and daughter Miss Nell were Cincinnati visitors Monday.

BOONE COUNTY BOY SOLD TO THE GIANTS

"Scout" Slavback Has Big Year At Norfolk And "Goes Up"

It has been several years since Boone county fans witnessed a game of base ball in which Elbert Slavback, better known as "Scout," participated.

"Scout's" father, known to all fans as Mont, was one of the best catchers who ever donned the mask and protector in this county.

Herewith is quoted from the Enquirer the latest "dope" on the younger Slavback:

Maysville, September 17.—Scout Slavback, star second baseman of the Maysville team of the Blue Grass League of recent years, who for the past season has been the property of the Norfolk, Va., team of the Virginian League, has been sold by that team to the New York Giants of the National League, to report to them next spring. Mr. and Mrs. Slavback arrived in Maysville yesterday from Norfolk to spend the winter here.

The Virginia League season closed Saturday.

Slavback was purchased at the close of last season by the Norfolk club from the Morristown, Tennessee team of the Appalachian League. He played the first month of the past season with Norfolk during which time his batting average was .257 but was farmed out to the Hanover, Penn., team of the Blue Ridge League, due, it is thought, to some trouble with the Secretary of the Norfolk club.

After playing with Hanover for a month, during which time he belted the pellet for an average of .420, he was recalled by Norfolk, where he finished the season. His batting for the rest of the season was .359, an enviable average. He made 222 home runs during the time he was with Norfolk, to say nothing of the large number of triples and doubles he was credited with, showing that he continued to crash fences as he started with the Maysville club.

REVIVAL CLOSED AT BAPTIST CHURCH LAST SUNDAY

Rev. A. B. Wood, pastor of the local Baptist church, closed a two weeks revival last Sunday evening. The success of this meeting nor the interest aroused, could not be correctly measured by the number of additions to the church, as there were but two of these, Mr. Wendell Easton, and his mother Mrs. Fannie Easton, coming by confession. This, however, could not represent the splendid interest taken by the membership of the church.

Rev. J. G. Dickson who had charge of the devotional and song service, and who made such a striking impression with his solo work, expressed his intense regret in being compelled to leave the people here.

Rev. and Mrs. Wood accompanied Rev. Dickson to Louisville early Monday morning where the three of them will resume their work in the seminary.

The meeting had a rather "stormy" closing, as the congregation was compelled to remain in the building for more than a half hour after dismissed by the raging elements on the outside.

JAMES H. BLYTHE, MARRIED AT GLENORA, CALIFORNIA

The following is taken from the Glendora, (Cal.) Gleaner of September 4th:

"As high noon yesterday (Thursday) in the Methodist Parsonage, Dr. Inwood officiating, Mr. James H. Blyth, a long time resident of this city, was married to Mrs. Mary F. Johnson, residing on N. Vista Bonita. After the ceremony Mrs. Inwood served lunch to the bridal party who later left for San Diego for a short trip."

Mr. Blyth is a former resident of Burlington and a brother of Mr. Geo. Blyth of this place, Mr. H. W. Blyth, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Mrs. F. P. Walton, of Covington.

CONFISCATED AUTOS SOLD

Sheriff Hume sold at the court house door last Saturday afternoon a Roe speed wagon and a Buick Six Roadster. These were the property of "moonshiners" and were confiscated after a recent raid near Richwood.

R. S. Hensley, of Bellevue, purchased the Roe truck at $490 while E. S. Eddins of Burlington became the owner of the Buick at $425. This money will be turned into the state treasury.

Mr. B. Pinz, of Covington R. F. D. dropped in the office one day last week and purchased another yearly ticket to our reading circle.

Miss Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Canon was operated upon at Christ Hospital last Thursday for nasal trouble. At last reports she was getting along nicely.

FINANCE COMMITTEE STILL SHORT OF GOAL

Two Hundred, Three Dollars Still To Be Raised Saturday Night

The finance committee of the Burlington P. T. A. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Renaker last Saturday evening to receive the reports of convancers.

Judge Lansing is the Chairman of the committee with J. G. Smith, J. M. Eddins, M. A. Yelton, W. Lee Cropper, Mrs. L. C. Weaver, Mrs. D. B. Blythe, Mrs. W. L. Cropper, Mrs. Cassius Sullivan and Mrs. Thomas Hersley as assistants. When final tally had been made it was learned that they were still short of their goal by a margin of $203.00. The committee left the meeting with a determination to raise the balance by Friday night, Sept. 25th, when its members will again meet and make a final report. It would certainly be a shame to fall short of their aim by only a few dollars after such a splendid showing.

It is certainly a worthy cause. This is the county high school and the class-room accommodations last year were indeed pitiable. The addition of two new class rooms will entirely relieve this condition. A county high school with no auditorium wherein the students may have their regular convocation or chapel exercises is also a regrettable condition which has heretofore existed. This will be relieved by the construction which is now in progress.

The auditorium, with seats removed will also serve the purpose of a gymnasium for the boys and girls. There will be a seating space in the auditorium of 60x40 feet wide and a stage 15 feet deep of 40 feet wide and a curtain opening of 26 feet. This will afford a wonderful place for school entertainments in which a child receives training which is second to none he receives in the class room.

It will indeed be a monument to the progressiveness of the citizenship represented in the Parent-Teachers Association.

STUCK IN THE RETURNS

An Indiana truck loaded with cattle and hogs turned over on the bank just this side of the bridge on the Bellevue pike at the edge of town Tuesday morning about 9:30 o'clock. The truck which had refused to go was being towed into the garage by Ray's truck from Rabbit Hash and after crossing the bridge the truck ran on to the chain by which it was being towed causing it to upset throwing its cargo of livestock with the driver and another man into the field below. Outside of a slight damage to the truck, all escaped in jury. It was a fortunate escape as the bank at that place is some 4 or 10 feet high. This is the second accident at that point within a week.

UNFAIR ABUSE

Money and the people who have it are let in for a great deal of abuse. All too often public speakers condemn wealth and close their addresses with appeals for funds for their pet hobbies. School children are taught that financial success is not genuine success.

But how much of this talk is cheap clap trap? How much do the people who give utterance to such sentiments really believe?

Of course the making of money should not be a single purpose in life; neither should it be the chief aim, but it should be one goal, because money is essential.

To save money means to make money and the saving of money goes with self denial, restraint and character. The habit of thrift is a fine habit to cultivate.

The abuse of money is wrong and has a bad influence on others, but the right use of money is an important factor of every worth while movement, whether local in character or national in its scope.

VISITING THE SCHOOLS

If a family was having a house built, it would call around to that house about every day to see how it was getting along, and if the men were building it right. But it is having the characters and capacities of its children built in the schools, and the majority of people never get near them to see what results are being gained.

The result is that many country people have very little idea of modern school work, and often get unreasonable prejudices against it. They fail to get into sympathetic touch with the teacher, which is rather discouraging to that individual. They do not find out the many ways by which they could co-operate to help that school do better work.

Cleek And Hempling Elected After Warm Contest At Polls

CROP OBSERVERS ARE SELECTED FOR BOONE

For Agricultural Foundation Index, 3650 For National Chain

Appointment of R. J. Matson of Florence and E. J. Madden of Verona as crop observer in Boone county, for the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation Index, is announced from Chicago by P. V. Ewing, director of research for the Foundation and editor of the Index. They will form a link in the nation-wide chain of county agricultural observers elected because of their first hand knowledge of farming conditions and their ability to observe them and intelligently interpret them.

The Index, to which the observers from this county will contribute, is a compilation of the monthly reports of 3,650 observers in every section of the country, and this number is being added to steadily. All of the observers are practical, thinking fair-minded men, each chosen because of the opportunities he has to observe the needs of agriculture and for his ability to apply economic principles to current farm problems. As a group, they represent a cross-section of the thoughts that the man in the furrow is thinking, and their joint analysis of existing agricultural conditions, as expressed in the Index, is considered a forward step in helping agriculture help itself.

NEW FORDS CAUSING INCREASE IN SALES

Sales Records Without Precedent In The Automobile Annals

As people become more familiar with the attractiveness of the "improved Ford cars interest not only increases, but orders for cars are growing in numbers, according to local Ford dealers.

Probably the best evidence of the widespread interest manifest in these cars comes from the general offices of the Ford Motor Company at Detroit where it was stated that since the new cars were announced orders for more than 192,368 have been booked by dealers throughout the United States. Thousands of orders are coming in every day.

This is not only a striking example of public confidence in the company's products but is also a sales record without precedent.

Added significance is given the sales report by the fact that the public generally has not yet had an opportunity to inspect all the new types. Distribution of cars among dealers so far has been limited principally to Touring Cars. In fact dealers in many sections are still awaiting their first car. In spite of this, orders continue to come in from all points not only for cars of the type shown, but the rest of the open and closed line as well, an indication that prospective purchasers are impressed with the soundness of the redesigning and refining of the cars and are satisfied that they will find the same standard reflected in the type of their preference.

Assembly at the Cincinnati branch of the company which supplies this territory is increasing daily and distribution among dealers will be much more rapid from now on than it has been up to the present time. However, those desiring a new Ford car for use during the coming fall and winter will do well to enjoy their orders early and avoid delay in delivery.

THE CHURCH YEAR

The year of activity of the churches, as well as the schools, seems to begin with the early fall. Then the pastors and officers and members lay out the things they want to do within the coming season, and play their campaigns of effort.

The community expects any church to show activity to justify the money and attention that are given to it. Religious worship is of course its principal mission, but it should not be content to stop there. It should show the practical inspiration that its worship has, by going out to do the things that need to be done. There are plenty of things in almost any country town that need to be done, because such towns have a lack of workers and leaders to provide the social and educational advantages and functions that any good town needs.

J. H. Graves and J. M. Craven two former Boone county citizens, but now living at Erlanger, were business visitors to Burlington Tuesday.

Dawson Chambers Re-elected Director By Delegates Monday

From the look of things about the polls last Saturday at the tobacco election one might have guessed that there was a regular primary in progress. However there were but a few voters over five hundred that were cast in all.

Of those cast Joe W. Cleek received 407; C. O. Hempling 396; Rod P. Hughes, 111; Eli Williams 105; L. I. McMullen 36; Marcus Ryle 15. This of course elected Mr. Cleek and Mr. Hempling.

The names of Rod P. Hughes, L. I. McMullen, Eli Williams and Marcus W. Ryle, were placed on the ballot by the regular convention called by the State office at Lexington, and which was held at Burlington on Saturday, August 22, 1926.

A second meeting was held on Saturday, Sept. 5th, which was attended by about one hundred growers. At this meeting an agreement was reached by those present to write the names of Hempling and Cleek on the ballots.

Considerable feeling is said to have arisen between some of the men who were supporting the different candidates. However it is reported that the issues did not involve any feeling among the candidates themselves. It is known that Mr. Hempling and Mr. Cleek favor the retention of Mr. V. P. Kerns as manager of the Walton warehouse and the re-election of Dawson Chambers as director from the district of which Boone county farmers are a part.

The delegates elected, Mr. Cleek and Mr. Hempling, attended the Eleventh District Convention at Williamstown Monday Sept. 21. This district is composed of the counties of Boone, Kenton, Campbell and Grant.

Mrs. Dawson Chambers of Kenton county, was re-elected as director from this district at the convention.

Some have feared that this slight ruction will weaken the organization but these little battles should not cause sensible farmers to "stand in their own light." It is to be expected that they will turn against the organization itself. If such were the case the two great political parties in this country would long since have been blown into "Smithereens."

MRS. HETTIE L. BRUMBACK DIES AT LAWRENCEBURG

Mrs. Hettie L. Brumback aged 82 years died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Calvin Cress near Lawrenceburg, Ind., Sept. 11, 1925. Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, a French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded fire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks little for her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III.—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling room, and is in love with her, but he learns that she is called Pauline de Fomere and is with her aunt. He is unable to secure an introduction. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young man's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV.—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V.—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and concealment surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI.—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but he, a natural flirt, is only mildly interested in the girl, while Christopher Bent really loves her and would marry her.

CHAPTER VII.—A mysterious Russian, Zubin, wins a large sum at the gambling tables. Gerald learns he is known as De Fomere, but can get no information from him.

CHAPTER VIII.—Christopher makes little progress in his courtship of Myrtle, who is completely infatuated with Lord Dombey. He is vaguely jealous of her interest in the Russian, but his interest being all in Pauline.

CHAPTER IX.—Gerald tells Pauline of Zubin's gambling. She is at once interested, and asks him to find the Russian and bring him to her and her aunt. Gerald finds Zubin. The Russian has lost all he had won and practically everything else he had. On their way to the ladies Zubin kills himself.

CHAPTER X.—It is learned that Zubin was the steward of the gaming tables, and has lost all the money and her niece possessed. The two women leave Monte Carlo after selling their jewelry. Gerald is unable to trace them. He begins to evince an interest in Myrtle, to Christopher's disquietude.

CHAPTER XI.—Gerald giving a convivial party to a few acquaintances of the gay world. Myrtle urges him to allow her to attend, but she is not suitable for a young girl, and he refuses.

CHAPTER XII.—Lady Mary offers to take Myrtle to England with her and end employment. Christopher accepts her gladly. Myrtle goes to Gerald's party. At its conclusion Christopher takes her away, when Gerald would have kept her in his room. Myrtle goes to England with Lady Mary.

Chapter XIII

Once more Christopher and Lady Mary braved the night air on the terrace of the Villa Arcadia. The latter pointed across the gorge to the villa on the other side, a shadowy-looking building, unlit and without any sign of habitation.

"Wonder what Gerald does without his little playfellow in the afternoons?" she observed.

Christopher frowned.

"I know what he did this afternoon. He took Myrtle over to Nice."

"Myrtle?" Lady Mary repeated coldly. "Your little protégée?"

"Christopher assented.

"You young men will end by getting into trouble with the police or your own consciences."

"I am not in the least afraid of either contingency," Christopher assured her. "Then why do you look so disturbed every time the girl's name is mentioned?" Lady Mary asked him, pointedly.

"If I do," Christopher said, "as I tried to explain to you before, it is not on my own account."

Lady Mary laughed.

"You can't imagine that Gerald is likely to find her dangerous!" she scoffed. "Why, he was heard over ears in love with that strange girl over at the Vilette yesterday, and besides, Gerald had vicious—yon know that."

"Gerald is very weak sometimes," Christopher said bluntly. "He has been terribly spoilt, of course, and in this particular instance the trouble is that the child fancies herself in love with him."

"In love with Gerald! How ridiculous!"

"You don't quite appreciate her, if you don't mind me saying so?" Christopher declared, a little timidly. "She is extraordinarily innocent. All her life she has been starved for kindness and beauty. I don't think there was ever a human being in the world who needed help and counsel more than she does today."

"Shall I remove her from temptation?" Mary inquired, after a moment's reflection. "My maid has just broken it to me that she is going to stay here and get married. Shall I take your protégé back to England in her place?"

"If only you would!" Christopher exclaimed eagerly. "You needn't keep her. My cousin is going to find a place for her as nursery governess, but she isn't quite ready yet."

Lady Mary considered the matter, leaning over the balcony, her head a little thrown back as though to enjoy the perfume of the pines. Her thoughts wandered for a moment from the subject of discussion.

"I wonder whether I am glad to go home," she mused.

"You shall miss you," Christopher declared.

She turned her head and looked at him.

"Will you?"

"Immensely," he assured her. "I shall miss our tennis more than anything. I shall miss you, the truth is, but I won't except for the tennis and the rather amusing golf. I don't think Monte Carlo appeals to me very much."

"You are no gambler," she observed.

"I haven't the faintest inclination towards it," he confessed. "I hate the things in life which I cannot control."

"Isn't that a little rash?" she ventured.

"You might have to hate your own affections."

He was silent for a moment. She watched him curiously.

"I don't think I am the sort of person," he said, "who would be likely to be led very far by his affections alone. What about the child, Mary?"

"I will take her if you wish it," she decided. "She must be at the station at eight o'clock. You know that there will be nothing for her to do. Janet has packed and will arrange all my things for the journey."

Christopher drew a long breath of relief.

"You are a dear!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "You can't imagine what a weight this is off my mind."

"I am doing it for your sake," Lady Mary told him. "I do not like the child. I disapprove most strongly of the whole situation. However, I will do what I have promised. We are going straight to Hatteries. She can remain there until your cousin is ready for her."

Gerald came strolling out to them, pausing on the way to light a cigarette.

"Are you two conspiring about?" he inquired.

"I have been saying good-by to your sister," Christopher said.

"Christopher?"

Gerald passed his arm around her affectionately.

"We shall miss you, dear," he said.

"I think I am really rather sorry to go," Mary confessed. "Father is getting on his feet."

"I don't want me," she whispered.

"He could no longer resist the invitation of his lips. After a moment, however, she sprang away. The violinist in the room beyond had commenced a waltz. She dragged Gerald through the open door and gave a little cry of delight when she saw the room."

"Dance with me," she begged, "just you and I, all alone. Dance with me, Gerald!"

They moved off to the music. The violinist smiled with pleasure. The other instruments took up the strain. Myrtle closed her eyes, half fainting with the joy of the music, the smooth floor, Gerald's arms. Presently he stopped. He was unaccountably out of breath. He took one of the gold-folled bottles from the sideboard, opened it and filled two glasses with the foaming wine. Myrtle's eyes shone like stars as she drank.

"Oh, I am happy!" she murmured.

"This is wonderful! Promise, Gerald, that you will never send me away. Promise!"

There was a shrill of voices as the room was invaded. Nadine came through the door which led from his own suite.

Some men followed, accompanied by a little crowd of girls. Every one was curious about Myrtle. She shook hands shyly with those whom Gerald presented to her. When they asked for her name, however, he shook his head.

"Mademoiselle is our guest for this evening," he announced. "She is not, alas, of our world. Let us call her Mademoiselle X."

"Mademoiselle the Spirit, rather—a French name," Myrtle said. "I think that you have dragged her down from the skies. Present me, Gerald, or I shall be your enemy for life."

"The Marquis Chantelaine," Gerald murmured, "Mademoiselle X. The marquis is a shameless fellow, Myrtle, and you must not believe a word he says."

"He is shameless or not according to my surroundings," the Frenchman declared. "No one could look into the eyes of mademoiselle and speak other than the truth."

Chantelaine pouted.

"Is no one going to say nice things to others?" she complained. "Gerald, you ought to have warned us. I would have worn my new gown. It is exactly the color of the sky. Even my maid declared that I, too, slipped down from heaven."

There was a little chorus of laughter. Cocktails were brought in and cigarettes lit. Every one gathered around and talked to Myrtle. She answered them naturally enough, for every now and then with embarrassment.

"Mademoiselle X may be asked no questions," Gerald insisted. "Where she comes from I shall not tell any of you. Whither she goes after tonight, you will none of you know."

"Mademoiselle is of the haut monde, perhaps," Nadine whispered maliciously, under her breath.

"Mademoiselle belongs to a world we are none of us privileged to enter," ting quiet restlessness, though. He never cares to stay in one place too long. Gerald glanced at his watch.

"I must be off," he announced. "I've a few of my frivolous friends coming in to supper after the opera. Are you coming, Christopher?"

"I don't think so, if you don't mind, Gerald," was the apologetic reply.

For some unaccountable reason, Gerald felt relieved. He took his leave of his father and sister, started up his car, and drove through the scented darkness back to the hotel. All the time he was conscious of a little quiver of excitement for which he could not account. The Villa Violette, at which he gazed as he turned out of the avenue, was dark and empty. He thought of Pauline and sighed. The ghost in the empty seat by his side faded away. He was for a single moment a man, angry with himself, bitterly regretful.

"It was a bad idea to kiss her like that," he muttered. "All the same, a child has no right to such tips."

Gerald was met in the hall of the hotel by Charles, the maître d'hôtel to whom he had left the arrangements for his supper party.

"If I could with me, so kind as to ascend with me," the latter suggested. "I can show him the preparations I have made."

Gerald nodded and ascended to the first floor.

"This is the most convenient suite for mildred," Charles explained, "because the door at the left-hand there communicates with mildred's own suite of apartments, where his friends, if they like, can leave their hats and coats. I shall serve the supper myself. Everything will be as comfortable. The supper table can be moved into the corner of the room at any time desired—as soon, in fact, as mildred cares to start dancing."

Gerald nodded and dismissed the man. He stood for a moment in the center of the waxed floor, his hands behind him and a freshly lit cigarette between his lips. The sight of these preparations for the night's festivities had left him curiously unmoved. He could picture the whole affair—a little cosmopolitan crowd of giggling, shrieking girls, half French, half Russian, with a dash here and there, of the Egyptian and the Italian. Nadine, with her pale cheeks, her eyes like a green, half yellow, like the eyes of a cat, her alluring smile. Then there were Chlotilde and Phrynette, Parisians to the rosy tips of their fingers, blatant in their desires, frank and unashamed of the siren net they troled.

It was a little game to play. The finesse of refusal and never seemed so flat, the ignominy of refusal seemed so repulsive. He thought of Pauline, cold as the snows, proud and indifferent, yet with the charm of hidden things in her clear eyes and delicate smile. Her indifference had hurt—how much he realized when he thought of the coming evening. And then, like a flash, his mood changed. There was the other type, as beautiful in its way, as serene, as wonderful in its strange, virginal passion, the lips that had hung to his with the frank offer of supreme love.

He turned away, and, crossing the room, opened the door leading into his own suite. A wondrous—amazing—vision confronted him. For a moment he was aghast. Myrtle, transfused as though by the wand of an artist, had gone simple and unadorned, retentive of all the grace of her glowing, yet exquisitely suggestive of the woman to come—Myrtle, her hair dropped low on either side of her oval face, a robed lily, unspotted and untarnished by the cunning fingers which had produced a veritable triumph. Her bosom was rising and falling quickly, her lips were parted. Then she began to laugh softly. Everything was right with the world. Gerald's look of transfixed admiration told her all that she needed to know.

"Will I do?" Myrtle asked anxiously.

"You are wonderful!" Gerald exclaimed. "But—what does it mean?"

"I have come to you, Myrtle, announced, "and even Monsieur Christopher shall send me away. I went to Madame Lenore. She dressed me and she had my hair arranged. It was a droll. When I looked in the glass I scarcely knew myself. You are pleased?"

"I am more than pleased," Gerald answered, taking her hand. "But about this party. I am not sure."

"You don't want me," she whispered.

"He could no longer resist the invitation of his lips. After a moment, however, she sprang away. The violinist in the room beyond had commenced a waltz. She dragged Gerald through the open door and gave a little cry of delight when she saw the room."

"Dance with me," she begged, "just you and I, all alone. Dance with me, Gerald!"

They moved off to the music. The violinist smiled with pleasure. The other instruments took up the strain. Myrtle closed her eyes, half fainting with the joy of the music, the smooth floor, Gerald's arms. Presently he stopped. He was unaccountably out of breath. He took one of the gold-folled bottles from the sideboard, opened it and filled two glasses with the foaming wine. Myrtle's eyes shone like stars as she drank.

"Oh, I am happy!" she murmured.

"This is wonderful! Promise, Gerald, that you will never send me away. Promise!"

There was a shrill of voices as the room was invaded. Nadine came through the door which led from his own suite.

Some men followed, accompanied by a little crowd of girls. Every one was curious about Myrtle. She shook hands shyly with those whom Gerald presented to her. When they asked for her name, however, he shook his head.

"Mademoiselle is our guest for this evening," he announced. "She is not, alas, of our world. Let us call her Mademoiselle X."

"Mademoiselle the Spirit, rather—a French name," Myrtle said. "I think that you have dragged her down from the skies. Present me, Gerald, or I shall be your enemy for life."

"The Marquis Chantelaine," Gerald murmured, "Mademoiselle X. The marquis is a shameless fellow, Myrtle, and you must not believe a word he says."

"He is shameless or not according to my surroundings," the Frenchman declared. "No one could look into the eyes of mademoiselle and speak other than the truth."

Chlotilde pouted.

"Is no one going to say nice things to others?" she complained. "Gerald, you ought to have warned us. I would have worn my new gown. It is exactly the color of the sky. Even my maid declared that I, too, slipped down from heaven."

There was a little chorus of laughter. Cocktails were brought in and cigarettes lit. Every one gathered around and talked to Myrtle. She answered them naturally enough, for every now and then with embarrassment.

"Mademoiselle X may be asked no questions," Gerald insisted. "Where she comes from I shall not tell any of you. Whither she goes after tonight, you will none of you know."

"Mademoiselle is of the haut monde, perhaps," Nadine whispered maliciously, under her breath.

"Mademoiselle belongs to a world we are none of us privileged to enter,"

Gerald answered. "It is I, as I ask, as your host. Please do not guest as a butterfly, born this passing away tomorrow."

"Oh, is it?" Chlotilde whispered, like that. Give me a cocktail, Chantelaine."

They made their way presently to the supper table. Myrtle sat at Gerald's right hand, and next to her, on the other side, was the Marquis de Chantelaine. Any form of tete-a-tete conversation, however, was impossible from the first. They all seemed to be talking together at the top of their voices in an almost incomprehensible argot, a jumble of personal quips and sallies. Myrtle listened sympathetically, but understood little. Occasionally she laughed when the others laughed, but as a matter of fact she needed nothing to complete her happiness.

As Gerald, who whispered every now and then little words of encouragement in her ear. Presently Chlotilde jumped up and danced. Phrynette followed suit and executed a wonderful pas seul. There was a good deal of boisterous applause. Myrtle felt the tingling of her cheeks.

She glanced toward Gerald. He was laughing, so it must be all right. Nevertheless, she was relieved when at last Phrynette sat down.

"I will show you," Nadine suggested, "how they dance in Algiers."

There was a little chorus of applause. Gerald alone for a moment looked doubtful. He glanced toward Myrtle at his side.

"Don't overdo it, Nadine," he begged. Nadine laughed subtly.

"Is it for your ingenuity you fear, or yourself?" she asked. "Very well, I will give you both something to think about."

She danced at first with all the quivering grace of restrained but passionate movements. Myrtle watched her with fascinated eyes. Then suddenly she broke loose. Myrtle looked down at her plate and gripped Gerald's hand.

"Remember, I warned you, dear," he whispered. "Don't watch."

"Mademoiselle would perhaps care for a little stroll upon the balcony?" the marquis whispered in her ear.

Myrtle shook her head.

"Don't go," she murmured. "I do not wish to leave Gerald. As for the dancing, it is foolish of me but I have never seen anything like it. It never seemed to me possible that women could do such things. That is because I have not lived in the world. I shall progress."

The dance came to an end amidst uproarious applause. Nadine, Chlotilde, and Phrynette moved toward the door leading to Gerald's suite.

"I shall go into your bedroom and make myself tidy," she called out. "You can come and fetch me when you want me," she added, looking over her shoulder at her host.

The cork popped to faster still. Presently, indeed, happiness began for Myrtle. She danced with Gerald again and again, danced to music which was indeed the best, for Gerald was somewhat of an epicure in such matters, until she forgot the loud voices, the haze of cigarette smoke, the slightly unsteady condition of one or two of the guests. To her, so long as it was Gerald's arm which controlled her, it was all beautiful. By degrees she seemed to slip into her place, however incongruous it might be in the little company. She was accepted as one of the kaleidoscopic pictures of Monte Carlo flirtations. She had come, and there was an end of it. There were other hosts besides Gerald, other Englishmen crowding all the time into the place. The very singleness of her devotion made her some extent a rival to be accepted philosophically.

It seemed incredible that four o'clock had arrived. There was a ball that night at the Carlton, however, so every one was resigned. They invaded Gerald's rooms for their coats and wraps. Myrtle remained talking with the marquis, but she had been dancing. Her body was still awaying a little to the rhythm of the music.

"So this is your first night, mademoiselle?" her companion said softly. "I shall hope that we may meet many more times."

"If you are a friend of Gerald's, I hope that we may," Myrtle replied.

"You have enjoyed yourself, on the whole?" he asked, looking at her curiously.

Her ears were straining for Gerald's voice. She could hear all the time the shrill laughter of Nadine and her friends.

"I have enjoyed the dancing," she said.

"I begin to believe," he said, "that you are really as young as you look."

"I am eighteen," she told him.

"For that moment I was not thinking of your actual years," he explained. "How long have you known Lord Dombey?"

"Gerald?" she queried. "Only a very short time. I have never danced with him before today."

"It is easy to believe," he said, "that you slipped down from the skies, only nowadays Heaven does not part with its children so easily. Tell me, where did you come from, really?"

"A little farm on the other side of the mountains," she said. "Gerald and Monsieur Christopher brought me to go to England, but I hope that Gerald will not let me go."

"I am not at all sure," he said, "if you are what you seem to be, that I would not be better if you went to England."

They all came trooping out. Myrtle got up to fetch her own cloak, but Gerald detained her. She stood by his side, bidding good night to his guests as he made his adieu. The look in his eyes haunted her for a moment as he turned away. Then she was conscious of a curious sense of disturbance. She was alone with Gerald, and he was looking at her strangely.

"You have been happy, Myrtle?" Gerald asked, and his voice seemed to come from a long way off.

"Wonderfully," she answered. "There is my cloak."

She moved toward the open door leading into Gerald's suite. She seemed suddenly torn by a strange medley of sensations and memories. She saw Nadine pass through it, disheveled and indecent, with that backward glance at Gerald which, even to her ignorance, seemed ugly. She heard the voices of all of them laughing and laughing. Little half-understood sentences puzzled her. She passed into the sitting-room. Gerald followed, closing the door. The sound of the door closed quietly. Myrtle felt suddenly alone.

"You are tired?" Gerald exclaimed, bending anxiously over her.

She put her arms around his neck like a child.

"Gerald," she whispered, "take care of me. I am afraid. Be good to me, Gerald."

Their lips met, but there was something absent from the warm joy of that first kiss. Side by side with her happiness came the feeling of discordant music all around her. Rank perfumes seemed to hang in the air. A ribbon from one of Nadine's discarded garments lay upon her sofa. Yet Gerald leaned toward her and his eyes sought for hers, a strange content seemed to creep like a flood over all these other things.

The door of the sitting-room was suddenly opened and closed. Christopher stood there, a little breathless, as though he had run up the stairs, pale, and with a look in his eyes from which both Gerald and Myrtle quailed—Gerald with fuller understanding. His arms dropped. He was nearer fear than ever before in his life. Christopher spoke with marvelous calmness.

"Gerald," he said, "were you thinking of breaking your trust?"

"Yes," Gerald answered hoarsely. "Drop this Don Quixote business, Christopher. I'm sick of it."

Christopher came a step nearer.

"Myrtle is coming back to her lodgings with me," he announced. "She is going to England tomorrow morning. Your sister has promised to take her."

"She is coming?" Myrtle cried passionately.

"It is arranged," Christopher declared. "I went to your rooms to-night, Myrtle, to tell you. I received Annette's lying message. I was told that you were in bed and asleep. I left a note, then, for the first time since I have been here, I went to the club and stayed late. I heard your guests downstairs speak of your good fortune. Gerald is taking her home."

Gerald laid his hand upon Myrtle's wrist.

"Well," he said, "what are you going to do about it?"

"I am going to take Myrtle home," Christopher insisted.

"I refuse to let her go," Gerald declared.

Christopher looked for a moment away at Myrtle. She clung to Gerald like a frightened child.

"Listen," Christopher went on, "you and I have been friends all our lives. Gerald. We know one another pretty well. You know of me that I am a man of my word. I know of you that you are selfish, and worship pleasure, you are white enough when you drink. The bonn has struck, Gerald. Let me take Myrtle home."

"Myrtle shall choose," Gerald proposed.

"Myrtle shall do nothing of the sort," was the prompt reply. "You might as well ask her to choose the right path through a strange city. Gerald, old chap, don't take this hard. I am not here to alight abuse at you. Annette—Myrtle—just doesn't understand. Thank God I was in time—Myrtle, take your cloak."

She clung to Gerald's arm, looking anxiously into his face. Something else discordant had come into the room, something unpleasant, something to be feared. She looked from one to the other of the two men. Gerald's face was clenched. For all his calm, there was a subtle threat in Christopher's attitude.

"I don't want to quarrel," Christopher went on. "Don't let it come to that, Gerald, but you see it is inevitable that Myrtle should leave with me tonight. I shall not go without her. You know what that means."

"Remember, I suppose," Gerald said thickly, "that you were the variety boxing champion?"

"Please don't," Christopher begged. "Myrtle must come. I can't always be in the way. Tonight I am. Tonight, at any rate, you have a reprieve."

She stooped for her cloak. Christopher arranged it around her shoulders. His fingers shivered at the touch of the filmy laciness, as though he loathed it.

"You are ready, Myrtle?" he asked. She looked once more at Gerald. He seemed so far away. And was it her fancy, or was there something in his face which she had seen in the faces of those others? He lit a cigarette ostentatiously.

"You had better go," Myrtle, he said. "Christopher has the right hand of us. We can't have a row here."

"Goodby, Gerald," she faltered. "It isn't my fault."

"Of course not," Gerald answered. "We are all a little overstrung. I think. Goodby, little one."

He kissed her almost carelessly and nodded to Christopher. The two left the room. The music had ceased.

They walked through the empty streets in silence. When they arrived within a few yards of Myrtle's lodgings, Christopher slackened his pace. Myrtle was crying quietly.

"Myrtle," he begged, "listen to me."

"I am listening," she told him drearily.

"This morning at eight o'clock I shall be here to take you to the station. Please leave behind the clothes you are wearing, and I will return them to you. You will go to London, and Lady Mary will take care of you. Lady Mary is Gerald's sister. Do you understand?"

"Yes," she faltered.

"Please don't think of me as an executioner," Christopher went on, with a note of unusual feeling in his tone. "Love is a very wonderful thing, Myrtle, but it is also a very dangerous paradise. If you care for Gerald, and he cares for you, believe me, some day, you will belong to one another and you will be happy, but the love which binds us together is not a matter of feeling only. Today you love Gerald with your whole soul. You are a simple girl, but you have a softness and prettiness attracts him. The kingdom of love is a wonderful thing, but not two people who are in the position of you and Gerald can enter it by the lower gates. If you are faithful, remember this. A year or two of life will bring womanhood to you, and you will understand just what was lacking tonight. Myrtle, believe that you guessed was lacking. That something would have poisoned even your wonderful happiness. You must wait, dear. Nothing in the world will keep you and Gerald apart if your love for one another becomes the love that endures. Myrtle, once away without a word."

For an hour Christopher waited, unseen, at the darkened corner of the street. He waited until he saw the light go out in Myrtle's room. Then he went back to the hotel, changed his clothes and rested for a couple of hours. When he returned to her room, she was waiting for him, dressed in her little blue serge suit, mutely pathetic. Christopher carried her small bag and they made their way to the station.

"Myrtle," he said, as they stood together, watching the train coming round the bay, "this morning I think that you are hating me. You think me very cruel. Try and not judge me for a year."

"I think that you mean well," she sighed, "but you do not understand."

Christopher put money into her purse and took her up to where Lady Mary was standing with her little array of dependents. She spoke a few kindly words to Myrtle, who answered her politely but without any trace of feeling in her tone. Myrtle sat down on one of the trunks and looked steadily across at the sleeping white-fronted hotel. Christopher and Lady Mary walked for a moment apart.

"I don't know why I am doing this thing for you," Mary said. "If you wanted to know the truth, I dislike the young woman intensely."

"If you can't feel that you are doing it for my sake," Christopher replied, "think that you are doing it for Gerald's."

Lady Mary stared at him for a moment, and Christopher fancied that he could read in her somewhat haughty look some trace of that patrician superstition which claimed for its people the bodies and souls of their satellites. The train thundered in.

"You will come and see me in London?" she asked a little softened.

"Directly I return," he promised. "I shall forget this, Mary," he added, a little awkwardly. "You've been a brick."

She smiled, curiously gratified at his hesitating words. Christopher leaned toward Myrtle.

"Goodby, Myrtle," he said.

She removed her eyes from the window for a moment, and then she answered—and looked back again at the white building, with its irregular front and close-drawn curtains. Behind one of them Gerald was sleeping. With a cloud of black smoke and a succession of hoarse, snoring pants, the long train steamed slowly out of the station.

She was the daughter of Mrs. Amanda Lodge and the late Jacob S. Lodge. Mrs. Baker had been a faithful and regular member of the Hebron Lutheran church for 11 years, and a charter member of the Young Women's Missionary Society. She made many friends wherever she went by her kind greetings. She was married to Edward Baker in 1812. To this union was born one daughter, Alberta Mae. She is survived by a husband, daughter, mother sister and a host of other relatives and friends who will sadly miss her. The funeral services were conducted at the Hebron church Wednesday at 2 p. m., in the presence of a very large gathering of friends. Rev. RENEWED INTEREST IN CONSOLIDATED TELEPHONE MOVEMENT

We understand that there is a movement on foot by a number of the leading citizens of Boone County to consolidate all four telephone companies of the county into one large system. In order to do this we learn that it is planned to incorporate a company and endeavor to purchase all the present companies, rebuild the lines and give the county the telephone service it has so long needed.

This is a movement backed entirely by Boone county people. In order to finance the project it is proposed to sell sufficient stock to Boone County people only to purchase and reconstruct the different systems throughout the county. There is no reason why the telephone service in our rural districts should not be just as good as anywhere else. The lines were properly constructed and kept in proper repair. With all systems combined into one this should produce sufficient revenue to give us service at a reasonable rate and at the same time give the company ample funds to keep the system in first-class condition at all times.

This is a movement in the right direction and every citizen of Boone county should give it their wholehearted support. There is nothing for which we spend money that gives us greater service and more real satisfaction than our telephone provided, of course, we get the service we pay for. Let's all pull together and help make this project something for which we will all be proud.

LURE OF KENTUCKY IS VOICED BY CLARK B. FIRESTONE OF CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

Few Kentuckians who appreciate the lure of their native state with an inherent love of home, because home is lovely, could have been as much impressed or have voiced their impressions with more grace than Clark B. Firestone, of the Cincinnati Times-Star staff, has done in a recent article about a visit to Boone County and other historic points in the Blue Grass state. Part of Mr. Firestone's story follows:

"If the hill will not go to Mahomet Mahomet will go to the hill. I pondered the saying as I walked the mile or more of rough road on the east bank of the Kentucky river between the little railroad station of Ford and Boonesborough. Soothed. Thence I had hoped to set out on a three days' tramp in the mountains. But it was very hot. The country was drying up before one's eyes. For a hiker upon difficult paths death rode the thin, dry air.

"I remembered another proverb. Only dogs and Americans walk in the sun, say the Mexicans, a derogatory saying, but pointed. Then I turned the first saying round about and made it personal. If I will not go to the mountains, perhaps the mountains will come to me. There was a way. The spirit of the mountains moves along the Wilderness road out of Cumberland Gap, and makes its final stand at two outpost points in the Blue Grass. That ancient path of empire forked at Crab Orchard. At the end of one fork was Boonesborough, at the end of the other, Harrodsburg, farther west. Both had been provincial capitals. Each had memorials of a venturesome past. And each had shade. Instead of confronting us on the stricken hills, why not back in turn in the shade of both? It seemed reasonable.

"I crossed to the Kentucky's farther side on a little foot-ferry, which is also a hand-ferry, for that is the way it is worked. The boat runs along on a wire hitched to either bank, and a boatman with a notch ed pick for a clutch repeatedly nipped me from bow to stern of the long, shallow craft; and literally he pulled for the shore. It was special service; I was the only passenger and he earned his five cents.

ber fried chicken, corn sticks, salt brined bread and banana melon. The last named item, of cucumber shape and banana texture, which is grown in a sandy tract near Richmond, was new to me. After dinner I gave the first capital of Kentucky a leisurely survey from the vine-clad verandas, and in the 24 hours that followed I made its closer acquaintance.

"Where is the town?" ask casual tourists at Boonesborough Beach. There is no town. In winter the place is quite without inhabitants, save the families of two government lock-tenders, who dwell in white houses on a hill well above the dam. Aside from the dam and lock, what you see of man's handwork is a huge and venerable tobacco barn in the background, a dance hall in the foreground, a foot-ferry and about a score of summer cottages standing on three-foot posts as a safeguard from the swelling tides of the Kentucky river. The rest is mainly nature. The river, at this place a pool from four feet to forty feet deep, flows due north, its waters a tawny green. To the east the wooded hills rise steeply from the water's edge, the highest a corn field. A glen divides them, and up this the Indians hurried Jimima Boone and the Callaway girls, to be pursued and overtaken shortly after by the father of the girl and the sweethearts of all three. The Times-Star told of this the other day in its High Lights of History, and Cooper based upon it a striking incident in "The Last of the Mohicans."

"On the western side of the river is a valley about a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide, closed in at the north by a fescue of ancient sycamores, which rise from the sides of a deep ravine. Steep pasture fields and corn land reach down to this valley from a ridge so elevated that it is twilight in the bottoms while the sunlight is still upon the hills. A sequestered and beautiful spot with the marks of age upon it.

"This was Boonesborough, Boone's Fort, capital of the dominion that at most became the fourteenth original colony and a more or less loyal province of George III. It was the seat of government of the short-lived political division of Transylvania. Judge Richard Henderson, of North Carolina, was its founder. He organized a company, raised about $50,000, and blazed a trail—the Wilderness road—for Henderson and his men to follow. At what is now Boonesborough Beach they built a fort, and opened a land office, and summoned a legislature, which passed nine laws; one of them of course to improve the breed of race horses."—Lexington Herald.

SECOND ARTICLE OF SERIES—ON THE STONE MOUNTAIN

Mr. Augustus Lukeman, of New York, one of the foremost sculptors of the United States, who has to his credit a large number of important works of sculpture distributed over the country, is the sculptor of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial. Mr. Lukeman was born fifty-four years ago in Richmond, Va., the capital of the Southern Confederacy and is thoroughly familiar with the viewpoint and feeling of the Southern people. He was educated in New York and studied under Mr. Daniel Chester French, after which he completed his course at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. Upon returning to America he became an associate of Mr. French and was with him in the famous sculptor's studio in New York. Mr. Lukeman was engaged by the Association in April, 1925, following the cancellation of a contract with a sculptor who had previously been employed and whose services were unsatisfactory to the Association. Mr. Lukeman has been engaged continuously since that time in the making of the Memorial, working in close harmony and conjunction with the Association's Engineer, Mr. L. W. Robert, Jr., one of the leading men in his profession in the South. He expected to have his design finished about the middle of August and to begin work at the mountain within thirty days thereafter.

The acquisition of Augustus Lukeman for chiseling Stone Mountain was a winning stroke for the Confederacy's epic memorial, and a heaven sent inspiration to its millions of friends. The highest tribute to the Stone Mountain artist, however, are not others' words, but his own works his heroic statue of Christopher Columbus, at the United States Customs House in New York; his heart-moving memorial to the Brooklyn Boys who died in the world war; his spirited "Kit Carson" for "Trinidad" of the Royal Bank of Canada, at Montreal; his memorial to the women of the Confederacy at Raleigh, N. C., and to pass over numerous others as notable as these, his crowning achievement, the equestrian statue of this wonderful southern pioneer, Francis Pickens, the first bishop of American Motherhood, laid upon this creation, which stands in the National Capital, is to instantly feel the thrill of a noble life nobly interpreted. The sculptor from whose hand came that glorious work is worthy of the Stone Mountain

Confederate Memorial

Among other works of the master sculptor are: William McKinley at Dayton, Ohio and Adams, Mass.; "Manne" the Indian lawgiver, Supreme Court at New York, monument in bronze to Union Soldiers for Sumnerville, Mass.; statue of Prof. Joseph Henry for Princeton University; equestrian statue of General Gregg, equestrian for Reading, Pa.; statue in bronze of Franklin Pierce, fourteenth President, in front of the State Capital of New Hampshire; U. S. Grant Memorial at San Diego, Calif.; Strauss Memorial Fountain, New York City; Memorial to The Returning Doughboy at Brookline, statue in bronze commemorating American aviators in World War, at Washington, D. C., and Wheeling, West Va., colossal bronze group commemorating American World War soldiers, sailors and aviators, for Pittsfield, Mass.

(Next week full significance of the Stone Mountain Memorial Half Dollar—"A Memorial to the valor of the Soldier of the South," will be published in this column.)

BACK TO SCHOOL AGAIN

The school year is opening again and the school house door is beckoning to youngsters to return and partake of the bounty of that which is offering them, free of charge, that they may be able to compete successfully in the great struggle for existence when they become men and women.

School means much to children—more than they realize. It means an opportunity to learn not alone the facts that books contain, but how to live so that their lives will bear abundant fruit.

Some parents feel a sense of relief when school opens—that a great weight has been lifted from their shoulders. And this is where they fail as parents.

Responsibility does not end when the youngsters are turned to their instructors. Teachers may instruct and guide them, while they are in the school room, but can not follow them after they leave its doors.

To parents fall the obligation of sheltering and protecting them from the pitfalls of the street and the open, from the snares which to them appear to be but innocent pastime.

The responsibility of the teacher is heavy, but the parents is infinitely greater.

The school authorities have worked out their program for the year and they are prepared to do their duty. It is squarely up to those outside the school organization to assist and assist in the fulfilling their part of the unwritten contract.

The Anthracite Coal Strike

It is the business of government to protect the people from wrongs and suffering. In performing such a function it can not always be restrained by old precedents. Times change, and the government has to take action often to meet new situations.

Hence it will be felt quite widely, that the government has been very slow in not taking steps to trouble the unfortunate labor trouble that has again broken loose in the Pennsylvania coal regions, which affects the welfare of the public by a dozen or more states. Such a stoppage of work, if it continues for any length of time, creates great industrial loss. It affects business at once in the territory thus lying idle and constitutes a depressing influence over a wide area.

If the strike continues for any considerable length of time, millions of people who have become accustomed to using anthracite coal are put to great inconvenience. If it should spread to the softest coal in the country, and much suffering might result.

It is not a matter affecting the state of Pennsylvania alone, but the entire country.

AN HONOR WELL DESERVED.

The award of the prize offered by the Pictorial Review to the woman who has made the greatest contribution to civilization during the year to Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, of Morehead, is an honor both to a Kentuckian and to Kentucky. Mrs. Stewart in recent years has been taking a leadership in an effort upon a world-wide scale to abolish the blight of illiteracy. Her work had a modest beginning. The moonlight schools were founded in Kentucky upon a rather small scale and were chiefly conducted by volunteer teachers at a time when the low standing of Kentucky in the literacy scale had awakened into action Kentucky's citizens who were ashamed of her low rank, and who had highest hopes for the state to move toward leadership rather than to lag at the tail-end of the educational procession. The state illiteracy commission was formed with Mrs. Stewart as chairman, and the effects of its good work are still being felt throughout Kentucky. Since this first crusade the effort, so far as any systematic campaign is concerned, has been dropped and the illiteracy commission has been abolished. But the torch that was lit in Kentucky has blazed until it casts its rays to all corners of the world.

The award which the Pictorial Review gives to Mrs. Stewart is a justly tendered and is a recognition not only of her ability but of the importance of the work to which she has devoted her life.—Lexington Herald.

Not the least among the President's worries at the moment is he great aircraft controversy, which promises to precipitate one of the big questions before Congress this winter. The crash of the dirigible SHENANDOAH, followed by Col. William Mitchell's sensational statement virtually charging Secretary of the Navy Wilbur with responsibility for the loss of the ship, has touched an official conflagration which will burn for many months. Predictions are already being made that some official heads are in Washington will be off before the development of military aeronautics ceases to be the chief topic of discussion of Governmental circles. Without waiting for the report of the Navy Board which investigated the Shenandoah disaster, Secretary Wilbur broke into print personally defending himself from the charges of Mitchell and others. While the President is sizing up the situation and getting ready to take action, the War Department is taking steps to punish Mitchell by court martialing him and running him out of the Army in disgrace. Mitchell says that he welcomes such treatment, but that he will keep on hammering away for better and more efficient aircraft control in Washington.

Having learned a lesson from the last Congress, which refused to heed his recommendations for tax revision, Secretary Mellon has decided to "take the bull" by the horns again. Of course, he has a very definite idea of what he and the Treasury wants in the way of tax reduction and amendment of the revenue law, but he will wait until Congress invites him to submit his views and will take nothing more than "suggestions" even then.

The Democrats have already declared war on the Treasury's plan for paying the entire public debt of twenty-two billion dollars during the next twenty-five years. Their view is that this liquidation, one of the greatest financial operations in history, should be spread over a period of fifty or a hundred years so that future generations would bear part of the burden instead of those who are now living.

The Government has decided definitely to make no move toward settlement of the coal and strike. It will request for intervention come from one side or the other, or the country is faced with serious suffering because of a coal shortage. The feeling here is that the industry will find ways and means to adjust its own difficulties to avoid federal interference, but the President is in no more to be trifled with the leaders of either the operators or miners and is preparing to ask Congress to enact legislation which will prevent similar strikes in the future. This probably will mean strict Government supervision of the entire industry.

Business has picked up with a new around the Government departments with the return of the President, back in the Capital after his long vacation in Massachusetts. Mr. Coolidge came back to the White House to find a mountainous program of work awaiting his attention but he has plunged into it with vigor. Most of the Cabinet members who have been away most of the summer have returned, too, to be on hand for any tasks for which they may be called upon.

Two world championships in a row is the dream of Washington base ball fans as the team which climbed to the top last year shows every disposition to repeat. Citizens of the Capital, from the President down, are backing the Senators to the limit as the time draws near for another world series, and streets in the vicinity of electric score boards become impassable in the afternoon because of the dense crowds gathered to watch the climb of the Nats.

IMMIGRATION

The National Industrial Board finds that immigration under the new law has fallen off 60 per cent when allowances are made for the number of foreigners leaving the country.

Italians, Greeks, Hungarians, Bulgarians, Lithuanians, Jugoslavs, Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese and Roumanians left the United States in the fiscal year 1924-5 in numbers large enough to offset or exceed the arrivals. Countries that failed to fill their quotas are Czechoslovakia, which fell short by 17 per cent; Great Britain, by 12 per cent; Germany, by 11 per cent; Irish, Free State, by 5 per cent; Italy by 10 per cent; Sweden, by 6 per cent.

According to these figures the opposition to our immigration laws among foreigners is not so pronounced as some people would have us believe.

"Truly a Fresh and Unique Section of the World for Us to Explore"

By COL. A. LESTER JONES, U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey.

AROUND us, extending for thousands of miles in every direction, stretches the mighty expanse of an oceanic new world. Its area, 70,000,000 square miles, exceeds the total expanse of all the continents and islands on the globe. The maximum width of the great ocean, 10,000 miles, is two-fifths of the circumference of the world. Truly, a fresh and unique section of the world for us to explore. The geophysical forces are here seen in actual operation on a scale of unparalleled grandeur. Ocean currents sweep around a third of the circumference of the globe. Depths of five and a half and six miles have been located. The periphery of the ocean is outlined by an immense ring of active volcanoes, a veritable ring of fire.

It is scarcely too much to assert that the coasts and waters of the Pacific can feed the world. But before an inventory of such resources can be made there must be a comprehensive geographical survey. The first essential is to complete our knowledge of the configuration of the sea bottom and to obtain data for a bathymetric chart, or one made by deep-sea sounding. Developments in aerial surveying and in subaqueous sound ranging encourage the hope that rapid and thorough methods will soon be practicable. These will permit the construction of a model map of the ocean bed.

Such a model, showing submarine plateaus, ridges, shelves, a 3d pinnacles, as well as valleys, troughs and abysses, will serve not only navigation but all branches of hydrophysical research. For example, food fish are found only on the continental shelf or slope, or in its immediate vicinity. Crustaceans abound for a few hundred fathoms beyond the mud-line at about 100 fathoms. Thus the fishing banks can all be located and fishing rights adjudicated. Variations of temperature, density, salinity, acidity, etc., affect the strength and seasonal changes of ocean currents, and all together affect the migrations and supply of food fish. The sea has its seasons no less than the land.

Three Essential Bases for Our Relations With Latin America

By V. M. CUTTER, President United Fruit Company.

I depreciate any slightest imperialistic tendency on the part of the United States in Latin America. I believe that commercial relations are the best way to bring about international amity between countries and that the refusal to invest capital in Latin America would be to shut the door on public improvements, railways, roads, harbors and other developments. There are three essential bases for our relations with Latin America:

A sound and consistent policy on the part of our State department, including diplomatic representation, insurance, and the like, in respect as between our government and people and the governments and people of Latin America. Reliable banking connections between our country and Latin America. Sound policy and management of high character by any United States citizen or companies entering commercial relations with Latin America.

I believe that over half of the difficulties encountered by our firms in Latin America have been caused by the companies' indifference to local customs, practices, social usage, and business methods.

"All the Countries Which Experimented With What We Call 'Cheap' Money—"

By GEORGE E. ROBERTS, New York City Banker.

Europe cut loose from the gold standard and sailed out on an ocean of currency. Of course no country thought at first that there would be oceans of paper money. But even after Germany and Russia and Austria and the others had got hopelessly drunk on cheap money they found that it wasn't plentiful, because the printing presses couldn't keep up with the depreciation. And it wasn't cheaper, but costlier. The interest rate got higher and higher, because it had to be figured to cover depreciation, until the Reichsbank discount rate went to 180.

Some of them have been repeating the process by which standards of value were originally evolved. They have learned all over again the necessity of attaching their currency to some basis of definite value. They have been issuing bonds and paper money in terms of iron, rye, coal and other commodities.

All the countries which experimented with what we call "cheap" money are trying painfully to get back to the gold standard. Even Russia, where the leaders denounced gold as an instrument of oppression in the hands of the capitalists, has come around to it.

New Approach to Understanding, to Enlightenment and to Good Will

By DR. HARRY A. GARFIELD, Institute of Politics.

This session of the Institute of Politics has again demonstrated that there is need of a place where, in an atmosphere of good will and scholarly interest, men of different nationalities can confer and discuss their political, social and economic problems, talk over their sensitive questions and the danger spots of the world, and in understanding each other find common purposes. I feel that we are evolving a new method of international conference and a new approach to understanding, enlightenment and good will. It is most hopeful to observe the search for facts about international problems that one sees in the institute and to observe such country-wide discussion as has been going on in the editorial columns of the press of the United States, not about us, but about the questions we have raised. This is to me a very encouraging development, for public opinion has indeed become the hope of the world. I am sure it will insistently continue to call for the facts of international relations.

"For the Same Reason—Because So Many People Are, Frankly, Darned Fools"

By MITCHELL BRONK, in North American Review.

Watch a trolley car or subway or elevated train discharge and take on passengers in New York or any large city. As a rule these two transactions are carried on in such a way that the jostling crowd jams itself against those who are coming out of the car, so the delay, discomfort and sometimes injury of all concerned is a matter of the little, insignificant matter of our copper coins. Why can we not have, as we have been clamoring for years to have, two and three-cent coppers? Or why are buttons still sewed upon our coats with perishable thread, as our grandmothers did it? Or why are not puncture-proof automobile tires manufactured? Or why don't the writers of our jazz music give more variety to their productions? Or, even, why doesn't the plumber bring his tools with him to a job? For the same reason—because so many people are, frankly, damned fools.

In Loving Remembrance of Linnie Huey

Linnie has left us, but she still lives in our hearts; long will we cherish her memory. That quiet unobtrusive thoughtfulness for others, which seemed to be her greatest pleasure can not be forgotten. Never have I heard an unkind word spoken to her, never a harsh criticism expressed.

How wonderfully fair this world must have appeared to her. Never knowing the storms of adversity; only hearing the glorious symphony of love and kindness, played upon the heartstrings of humanity.

Surrounded with this environment, her vision of life must have been sublime, and like David's Philistines, she too may have built a mansion of beautiful thoughts and deeds.

WHERE CITY AND COUNTRY MEET

The country fairs and cattle shows have long been a scene attractive both to the city and country folks. It is interesting to see the two throngs mingle. Formerly you could easily tell them apart. But today city styles are bought by the country folks, and the two elements look much alike.

It is a pleasure to see what fine looking stock and products the farms are turning out. The country folks do not come to these fairs merely to see the horses trot or to throw base balls at the African dodger. They keep a weather eye out for the exhibits of the things they are producing, and go home with some ideas to try out on the old place.

The city folks can well learn that not all the wisdom is concentrated on paved streets. The back roads of Kentucky are a very large factor in that commonwealth, and in the nation at large.

Farmers Plan To Drain Bottom Land

Frankfort, Ky. — Five Franklin county farmers are cooperating in a drainage project which will reclaim about 600 acres of rich bottom land along Elk Horn creek. An old creek channel which made a four-mile loop will be opened up at a cost of about $4,000 or $8 an acre, and a big area of high productive land thereby made available for growing corn or other crops.

The farmers interested in the project are Zack Church, Harry Brown, Ernest Lee, Fred McDonald and Taylor Hockensmith. County Art. Robert Heath is assisting in the plans, and the engineering work was done by E. G. Welch, extension agricultural engineer for the College of Agriculture at Lexington. Much of the work will be done by the farmers themselves.

Our hearts are broken dear sister, We hear your voice no more, But when time comes and God Calls we'll meet you on yonder shore. It seems only an hour dear sister Since we saw your dear sweet face, But we know you're over yonder, Saved by his redeeming grace.

It is sad dear sister, So still, so close you no more, But still we know you are Happy on yonder's Golden Shore.

Written in memory of our dear sister Mary Ellen Brune, who departed this life August 20th, 1925. The Family.

She leaves one daughter Mrs. Dr. Corey. She was laid to rest in Florence cemetery. The family have the sympathy of this community in the loss of a dear one.

Our community was shocked last Monday afternoon when the Death Angel visited the home of Ed. Baker and took his loving wife. She was the daughter of Jacob Lodge and wife and was united in marriage to Edward Baker about 12 years ago. She was young and it was hard to give her up, but God knows best. She was a good woman and will be missed greatly. To know her was to love her. She had a kind word and a smile for everyone. But nevertheless we should rejoice in the fact that we have hope of a happy reunion in the home where sorrow and sickness enters not. Bessie leaves to mourn her death her dear mother and sister Nannie and husband and daughter Alberta. The funeral was preached by Rev. Miller of Bromley Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the presence of a large congregation at the Hebron church. The funeral equipment was white, a symbol of purity, and she looked as though she had fallen asleep in her casket of white decorated with many beautiful flowers. It is not for us to know why Bessie had to be taken away. But God knows best and he will give to those who mourn for her sweet solace of hallowed memories that never die. So we can only wait and hope to meet dear Bessie later.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Lexington—Members of the County Board of Education voted to refuse to accept the University High School as a county high school, which it was expected would be done as the result of a recent decision of the Court of Appeals.

Lexington—William Gullette, 26, son of J. G. Gullette, this city, aviator, died in a hospital at Los Angeles, Cal., as the result of injuries sustained when he fell from an airplane Sunday at Eagle air port, Los Angeles, according to word received by his family.

Bowling Green—A twenty-five barrel oil well was drilled in on the Cooper B. Jones lease, Barren River road, and three miles northwest of Bowling Green by W. Roy and Chester Hogan, brothers, and Walter S. McClannahan. The well is 440 feet. This is well No. 2 and No. 8 will be started soon.

Winchester—It is reported here that there now is less moonshining going on in the mountains than ever before on account of the scarcity of water due to the drought, and, it is said, some stills have been shut down completely. In addition, according to reports, the lack of rain is causing serious loss to timber owners.

Frankfort—Sam Colston, charged with the murder of Thorne Barton, garage owner, here last month, will be given a hearing on a motion for bail in the Franklin Circuit Court soon. Colston's motion for a continuance until the January, 1926, term in order to prepare his defense, was overruled by Judge B. G. Williams.

Paducah—A check-up of city and county automobile lists has revealed a large number of Paducah motor car owners who have taken out their automobile licenses for the year 1925, Henry Bailey, city license inspector, said. Warrants will be taken out and the defendants arraigned in Police Court on charges of failure to procure city licenses.

Owensboro—Simon Goldfine, a merchant of Madisonville, Ky., filed a petition for the appointment of a receiver of the federal court clerk. Mr. Goldfine places his liabilities at $17,788.84, of which $10,000 is made up for stock and fixtures. He asks the usual exemption allowed by law.

Carrollton—The body of Nathan Littrell, 40 years old, Vevay, Ind., who was drowned in the Ohio River August 14 when he fell off a Government dredge boat four miles above Carrollton, was recovered here. The crew of the steamer Queen City saw the body and notified persons on shore. Littrell is survived by his widow and several children.

Columbia—A tremendous flow of gas was struck in the J. H. Morgan well No. 1 at a depth of 145 feet which is being drilled on Crocus Creek, twelve miles south of Columbia, in Adair county, by the Wood-Haislet company. The flow is estimated at more than one million cubic feet per day. The drilling for oil was suspended until the gas pressure could be put under control.

Winchester—In a raid at the home of Mrs. Fred Richardson prohibition officers secured thirty gallons of moonshine liquor and arrested Mrs. Richardson and Bill (Country) Jones, of Lexington. The pair were taken to Lexington and arraigned before Commissioner Ward. The husband of the Richardson woman is serving a two years' sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for bootlegging.

Pikeville—Mrs. B. F. Fleming of Heiler, Ky., was accidentally shot by her husband while the two were in their home at Big Branch. It was learned recently. The shot pierced her liver. Mr. Fleming had finished cleaning his pistol and was hanging it up when it was discharged, he said. Dr. J. S. Preston, of the Pikeville general hospital, was called to Heiler. Mrs. Fleming was brought to the hospital here. Her condition is serious.

Richmond—A team of twenty-six members of the Richmond Golf Club, revenged a recent defeat at Lexington when it scored a 54 to 19 victory over representatives of the Ashland Country Club in an intercity match played here. This victory means that Richmond has defeated every team with whom intercity matches have been played. Richmond has also defeated Paris and Winchester twice each. One match was dropped to Winchester.

Mayfield—The Mayfield Chamber of Commerce, through its board of directors, has decided upon a national advertising campaign for Mayfield and Graves county.

Madisonville—Because he killed his father at the request of the parent, Harold Logsdon, fourteen, of Ashburg, Ky., was acquitted of a charge of murder in a preliminary hearing held in the County Court. "I asked him 'where?' and he pointed to his heart and said 'here,'" the boy testified.

AIR DISASTERS

Mna has utilized but he has not yet controlled the elements, as disasters of air and sea so frequently make manifest.

The loss of the PN-9-1 in the Pacific while on the Hawaiian flight, and the destruction of the Shenan doah in Ohio in a windstorm brings home more forcibly than any catastrophes of late years, the fact that mankind still has much to learn about air navigation.

The appalling fate the elements dealt out to these two ships of the air, products of man's ingenuity, has caused some to wonder whether the thing gained is worth the sacrifice in human life.

Those killed on the Shenandoah and those lost in the Pacific did not die in vain, of course. Their deaths revealed weakness which, when corrected, will save other lives. They went into the service with all its hazards, knowing full well they might die a martyr's grave.

Such examples of heroism and devotion to the country's cause should not go unrewarded. Without such pioneer spirits, the air would never have been conquered in the degree that it has been. And without men men willing to give their lives in the conquest with the elements, no further advancement in air navigation might be expected.

BLAMES THE LAWYERS

Mark O. Prentiss, organizer of the National Crime Commission, declares that there have been more than 10,000 murders and 300,000 robberies in the United States the last year. He then says: "The reason we have this appalling condition is because crime goes unpunished." "In the mind of the average good citizen, the blame for it rests upon the lawyers," he declared. Passage by Congress of an act prohibiting the sale, shipment or advertising of firearms that can be concealed on one's person would cut down crime of violence more than 50 per cent.

This Must Be Upheld In All Matters Of Taxation

What do you really know about coal conditions? Are you posted on the facts in the case? Do you know that those who are now advocating a "special tonnage tax" on coal produced in Kentucky, "in lieu of other taxes", are not suggesting or sponsoring a sound type of legislation?

The ad valorem tax, now a part of the Constitution of the State of Kentucky, cannot be interfered with or in any way changed without amending the Constitution, such an amendment requiring a popular vote of the people.

This being the case, any "special taxation" on tonnage must be in addition to the regular ad valorem taxes—thus producing a double taxation which is manifestly unfair. The coal industry is not seeking to avoid any just taxation. It wants to pay its share of the public expense, but it does not want to be imposed upon or discriminated against.

Kentucky coals must be marketed under severely competitive conditions, and because of long hauls and high freight rates, production costs must be held to a minimum.

Remember that all special forms of taxation are dangerous, and that the proposed tonnage tax would bankrupt the coal industry in Kentucky.

Goal Finally Reached In Drive To Raise High School Fund

SOLICITORS GO "OVER THE TOP" IN FINAL WEEK OF DRIVE

At the final meeting of the Finance Committee last Friday evening it was disclosed that the canvassers had gone "over the top" with thirty-five dollars to spare.

The drive extended over a period of two weeks, and at the last meeting of the committee, about one week ago there remained to be raised the sum of two hundred and three dollars. This amount loomed exceptionally large in view of the fact that the community had been canvassed so thoroughly. It developed however that there still remained a few loyal souls who had not been solicited.

The committee, including Mrs. J. M. Lanning, who were unfortunately omitted last week, the contributors, and the community in general deserve to be congratulated upon the success of this splendid endeavor.

During the past year the Parent Teacher Association raised a gross sum of money to the amount of $1055.32. This has been raised by entertainments, dinners, bakes, picture shows, membership dues, contributions etc.

Out of this amount the sum of $85.67 has been expended for State dues, books, magazines, first aid kit, advertising and school equipment, leaving a balance in the Treasury at the beginning of the drive of $969.65. Total amount now available for new addition to school $5801.15.

Every one is urged to pay their subscription at once to either of the banks in town in order to close up the drive and to have the cash on hand to pay the contractor who is now at work on the construction of the building. It is estimated that the amount now on hand will be sufficient to cover the P. T. A.'s on-fourth cost of building and equipment but this does not mean that the P. T. A. will cease to be active but on the other hand this organization expects to give entertainments etc., from time to time in order to make money for the school as several hundred dollars a year can be used for the betterment of the school equipment and school property.

The Auditorium will provide a nice place for such entertainments and where the audience can be made comfortable when attending an entertainment. The school will now be able to make money for their various needs where heretofore they were handicapped for lack of classrooms and an Auditorium. It is hoped that an entertainment can be given in the new Auditorium as soon as it is finished. The dedication and the placing of the bronze tablet will be postponed until next spring.

The recent drive for funds having been liberally responded to by most every one in this community, automatically cancels the $4,000 note of the P. T. A. which about sixty people signed as guarantors to the bank in order to proceed with the addition to the school building. This note will be stamped "PAID" and placed in the copper-box along with other records and newspapers on the day of the dedication of the building. It is planned to have some good speakers present at that time but no one will be asked for any further contribution on that day.

The officers and various committees of the P. T. A. desire to thank every one who contributed in any way to the success of the recent drive.

During the drive, September 12th to 26th 1925, the following persons subscribed to the Parent-Teacher Association building fund for the purpose of enabling said Association to pay one-fourth of the cost of addition and equipment to The Boone County High School:

ANNUAL POULTRY MEET TO BE HELD IN OCTOBER

Fourth Annual Affair At Kentucky Experiment Station In October

The fourth annual poultry field meeting will be held at the Experiment Station farm at Lexington on Wednesday October 7. This annual affair is growing in popularity each year; last year approximately 400 people attended. Every person interested in poultry is invited to attend and can feel assured that he will be well repaid for the trouble and expense of going to Lexington for the day.

At 10 o'clock there will be an inspection of the poultry field. Station poultry farm. Visitors will be divided into small groups in order that everyone will have an opportunity to inspect the equipment, stock and experiments that are under way. There will be plenty of time for asking questions, along with the short talks given by the poultry specialists. At noon the crowd will go to the judging pavilion for lunch. Plenty of chairs will be available, and the Experiment Station will furnish free coffee to everyone.

Beginning at 1 o'clock a short program will be given in the judging pavilion. Included on the program are talks by Dean Thomas P. Cooper, Asst. Director T. R. Bryant and Prof. W. L. D. Kahn, head of the poultry department, Ohio State University.

Prof. Dakan, who will talk on "Farm Poultry Possibilities," is an exceptionally well qualified poultryman. He was reared on a poultry farm where he obtained practical experience with a poultry flock. For several years he was poultry extension specialist in Ohio, and for the past three years has had charge of the poultry work in that State. With his experience, and coming from one of the largest poultry producing states, Prof. Dakan will be able to give a talk that will be of value to every poultry raiser in the state.

According to the election officers who were appointed to hold the Burley tobacco election in Grant county, for delegate to the district convention last Saturday, more than 1,000 fraudulent ballots were cast in the election. Not only were the ballots fraudulent, they were ballots not furnished by the association and did not come from association headquarters at Lexington.

HIGHEST COURT STOPS ERLANGER DOG RACES

Court Of Appeals Hands Down Decision Which Is Fatal To Dogs.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals last Monday morning entered an order which, although a technical one, in reality has the effect of putting a final ban on the betting on dog races at Erlanger under that section of the Kentucky Statutes which permit betting on horse races by the pari-mutuel system.

The injunction suit has been pending since August 6th, two days after the opening of the Erlanger track by Messrs. Smith, Sawyer and Hyland, when Orie S. Ware, prosecuting attorney for Kenton county caused their arrest, alleging that they were unlawfully operating under that statute which permitted horse racing.

The races recently closed and dogs and owners departed for New Orleans where a winter meeting will be conducted. Several truck loads of the canines passed thru Burlington enroute to the Dixie track. It was rumored that a more extended meeting was to have been conducted next year.

PETERSBURG TO PLAY BELLEVUE SATURDAY

Both Teams Have Won and Lost One Game Sunday Will Decide Series

Bellevue and Petersburg played the second of a three game series last Saturday afternoon, Petersburg winning by a 7 to 2 score. Since Bellevue won the first game the series now stands 1 to 1 with the deciding combat to be staged next Saturday at Bellevue.

The Petersburg crowd jumped on Joe Brady in a manner not easily understood, collecting base hits of all varieties. Ruth, in the box for Petersburg, was the master at all stages. Notwithstanding the fact that "Less" Ryle hit three triples off his delivery, yet they were able to gather but two runs, showing that he was there in the "pinches." Ruth has been playing base ball in Boone county for twenty years, longer than anyone else now playing, yet his arm is seemingly as strong as ever. He played the outfield for the Kentucky Jockey Club in the K. I. O. League the past season, hitting well over three hundred and fielding one thousand. Few men possess an arm as strong as his after 20 years service.

JOHN J. RYAN INDICTED BY OHIO GRAND JURY

Former Operator of Dance Pavilion At Florence Is Found In Texas

Two indictments were returned by the Hamilton county (Ohio) grand jury last Friday against John J. Ryan, who formerly operated the dance hall on the Florence Fair grounds. The indictments charge that Ryan uttered forged checks, one being drawn on the Florence Deposit Bank in favor of the manager of the "Pork Chops Orchestra."

Ryan was recently arrested in El Paso, Texas, and is being held there by authorities until Cincinnati detectives go after him.

Ryan rented the Florence Fair grounds the past summer and caused elaborate improvements to be made on the dancing pavilion, where he gave several dances. He suddenly made himself "conspicuous by his absence," leaving the information that he had gone to Chicago on business and that he would return.

It later developed that he had obtained a lot of equipment from Chas. Retschulte, who formerly operated a prominent road-house on the Dixie Highway and had failed to reimburse Robert Tanner, Florence electrician, for wiring and electrical equipment.

Suit was filed by Tanner and also by Retschulte in the Boone Circuit Court, but the plaintiffs were unable to get service on the defendant Ryan, nothing being heard from him until he was arrested in Texas a short time ago.

BALLOT BOXES WERE STUFFED IN GRANT CO

More Than One Thousand Unlawful Ballots Were Used In Election

The following clipping from the Grant County News discloses the fact that ballot boxes were stuffed at the recent election:

According to the election officers who were appointed to hold the Burley tobacco election in Grant county, for delegate to the district convention last Saturday, more than 1,000 fraudulent ballots were cast in the election. Not only were the ballots fraudulent, they were ballots not furnished by the association and did not come from association headquarters at Lexington.

An identification mark on the ballots furnished by the association enabled the election officers to distinguish them and all of those not bearing this identification mark were thrown out. A flood of ballots came in by mail and it is believed that the greater number of the fraudulent ballots were cast in this manner.

It is also probable that not one out of 50 of the ballots cast were voted by the party's name they bore.

An examination of these ballots disclosed that the perpetrators of the attempted fraud were not in great fear that the ballots would be scrutinized very closely, as many of the ballots bore the name of the same voter. It is claimed that one tobacco growers' name appeared on five different ballots, another on four and another on three.

There was a good deal of work going on during the day by the adherents of the two sets of candidates, but on the surface there was no excitement.

As regard to the selection of Dawson Chambers as director the News says:

It was disclosed that Grant county had a clear majority of the delegates and could have elected any one they desired. There were two or three Grant county men who would have accepted the position, and possibly they were just as competent as any one in the district, but the Grant county delegation refused to stand solidly behind their own candidates.

Mr. Chambers has held the position of director ever since the organization of the association. This is his fifth consecutive term. He is regarded as a capable man and is highly thought of by the heads of the association. And while Grant county people as a rule would probably have preferred to see the county honored by having nothing against Mr. Chambers personally, nor do they deny that he has rendered the association good service in the past.

FINE FOX HOUND IS KILLED BY OFFICERS

An order was issued by Magistrate E. J. Aylor one day last week for the destruction of a dog claimed to have the rabies. Complaint was made by Leslie Aylor, of Taylorsport, the dog belonging to Lehman Goodridge. When the officers arrived on the scene to destroy the animal they found that it was a fine fox hound valued at $75.00, and one which has taken first premium at various fox hound shows. They disliked to kill such a fine animal, but "orders is orders."

OPERA PRESENTED AT BURLINGTON THEATRE

For The Benefit of Eastern Star Lodge Pleases Large Audience

The Ruth Opera was presented before a comfortably filled house last Saturday evening. Everyone in the audience seemed especially well pleased with the presentation. Several singers in the troupe were indeed stars such as local audiences seldom have the privilege of hearing. The talent taking part in this opera is not professional, most of them singing in Cincinnati church choirs on Sunday.

This performance was staged here for the benefit of the local chapter of the Eastern Star, the net proceeds to be used in purchasing a new piano for the lodge.

Mr. Dunning, the director, announced that he intends to bring the opera Esther here some time in the future.

FIVE ESCAPE FROM HOSPITAL FOR INSANE

Lack of Facilities Is Clearly Demonstrated At The Institution

Five inmates escaped from the Eastern States Hospital at Lexington last Wednesday night, two of whom were regarded by hospital authorities as exceptionally dangerous, and entirely unaccountable for their actions.

Three were captured in Georgetown early Thursday morning, including the two most dangerous. Miss Linda Neville, a member of the State Board of Charities and Corrections declared that one of the most difficult problems faced by the board was to the members the provisions and accommodations available for treatment of the criminal insane. He brought before the committee one inmate who was handcuffed and unless kept in irons was likely to make his escape and become a menace to the community.

"The question is what to do with such patients," said Miss Neville. "Surely it is unappealingly cruel in irons and in close confinement all the time, but it is dangerous on the other hand to permit them such freedom or they will make their escape by some violent means."

"There is no adequate provision made by the state at any one of its institutions to care properly for insane patients who are dangerous," she declared.

A part of the funds to have been derived from the recently defeated bond issue was to have been employed for the benefit of the criminal insane.

BIG CROWD ATTENDS BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Mrs. Bessie Smith Is Surprised At Her Home Near Petersburg

Friends and relatives to the number of seventy-six greeted Mrs. Bessie Smith at her beautiful hill top home below Petersburg when she returned from church last Sunday at noon. Her daughter, Mrs. John Burns had ingeniously planned a surprise on her mother, and had invited the friends to assemble while her mother was attending church services at Petersburg.

The occasion was in honor of Mrs. Smith's (—) birthday. (Please excuse the omission of figures, as tradition forbids the public exposure of the age of widows and old maids.)

Each family and group of friends had brought baskets well filled with good things to eat, and shortly after Mrs. Smith's arrival the large table that had suddenly sprung into existence nearly the full length of the lawn, was groning beneath its load of pies, cakes, fruits, salads, fried chicken and every other article of food calculated to tickle the palate of hungry humanity.

After returning thanks to the Heavenly Father for the privilege of assembling together to partake of this bountiful feast, everyone satisfied their appetite to their stomachs' capacity.

Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the day was most enjoyably spent by everyone present, and as the sun smiled thru the clouds just above the western horizon the guests took their departure expressing their appreciation for the hospitality that had been shown them and wishing Mrs. Smith many more happy birthdays.

Henry J. Hunt and family of Lindale, were guests of his sister, Mrs. Eliza Walton and family, Sunday.

BURLEY DIRECTORS ELECTED FOR THE YEAR

Sixteen of Present Board Are Re-Elected With One Man Declining

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 24.—Twenty-two directors for the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association were elected Monday September 21, to represent their districts on the Burley Board for the year beginning with the October meeting of the board, when three directors at large, one for each of the States of Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, will be named, as well as officers of the association for the ensuing year.

At a number of the meetings resolutions were passed endorsing the work of President James C. Stone and other officers of the pool for their loyal earnest and untiring efforts to advance the interest of the Association.

Graves Declines Post

In the Fifth District, C. O. Graves of Scott county, was elected, but declined to serve because of resolutions passed at a mass-meeting of the members in Scott county, August 22, when it was resolved that the director elected from that district be "instructed to vote and keep on voting to sell the 1925 crop of tobacco over the association floors at public auction."

Mr. Graves deemed that these resolutions limited the exercise of discretion of the director, regardless of circumstances which might prevail, and declined to accept the directorship unless "these resolutions be so modified as to permit the exercise of a reasonable judgment by the director according to circumstances and conditions that might prevail at the same time the matter might come before the board for consideration."

The growers, however, refused to consider another director for the position and a mass-meeting of the Scott county members of the Association was called for Saturday afternoon September 28, at the courthouse at which time the matter will be taken up again, with the idea of modifying these resolutions, so that Mr. Graves may accept.

MRS. MARY E. GRAVES DEAD

Mrs. Mary E. Graves, widow of Alonzo Graves, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Corey, Dixie Highway, Erlanger, Ky., on Tuesday afternoon. Funeral services were held from the late residence Thursday at 2 p. m., by the Rev. Webb Turner of the Madison Ave. Christian church, of which she was a member, after which the remains were laid to rest in Florence cemetery by the side of her husband.

Undertaker Philip Taliferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

RALLY DAY SOON WITH PLENTY OF MUSIC AND FREE GIFTS

Mention was made last week in these columns that a number of leading citizens of Boone County had launched a movement to consolidate the various telephone companies into one large system in Boone county. That these public spirited citizens mean business is proven by the fact that word has just come to us that they have organized the company to be known as The Boone County Telephone Company.

The organizers are as follows: C. Scott Chambers, Walton; Chas. Riley Hebron; J. G. Renaker, Florence; John Clough Hebron; Chas. H. Youell, Burlington; Chas. Kells Watson, B. H. Berkshire, Petersburg.

No more appropriate name could have been chosen since it is to be owned, controlled and operated entirely by the citizens of Boone county; no outside parties having any interest whatever in the matter, and the above incorporators are to be congratulated in taking the lead in such an all important movement that is so necessary and will mean so much to the entire county. However, this is only the beginning. This is not an undertaking for the few, but for the many, and the co-operation and support of every citizen in Boone county is necessary to make this a reality. This support does not only mean subscribers for a phone, but means subscribing for some of the stock, talking it up to your neighbors and getting them to subscribe also in order to raise enough money to take over all of the lines, and put them in A-1 condition so real service can be given. This undertaking is entirely up to the citizens of Boone county and is their opportunity to get what they have long wanted and wished for. Every citizen should subscribe to a phone and every subscriber should be a stockholder.

There was a time when a telephone was a luxury, today it is an absolute necessity; how much of a necessity it really is can only be realized in business, in case of sickness, or accident, or in some other unforeseen condition or circumstance. Under present conditions with four different telephone companies in Boone county we are little better off than having no phone at all, since we can reach only a very limited number of people; no matter what phone we may have, and even if we had all the phones in our home or place of business, it would make the expense too great, and even then we could not reach all the people in the county because under present conditions a great many people could not have any phone.

Without reflecting upon anyone of the Telephone Companies in the county, the service as a whole is far from being satisfactory, and it is only necessary to drive along the roads to see one of the reasons for it. In some places the telephone wire is hanging against the steel pole that carries the electric light wires, in other places the telephone wire is hanging on the fence while in still other places the wire is touching the ground. On some of the roads there are two and on other roads three sets of poles, and each telephone company must employ men to keep the lines in shape if they expect to give any kind of service; it means a number of operators who are only busy a small part of the time, consequently it means duplication all along the line. With four different companies in the county the number of subscribers in each company is greatly reduced, and as a result the companies do not receive sufficient revenue to keep the lines in A-1 condition and give efficient service. In consolidating all the lines and having only one telephone company all of this will be overcome; instead of having two or three sets of linemen there would only be one to keep the lines in tip-top shape and the operators would be in position to give better service, as the number of exchanges could be increased and centralized, the number of trunk lines could be increased so that instead of having twelve to twenty people on a line the number could be greatly reduced, all of which makes for efficient service at reduced expense, making it possible not only to charge a reasonable rental for phones, but also pay every stockholder a good return on his or her investment.

There is no reason why the citizens of Boone county cannot have just as good telephone service as can be found anywhere in the large cities. They can and will have if every citizen of Boone county will rise to the occasion and do his or her part, both morally and financially. Just think what it means to every

PULLING TOGETHER DID IT

More concrete evidence of what pulling together will do has been demonstrated at Marietta, O., where the citizens, faced with the prospect of losing one of the plants of a safe cabinet company, banded together and in two weeks subscribed $1,000,000 to consolidate all the plants of the company in Marietta.

Marietta is not a big city by any means. It has a scant 16,000 people, but among them were enough men of vision to see an opportunity when it presented itself.

The results are imposing. The population dependent on this plant will amount to 2,500 and will occupy 700 homes. The company's annual expenditures in Marietta will be $1,800,000. But what is more vital concern to the town is the fact that the company will pay taxes on a property value of $2,250,000.

This seems an insignificant fact, but it nevertheless is a vital one in every community. Every industrial enterprise puts that much more on the tax duplicate and correspondingly helps to bear the burden of taxation. The cost of government never increases in proportion to the added taxables.

Not every community can undertake such a pretentious enterprise. It is a mistake to attempt an industrial program that is too big. This was the lesson learned by Marietta. It had 118 men recruited from the city's most influential citizens to raise a million, and it should not be forgotten, "backed unanimously by the five Marietta banks."

There is another lesson to this achievement that should not be lost. The safe cabinet company started in Marietta, but had branched out into larger cities. For economy's sake, it had to consolidate its business.

The citizens of Marietta had the good judgment to realize that the safest way to grow is to back home industries instead of trying to bring in new enterprises of questionable and untried value.

ON BEING PARENTS

"Every father a parent," is the aim of the Child Study Association of America in a campaign begun to make fathers of America real teachers of their children.

The association holds that fathers are the only derelicts with respect to this parental responsibility. It is based on the fact that fathers are so busy being the physical parent that they have little time to supply intellectual and character-building food for their children.

Perhaps fathers, as a general rule are not meeting their obligations as parents. But father is not altogether to be blamed.

Outside of the home, father has many responsibilities. He has civic and religious duties, in addition to providing the bodily wants of his family and keeping the household in ship shape. He has to take a little recreation in order to keep the human machine running. This is an obligation to his family.

Father's time is pretty well occupied, but he could probably find more time for his children if he would. It's something fathers might think about, at any rate.

Plans are being made to erect two monuments here to the memory of William Jennings Bryan. One would be a statue in the Northwest residential section to commemorate Bryan's leadership of the Democratic Party, while the other would be a cross over his grave at Arlington to symbolize his fight in the interests of fundamental Christianity. Joseph Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy, heads a committee which is in charge of the project.

The idea seems to exist in some minds, that when they pay a bill they lose money.

How in blazes do you expect a chap to grasp an opportunity when he has an armful of debts.

Here are some "don'ts" which, in their observance may increase length of days for many prot and women: Don't "tinker" with bare wires, even in your own home. Ambulance rides are unpleasant.

Don't leave the cord attached to the electric iron while you discuss neighborhood issues over the back fence. If you want to see a house burn, go to the movies.

Don't use the electric vibrator when you're in the bath tub. You may receive one big unexpected vibration that will make future bathing unnecessary.

Don't hang lamp cords over a nail. Frayed insulation may mean a short circuit.

Don't hang lamp bulbs against wooden walls or partitions, and don't cover lamp bulbs with tissue paper or use them thus in store windows. Confining electric bulbs produce intense heat. Heat produces fire.

Don't use home-made electrical devices, especially heaters. Most home-made electrical apparatus is faulty in construction.

VACATIONS

Everybody but father, the farmer, enjoys a summer vacation according to Washington statistics. It is believed that thirty millions of people have taken a week or two off to play this summer, and the cost has been in the neighborhood of three thousand millions of dollars. This estimate is based on reports from rail roads and summer resorts and based on $100 each.

In this connection it is estimated that the annual vacation of Uncle Sam's Washington and field forces have cost the nation about $15,000,000—the salaries paid while he leaves.

Meanwhile Father Farmers continues to "dig in" that the rest of us may have something to eat, and, incidentally, make our vacations possible.

Canada ranks second to the United States in use of telephones. In Canada there are 11 telephones per 100 citizens of this country, while in the United States it is 33.7 per 100.

The boys of course feel that it is a pleasure for a motorist to stop his car in traffic and give them a ride to their home on the next street corner.

TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY:

You're facing one of the most dangerous and threatening situations that has ever confronted you. The State has experienced during the past few weeks a drouth of unprecedented severity. Many of the water supplies, both public and private, have become exhausted.

The United States Public Health Service has reported a 50 per cent increase of typhoid fever throughout the United States, even larger in many sections chiefly affected by this drouth. Reports to the State Board of Health of Kentucky indicate that there has been an alarming increase in this State during the past few weeks.

Typhoid fever is spread by the improper disposal of human excreta. When heavy rains come most of this excreta will be washed into the water courses, wells and springs throughout the State. This means that there will be a concentration of typhoid fever germs in nearly all of the untreated water supplies and it is essential that every step be taken to reduce the possibility of a terrific outbreak of this disease.

The World War showed that people could be protected from typhoid fever by being inoculated against it, and, in view of the dangerous situation that is developing, it is requested, whether young or old, to go immediately to your family physician and have him inoculate you against this disease.

All drinking water, except from known safe public supplies, should be boiled.

The vaccine will be furnished by the State Board of Health free to physicians.

State Board of Health of Ky.

Better business bureaus in every section of the United States are advertising the slogan, "Before you invest investigate." The cost of ignorance and credulity in 1914 was well over a thousand millions of dollars, and from reports received this year will show even a greater harvest for fraudulent stock promoters and financial wizards.

A Federal census covering forty-seven states relative to mental disorders shows a decrease of 20.2 per cent in the number of alcoholic patients admitted to hospitals during the past ten years. While this is true as to alcoholic cases, it shows an increase of mental diseases from other causes—many of which are no doubt due to poisons in liquor.

The Ford Motor Company pays 57.39 per cent. of the total city and school taxes of Highland Park, Mich.

DOING MANLY THINGS

John Coolidge, son of the president, served in the recent military training camp at Camp Devens, and was mustered out with the rank of corporal. Of course he had unlimited opportunity to spend his summer in more idle ways, with enjoyment of all known pastimes and sports. But instead he chose the vigorous course of military training.

Such work must be attractive to an active and ambitious fellow, yet it must involve a good deal of hard work. Many young men in John Coolidge's place would have wanted to pass it up and do something that was all play and no work.

So the choice comes to most young fellows, whether they will do the thing that pleases them for the moment, and provides plenty of idle entertainment, or whether they will choose the more manly course that will shape their development along the strongest lines.

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again" seems to be a favorite motto with film and social stars.

If women take as much interest in politics as they do in diet, there is some chance for the government yet.

WATCH THE DATE
Since the RECORDER is fifty years old we think it time that it settled down to business. In all the past fifty years it has been the policy of the paper to let subscribers pay for the paper whenever they happened to be in Burlington, and a great many people don't "happen" in Burlington very often, and its very easy to forget the RECORDER when they do come. Of course the campaign placed a number of people ahead, but there are some still behind and a number being added every week. If you take a daily year don't get a single issue after your time is out. The RECORDER has to pay for everything it buys, when the bills are rendered—that's business—and the only way for an enterprise to survive. Please, On November 1 we will be compelled to remove all names from the list.

If you desire to remain on the list send remittance by mail—that's business. Your silence will mean that you do not care to continue, thereby causing removal on November 1.

IS THIS HEROISM?
The state department has discovered that the seventeen American airmen who are fighting the Rifles with the French army in Morocco are violating their country's laws, which provide that American's shall not enlist in foreign military forces. While this law was invoked when Americans joined the allied armies before the United States entered the war against Germany, nevertheless it should be enforced when a group of wealthy young thrill-seeking Americans engage in such an enterprise as this.

They are not giving their services for any great principle that is involved, but entered the service for the thrill that they might experience. They find pleasure in bombing defenseless women and children, and spreading terror among non-combatants.

This can scarcely be called heroism. It is not the thing that poets have sung about thru the ages. Heroes are made of sterner stuff.

The proper cause would be to spank them and send them all back home where they belong.

THE SUNDAY OF TODAY
The modern Sunday begins at the break of dawn with a rush to the fishing and swimming places, the parks and the golf courses.

As the sun rises, the stream of automobiles lengthens and by noon the places of amusement are fairly well crowded.

Everybody seems to be intent on going some place except to church, in the vast majority of instances.

By mid-afternoon most everybody has arrived some place and is "doing something."

The base ball teams entertain the biggest crowds and the moving picture theaters in the middle-sized towns and larger cities have a line of people crowding for admission.

Sunday has changed largely from a day of rest to one of recreation and rolling on wheels.

Those who stop to think wonder where it is leading to; whether people can still hold on to their religion without darkening the doors of a church.

HARVEST FESTIVALS
In all nations, the time of the annual harvest of the crops has been an occasion for popular festivals.

In the old world there used to be great jubilation when the last sheaf of grain was cut. Sometimes, when the reapers were exhorting the last load to the barn, they would sing this song:

"Come forth my Lord to see the cart
Dressed up with all the country art.
The horses, mules, and frisking fillies,
Clad all in linen white as lilies."

In our American towns, the man who has toiled over his garden feels like celebrating, as he harvests his

Juicy vegetables and fruits and thinks of the good dinners they will give him. On the farms a load of anxiety is removed, as the dweller may not realize that the harvest means much to him, but if a poor one comes, he will feel the pinch before before Groundhog day.

THE GRAND OLD MAN OF THE WORLD

When it comes to doing things that make real money the farmer is the biggest yet.

May his shadow never grow less, nor his generous hand less willing. Have you ever thought of the millions of acres of land that the farmer plows, and plants, and tends, and harvests?

When you occasionally think of the farmer and his farm, it is of some one you know, or maybe the home where you were raised, and not of the great fields occupying townships, counties and states, the world over.

Could you make an airship voyage across Canada northwest just now you might see ten of thousands of great harvesting machines creeping over the ground like mammoth devouring insects, leaving only the stubbles in their wake.

Crossing the line into the states you will hear a roar equal to many Niagara's rising from the ground. It is the noise of thousands of reaping machines, and thru the clouds of dust that hover about them you will see growing piles of wheat resembling mounds of molten gold.

It would be tedious, too tedious, to give the number of acres sown to wheat in North America, to say nothing of the rest of the world. You couldn't grasp the figures, they being so great that they become meaningless.

Nor will it be worth the space to name the approximate amount of money necessary to pay these harvesters, threshers and farmers. It would be so immense that you could not understand.

Let it suffice to say the crop is larger than ever before in the history of the world, and necessarily so, because the population of the world is greater than it ever was before.

There are more men employed on the farms of this nation than there are in mines, mills, factories, shops and on all the railroads combined.

Investment in the farms of this country is about equal to all mines, mills, factories, and railroads, and if estimated on replacement cost will far exceed all others combined.

Notwithstanding the fact that his profits at the end of the year generally make a mortgage necessary, he continues to be the grand old man of the world and sticks to his job.

IMPROVING FARM METHODS

A New York state newspaper prints an item in regard to some farmer who took a correspondence course from the state agricultural college last winter. This farmer remarked, after finishing the course, that "an hour a day thru the winter months in studying my business brought better returns than the time I put on any single crop this year."

A statement like that might well set some of the farmers of Kentucky to thinking. There is a temptation for farmers, perhaps more than any class of producers, to settle down in their old ruts and not take advantage of the results of modern science.

In manufacturing lines, a producer has to keep up with the times or get out of business. He finds that methods change a good deal as time goes on. The way in which goods were produced 10 years ago, would not usually produce them at a profit now.

Many farmers, however are farming about the same as when they were boys. This may not be as true in our state as in some that are less advanced, but no doubt plenty of farmers can be found in this section who do not make the full use that they should of modern science.

The federal and state governments are doing a great deal to help farmers take advantage of modern knowledge. The conduct experiment stations where agricultural production is thoroughly studied. Almost any farmer can get from these agencies information that will be of value in his business. It would pay many of them to get someone to look after affairs at home for a few weeks this winter, and attend some course at their state college or elsewhere on modern farm methods in the specialties they are raising. Many who do not feel they could do that, could yet again benefit by taking correspondence courses like the New York farmer referred to above.

COUNTRY EVENINGS

It used to be said that out in the country people "go to bed when it is dark under the table." But if that day ever existed, it is past now. In these times when the majority of people have automobiles, the folks who desire to have something going on evenings can visit their neighbors, attend the many entertainments and social affairs that are given, get up card games with friends, and attend social and church meetings all that. There are few dull evenings in the country now for those who like to have something doing.

Claimed every man should be his own landlord, but seem many feel that in that case they couldn't deface the house so cheerfully.

STONE MOUNTAIN MEMORIAL HALF DOLLAR

In 1860-70 the halls of Congress rang with denunciation of the soldiers of the South and northern politicians were unanimous in denouncing Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and Jefferson Davis as architects.

In 1924 a resolution was introduced in Congress by members of the party whose politics triumph over the South Southern Cause, during an administration controlled by that party, to mint five million half dollar coins as "A Memorial to the Valor of the Soldier of the South." The resolution was passed without one single word of opposition in both the House or the Senate.

It was approved by a President elected by that party who was born and reared in the section of the North from which emanated some of the sharpest issues of the Civil War.

Nowhere else in history can be found an instance of a people so bitterly divided and so perfectly reunited within the life span of one generation.

Not only have the Congress and President of the United States conferred a decoration of valor upon the valiant Confederate warriors without a parallel in the history of any country, but they have invested it with distinctions which place it as one of the most honored of the United States and make it unique among the coins of all nations.

From the standpoint of numbers, it is ten times greater than any other special memorial coin ever issued by the United States, and the number was placed at five million because it was believed by Congress that among twenty-five or thirty descendants of Confederate soldiers, less than five million would be so inadequate as to make the the coinage a disappointment.

From the standpoint of value, it is placed on a par with gold by a provision of the Act expressly stipulating that Confederate Memorial Half Dollars shall be good for the payment of debts, public or private, up to any amount, whereas ordinary half dollars are legal tender only for a limited amount.

It is the only coin issued by the United States in memory of any American army, and the army in whose memory it was issued was not the army of the United States, but the army of the Confederate States, which was at war with the United States.

It bears on its face the images of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, dressed in uniform, with the sword of Lee resting in its scabbard by his side.

No other coin of the U.S. bears the image of a soldier in uniform, and no other bears the image of a man on horseback, but this one bears the image of two soldiers on horseback in uniform, and their uniforms are those of Confederate Generals, and their horses are the ones which bore them in command of Confederate soldiers.

Over General Lee and General Jackson are emblazoned the words: "IN GOD WE TRUST"

And around those words are emblazoned thirteen stars representing the thirteen States of the Southern Confederacy.

On the opposite side of the coin is a mighty eagle, symbol of American liberty, rising majestically with outstretched wings from the Summit of Stone Mountain, and below him the inscription which makes this coin a priceless badge of honor for the sons and daughters of Confederate soldiers:

"Memorial to the valor of the soldier of the South."

Below this inscription the most thrilling word in the language of Americans: "LIBERTY"

General Robert E. Lee, a decade ago, was flayed by northern writers and political leaders, and it must be said in truth, unjustly. General Lee fought for a Cause which his conscious told him was a righteous Cause. He fought his battles and surrendered his army like the Christian gentleman he was; he gave his word that his men would lay down their arms, and they kept his word, and he led the South back into the Union; yet for all his efforts to "al- lay passion and restore peace," he died without citizenship in the Nation he had saved at the most critical moment of its existence.

History can be secured from one end to the other and no one could make Robert E. Lee's place as the most knightly leader born of the Anglo-Saxon race, and that the men who followed him were second to no army that was ever assembled. Now after death, General Lee is lifted to a place among America's immortals; his knightly figure rides with Stonewall Jackson upon the coin of the realm; and by this token the Nation restores them, and all who followed them, to their rightful place of honor and glory in the Nation's history.

The Stone Mountain Memorial Half Dollars are selling at a premium of fifty cents, profits to be used to help defray the expense of circulating the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial at Atlanta Ga. The coins are now being sold in Cincinnati but no organized campaign is under way for their sale as yet.

The Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental Association advises us that a Cincinnati campaign will be started shortly.

(Next week the final episode of this series will appear in this column.)

MEXICO HAS TAKEN the spotlight again. After a series of conferences with Secretary of State Kellogg, Ambassador Jas. R. Sheffield is returning to his post at Mexico City with a communication which it is believed will do much to explain the American attitude on the many points at issue between the two governments. The reported diplomatic tactics employed by Mexico in settling American claims arising out of their land laws, which are aimed at breaking up large estates, are the main reasons for the present difficulties. Sheffield, whose health cannot survive the high altitude of Mexico City, is expected to resign within a few months.

SECRETARY OF STATE Kellogg has won his first important diplomatic victory. Although only in office slightly more than six months, he has succeeded in forcing the Powers to hold a conference aimed at revision of China's treaty relations with foreign governments. Kellogg started the movement for a study of Chinese treaty relations more than three months ago when he announced the "time had arrived" for a thorough investigation. After informally learning that an early date would be acceptable to England, which was the main opponent of the conference, he suggested the commission meet at Peking on Dec. 18.

YOUNG BOB LaFollette, whose election to his father's seat in the Senate, is now a foregone conclusion, would be barred from Republican party councils, if certain leaders have their way. Although nominated in the Wisconsin primaries as a Republican, his reluctance to follow any particular party, a policy which caused the banishment of LaFollette from Republican ranks, will incline leaders to favor the same type of discipline for Young Bob. A strong movement, however, is under way to withhold action until actions in Congress have demonstrated whether or not the son is a "chip off the old block."

THE FRENCH debt negotiations with the United States will probably determine whether President Coolidge will call a new disarmament conference. Should the French receive concessions from the American Commission, it was thought today they would be based on an understanding that France would agree to limit her armament along the lines decided upon at the proposed conference. France, with the greatest military establishment in the world, is regarded as the main obstacle in the way of a successful world wide disarmament.

THE FINDINGS of the committee now investigating military and commercial aviation will determine whether the Administration will support legislation aimed at radically changing America's aviation policy in the next Congress. President Coolidge's action in suddenly naming a committee to study the subject was understood to be based on a desire to settle the whole involved subject once and for all. If changes in policy are believed necessary they will be rushed through the next Congress.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE brought back a fine crop of trekkies from Swampscott, Mass., where he spent his summer vacation. Close friends insist that the three months sojourn at White Court was so beneficial that the chief executive is now in better health than when he first became President.

ANOTHER WAR LOOMING

It will be remembered that when the League of Nations sent its inquiry commission there existed on paper three frontiers between Turkey and Iraq. One represented the Anglo-Irak claim; another the limit of Turkish pretensions; the third the line fixed at the Brussels convention after the Turks invaded the British administered territory last September. The Commission's report simply complicated matters by acknowledging Turkey's legal claim, but suggesting a British mandate. As a result the Turks have invaded British administered territory, drove out Nestorian Christians and established Turkish authority. The Turks seem determined to oppose any settlement of the Mosul dispute on terms contrary to their own wishes and the League of Nations is apparently powerless to do the matter. The only power that has the point at issue, Turkey is willing to abide by a division of the oil concessions between Britain, America and France, and unless that is agreed to England's only alternative seems to be war with Turkey or a complete back down.

Equal Footing

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, in New York Times.

IT is said that men are not created equal. It is self-evident that they are unequal. They have different inheritances, different environments, different capacities, different aptitudes, different tastes. These differences mean inequalities, and these inequalities are disclosed in zest for life, in diligence, in opportunities and the keenness to perceive them and the intelligence which makes use of them.

But the Declaration of Independence was an affirmation of political aims. The Constitution of the United States starts all citizens off in the race for existence and betterment on an absolutely equal footing; but it is family inheritance, early environment, education—bestowed or acquired—natural tendencies, habits and aptitudes which in large part occasion the obvious and the seeming inequalities, which are social rather than political inequalities.

We are entitled to stand as equals before the law. There must be no inequality due to political privilege or exploitation. The free citizen has a right to the impartial administration of justice—which knows neither rich nor poor; to the equal protection of the laws—which means the protection of equal laws; to the exercise of political privileges, without distinction of rank or color or class. We cannot be free unless in this sense we are equal, and the Declaration of Independence declares this right as God-given, unalienable and free from the curse of political favoritism.

Where in the world have the principles of the Declaration of Independence had better observance than here? Where is the individual so exempt in the opportunity to obtain an education to enjoy wholesome recreation, to get the full advantage of every invention promoting conveniences and comfort, to profit by thrift and to improve his condition? Where are general standards of living higher; and where is life itself worth while more than in this beloved country of ours?

It would be easy to index defects. Abuses undoubtedly exist. No government can escape the ills due to evil purposes of some men. Any just measure of liberty can be abused. But do not burn your house to get rid of the rats. You do not need to overturn your institutions in order to secure better administration of government. There is no promise of betterment in promoting class hatred. There is no advantage in uprooting the tree whose fruit we have enjoyed. There is no evil which cannot be cured by peaceful measures and through the use of the instrumentalities which our institutions provide.

In every crisis we wake up. But we need the sustained attention which is the price of successful self-government. Indifference is the characteristic of some of our people who have had the best advantages. They delude themselves with a false security and wash their hands of politics. It is idle to demand Americanization of the un-American if those who are assimilated ignore their most obvious political duties. Institutions will not save us; we must save ourselves.

Junior High School in Experimental Stage, Both as to Aid and Method

By F. G. STECKER, American Federation of Teachers.

The junior high school is still in the experimental stage, both as to aid and method, and therefore it is too soon to appraise it justly from the standpoint of its eventual usefulness.

However, it has been established that such schools offer more possibilities of differentiated curricula to suit special needs and abilities of children than does the traditional 8-4 plan; it offers to educators an opportunity for thorough-going reform and it may aid in the effort to retain children at school who would otherwise leave at the end of the eighth school year.

The dangers involved in the junior high school idea, in its present stage, are apparent in existing conditions rather than in their best possibilities for educational good. The first danger is that such schools will be associated with the notion of economy to the detriment, if not to the exclusion of the principle of greater service to the pupils.

At present teachers of the junior high schools often serve on a lower salary schedule and meet lower qualifications than do teachers in the senior high schools. The first necessity then, to a fair test of the value of such schools, is that qualifications of teachers shall be as high as those in the senior high schools.

True International Mind Will Not Suppress or Override Patriotism

By DR. NICHOLAS M. BUTLER, Columbia University.

There has been marked advance in Europe during the past two years. The economic problems, as well as those that are more strictly political, have become more clearly defined and public opinion is better informed concerning their real significance. It is generally agreed that the three steps next to be taken are security, judicial settlements of international differences, and then sharp limitation of armaments. The elimination of the brutality and the passions of war stands out clearly as the most pressing problem of this age. War will never be eliminated by any form of that internationalism which aims to ignore national tradition, national sentiment, national pride or national patriotism, but only by teaching and preaching that nations themselves are moral entities and that they have an obligation toward their fellow-nations exactly similar to that which an individual has toward his fellow-men. The true international mind will not suppress or override patriotism, but will exalt it into a zeal for friendly co-operation and international service that will strengthen the nation, precisely as similar conduct strengthens and enriches the life of the individual.

Why Is It Proposed to Take "Obey" Out of the Marriage Service?

By RT. REV. I. P. JOHNSON, Episcopal Bishop of Colorado.

Why is it proposed to take the word "obey" out of the marriage service? In my judgment because modern society has lost the sense of proportion which lies at the foundation of the home, and in order to justify itself, wishes to accommodate the word of God to palliate the situation.

The idea that the word "obey" connotes servility is the heresy of modern parents and the schism of modern families. The word "obey" is limited always by the circumstances of its use. When a woman is asked to obey her husband, she does not lessen the glory of her womanhood. A family is a corporation, and either the man is the head of the family, or else it is presided over by a committee of two, which has no way of determining a majority vote except by an endurance test. It is now proposed to endorse a headless family in the interests of accommodating truth to prejudice.

God made man to be the head of the family because it was his duty to provide and protect. The church exists to set forth ideals, not to justify the perversion of ideals.

LABOR GAIN SHOWN IN STATE FOR MONTH

U. S. Report Indicates Increase In Most Industries; Coal Situation Better.

Frankfort, Ky.—The United States Department of Labor Employment Service, in its industrial analysis for Kentucky for the month of August, reported industrial employment conditions showed steady improvement throughout the State.

Increased employment was noted in coal mining, the textile industry, foods and kindred products, building industry, highway construction, farm labor, and miscellaneous industries.

Although no particular large increase in forces was noted, the general outlook was analyzed as undoubtedly better. The surplus of unskilled labor, which has existed for some time past, was reported as being steadily absorbed.

A general improvement was noted in coal mining where an increased employment was reported with more mines on full time schedules. A shortage of labor was reported from some of the fields.

Although the increase in employment made in the lumber industry was not as great as in other industries, the outlook for improvement was given as "very satisfactory" but a surplus of this class of labor still exists.

Improved conditions were noted in the textile industry with a slight increase in employment and virtually all mills reporting full time schedules.

Foods and kindred products and miscellaneous industries made small gains while some employment loss occurred in the iron and steel plants.

Steady building programs throughout the State continue to offer employment to these tradesmen. Highway construction continues steadily, offering employment to a large number of workers.

The farm labor situation was reported as better than for many years ago today, with a slight exception of a shortage of labor in some sections.

WINCHESTER YOUTH HELD IN BOYD DYNAMITING

Lindsay Blair Charged With Blowing Up Home of Catlettburg Judge.

Winchester, Ky.—Lindsay P. Blair, 24 years old, son of Squire Blair, of Boyd County, was arrested here, on a warrant from the Boyd County Court, charging him with dynamiting the home of Police Judge Flannery in Catlettburg, recently. Sheriff H. D. Clark of Boyd County, with Deputies John McIntyre and Warner Blanton, arrived in Winchester with the warrants, and in company with Deputy Sheriff Don Insko, went to the home of George Holland, near Ford, this county, where the Boyd County officers claimed Blair was in hiding. Holland is a brother-in-law of Blair. The prisoner made no resistance, and after being hustled into an automobile, was driven to this city and later taken to Ashland by automobile. Blair's wife was with him and accompanied the officers and her husband back to Catlettburg. Holland, declares Blair, came to his home three weeks ago, ostensibly on a visit. According to Sheriff Clark, evidence in the hands of the officers indicates that three men were paid $550 to blow up the Flannery home. He declared that the arrest of Blair would probably bring about the arrest of prominent persons in Boyd County, who were bitter against Judge Flannery on account of his relentless fight on the illicit liquor traffic. Blair denied he guilt, and claimed he could easily prove an alibi. The arrest of Blair was kept a secret on request of Sheriff Clark, who was anxious to arrive at the Boyd County capital with his prisoner safely, before the news reached there. A reward of $2,000 is offered for the guilty parties.

$150,000 Park Bond Plan To Be Submitted To Voters

Padsch—The question of a $150,000 bond issue for establishment of a system of parks in Padsch will be submitted to voters at the regular November election. It became known, when counsel for the park commission informed the board that the question need only be advertised thirty days before the election. Sentiment is believed to be in favor of the movement for adequate parks in the city, and members of the commission are hopeful that the bond issue will be carried. Detailed plans for the purchase of grounds and locations of parks in the event the bond issue carries have not yet been made, but a conference of the commission for this purpose is scheduled for an early date. A park for the use of the negro population would also be included in the commission's program.

Two Men Injured When Bridge Scaffold Falls

Broaden, foreman of the Vincennes bridge company, was lightly hurt when a scaffold on the south end of the College street bridge gave way, dropping the men to the rocky bank of the river, thirty feet below. Harmon was unconscious when picked up and his injuries may result in his death. Five men were on the scaffold when the accident occurred. The others were unhurt.

family and place of business in Boone county to have only one phone in the county and every family having direct connections with every phone.

The citizens of Boone county are awake to the crying need of better telephone service, they are public spirited and progressive, and they have the opportunity within their reach not only to obtain better telephone service and secure a good paying investment, but to prove that they are progressive and ready to do their part in a movement, such as this, that will do the most good for the greatest number of people.

There is to be a Rally Day in the very near future at which time some of the leading citizens of Boone county will speak on the telephone situation. There will be plenty of music; valuable prizes will be given away and a good time assured to all. Information as to the time and place as well as all other details regarding Rally Day will be published in these columns later.

THE MAIL ORDER CATALOG

Some country town business men feel rather "flabbergasted" if they go into someone's home, and see a mail order catalog lying on the table. They are impressed by the elaborateness with which a big assortment of goods is advertised. It may seem to them as if they can not possibly compete with such thorough publicity.

But if they advertise in the home town newspaper, they can feel sure that every line in that newspaper is carefully read, while the mail order man must realize that many pages of his catalog go unnoticed in many homes. The country town store has values worth buying if the people only know about them, and by advertising them the interest of the people can be attracted.

Rhoads Stresses Importance Of School Board Elections

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 30.—In a statement issued today to the voters of Kentucky Superintendent of Public Instruction McHenry Rhoads urged that care be exercised in the selection of county boards of education at the November election.

The board elected this fall will elect the teachers in all subdistricts of their respective counties for service in the schools as well as the county superintendents who will assume their duties July 1, 1926.

The statement of Superintendent Rhoads follows:

"One very important question affecting the rights and privileges of the children of the State will be before you for determination at the regular November election of the present year. I refer to the election of members of the county board of education."

Asks Aid of Press

"Under the law each county in this State contains five educational divisions, one member of the County Board of Education is to be elected from each educational division by the qualified voters thereof. The law governing eligibility is as follows: 'Any person shall be eligible to the office of member of the County Board of Education who is over 21 years of age, and who has had a common school education, and who has been a resident in the county for which he or she is elected at least one year next preceding his or her election, and who is a resident of that division of the county district that he or she is chosen to represent, and who is not in the employ of the County Board of Education and not a party to any contract with the board.'"

"Under a recent decision of the Appellate Court the terms of county superintendents now will expire in 1926. The boards selected in November will elect the county superintendents, who will assume the duties of that office July 1, 1926. The boards elected in November will elect the teachers in all sub-districts of their counties for service in the schools."

"The voters of the State should not become so interested in local State contests as to overlook the great privilege of selecting a County Board of Education that will be likely to render the county and the children therein a patriotic and unselfish service."

IMPROVED FORD CARS

Every day new evidence comes in of the popularity of the Improved Ford cars.

It is not only expressed in the crowds which fill dealers show rooms all over the country and the groups which pause to inspect the cars wherever they appear on the streets nor alone in the thousands of orders being booked for immediate delivery, but also in orders entered for future delivery.

Probably the best index to future deliveries of those cars is found in enrollments in the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan, which have shown a remarkable increase since the cars made their appearance.

This increase was first noticed the last ten days in August, during which the announcement of the cars was made. In that period enrollments under the plan reached a total of 13,167 and in the ten days following, the first in September, the number of new purchasers under the plan totaled 16,054.

Those enrolled under the plan at the time the cars were announced announced all benefited by the change, for they will receive the new types and will be given preference when they desire delivery of cars.

More than 175,000 are now enrolled under the plan and with orders coming in at the rate of 1,600 a day it will not long before the enrollment list will exceed 200,000. Those who are ordering cars under the plan at the present time for the most part contemplate delivery either during the coming holiday season or for early spring next year.

FRUIT GROWERS TO HAVE SHORT COURSE

The State College of Agriculture at Lexington announces that it will give a four-day short course for fruit growers in December. It will be of a practical nature, and of value to beginners as well as to experienced orchard owners. There is increased interest in fruit growing all over the State. Peach growers made money this year, and the strawberry industry is growing rapidly. The fruit show at the State Fair was one of the best in years, in spite of the dry weather. Persons interested in the short course may obtain further information by writing to the Experiment Station at Lexington.

NEW SIGN-UP RESTS WITH GROWERS

Stone Gives Facts and Figures of Association Business in Address at Lexington and Expresses Confidence in Producers' Intelligence

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 5.—President and General Manager James C. Stone, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association, in an address before the Farmers' Union of Fayette county Saturday, declared that the matter of a new sign-up of the Burley Association for another term of years rested entirely with the growers, but asserted that he and the other officers and directors of the Association "have perfect confidence in the intelligence of the growers."

Mr. Stone gave a summary of the Association's accomplishments as follows:

Received in four years 733,000,000 pounds of tobacco and paid for it $121,788,116.98, an average of $16.60 a hundred pounds.

Still has on hand 165,000,000 pounds of the 1923 and 1924 crops from which to make further payments, which even if made on a sacrifice basis will net the grower more than 20 cents a pound for every pound delivered in the four years.

First two payments on each of the 1923, 1922 and 1923 crops far exceeded average paid for entire crops in any year on the loose leaf market previous to 1916.

1924 crop, the initial advance, exceeds average paid growers for their entire crops in either of the years of 1906, 1910 or 1914.

1925 crop, the first and more than 25 cents a pound on the second.

Of 1923 crop 245,000,000 pounds received and 85,000,000 pounds still on hand. Receipts of 1924 crop totaled 171,000,000 pounds and all sold except about 74,000,000 pounds. "We must not overlook the fact," said Mr. Stone, "that for the first time in the history of the tobacco industry, four consecutive Burley crops have been marketed at profit to the producer, and that the average which the grower may reasonably expect for his crops during the four years of co-operative marketing is equal to nearly equal to the average paid during the peak prices of the World War under the auction system."

In closing his address, Mr. Stone said:

"The underlying principle of the organization is based on honest and efficient management and fair dealing, both to the members and to the trade in general, and with the results already obtained and the character of organization developed, the continuation of the Association depends on the intelligence of the tobacco grower, in which the officers and directors of this Association have perfect confidence."

THE FIRE ON THE HEARTH

In the old pioneer days, the family hearthstone was the very center of the home. In the smoky fireplace of those times, the homelike warmth was used to prepare their laborious meals. The men were powerful eaters then, and it took a heap of work to keep them fed and quiet. In those days the family hearthstone was the symbol of earnest service for human comfort.

Many years ago those conditions passed. Today in many homes in Boone county no room is found for the family hearthstone.

Yet the fire on the hearth is very pleasant on a chill fall night. Its dancing flames are now the symbol of cheerfulness and pleasant conversation, while its grateful warmth is symbolic of family affection. Perhaps if the fire were blazing on more family hearthstones, not so many folks would be burning up the roads and chasing the streets in search of feverish excitement.

"Ted" Cook, of Hartland Farm, sends to the culinary editor of The Sun a clipping giving the following recipe for a "stew":

"Take one reckless, natural born fool, add 2 or 3 drinks of bootleg liquor, then mix thoroughly in a high powered automobile. After fool is thoroughly soaked, place his foot on the gas and release the brake. Remove the fool from the straw and place in a black satin lined box and garnish with flowers."—Woodford Sun.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A MOTHER

Mrs. Lou Ann Crisler, beloved wife of R. S. Crisler, age 71 years, died at 10 o'clock Tuesday night, September 29th, 1925, at the Deaconess Hospital, Cincinnati, where she had been for the past two months. It was thought that she was improving, but on Sunday she had a relapse and after two days illness she peacefully passed to her reward.

Mrs. Crisler was born October 2, 1854, in the Hebron neighborhood, and was a daughter of Almond and Amanda Southern Clore. She spent her entire life in Boone county—forty-two years of that time being spent in Burlington, Sept. 4, 1878, she was united in marriage to R. S. Crisler, to this union three children were born, two of whom are living—Dr. O. S. Crisler, of Columbia, Mo., and Mrs. Eugene Long, of Erlanger, besides her children and husband, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. C. Allen, of Pleasant, neighborhood, and Mrs. Jordan Beall, of near Hebron, and a host of friends and relatives.

Mrs. Crisler united with the Pt. Pleasant Christian church at the age of 13 years and remained true and faithful to the cause until her death. She was a devoted Christian woman and lived a quiet, modest and unassuming life, and devoted her time to her husband and to the rearing of her children. All that loving hands and physicians could do was done, but alas the summons came and she closed her eyes on this world forever. She was the ideal of her husband, who can hardly realize that Lou Ann is no more.

The remains were taken to the M. E. church Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock where funeral services were conducted by Rev. Gillespie yan, of Latonia. A beautiful tribute was paid to her memory by the ministers. The church edifice was crowded with sorrowing relatives and friends, and there was a extraordinary eye in the large audience so universal was the sympathy. The casket which was covered with beautiful flowers, which were sent by friends as a token of love and esteem. After the remains were viewed she was tenderly borne to the Odd-Fellows cemetery and laid to rest in the family lot by the side of a daughter who had gone before.

The bearers were B. B. Hume, G. W. Tolin, J. J. Kriepack, N. E. Riddell, Herbert Snyder and L. T. Utz. Philip Taliaferro, the Erlanger Undertaker, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

EASTERN STAR MEET

The Past Matron's Circle (1923 and 24) of the Thirtieth District met in all day session with Mrs. George Kreylich Thursday October 1st. Those present were Mrs. Emma Wasson of Newport; Mrs. Lillian Yindrock of Dayton; Mrs. Birdie Wireheart of Ft. Thomas; Mrs. Bertha Hedges of Latonia; Mrs. Lulu White, of Covington; Mrs. Hazel Wells of Covington; Mrs. Dunkie of Covington. Mrs. Dunkie assisting Mrs. Kreylich in entertaining. Honor guests were: Mrs. Clara Henrich Most Worthy Grand Matron of the General Grand Chapter; Dr. and Mrs. Menefee of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Martin of Ludlow. Officers for the ensuing year elected as follows: President Mrs. Emma Wasson, Newport; Vice-President Mrs. Lizzie Kreylich; Secretary Mrs. Lulu Houghton of Erlanger; Mrs. Lillian Yindrock, Mr. and Mrs. Martin remained over and attended the meeting of Four Star Chapter O. E. S. in the evening. Sister Henrich gave a most interesting and instructive talk on O. E. S. work. Mrs. Yindrock spoke of the meeting of the General Grand Chapter at Toronto with impressive ceremonies. Mrs. Lulu Tolin was initiated into the order. After being served with delicious refreshments, our Most Worthy Grand Matron expressed herself as most pleased with Four Star Chapter, feeling that there is a future in store for it.

Seventeen or eighteen years ago the Wrights started the world by driving a flying machine 56 miles in an hour and a half. Today Lieutenant Mitchell has made a record of 268 miles an hour, and inventors feel sure it will be possible to reach 500 m.p.h. This is surely an era of speed. An auto that cannot beat the average passenger train is a slow-going bus. A school girl took her father's new modern car out for a spin. On her return she remarked with intense disgust: "I don't see how you get 70 miles an hour out of that old bus—I couldn't get but 30." We want speed—and then more speed.

Some business men complain of their expenses, but it don't cost 'em a cent to put on a smile when they greet the country crowd, and it always brings results.

STONE MOUNTAIN CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL

During the past three weeks we have read in these columns of the wonderful Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, and its master sculptor, Augustus Lukeman, and of the Memorial Half Dollar. "A Memorial to the Valor of the Soldier of the South."

This subject is very timely, one, for during the past fifty years, no memorial has received such widespread publicity and comment and caused such great public interest. Every Governor in the South has joined hands with the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association to make the great project a success. All of the Confederate organizations of the South are represented on the Board of Directors of the Association by their leading officers. The Protestant, Catholic, Jewish faiths are represented. Men of outstanding national prominence are working in the interest of Stone Mountain. Mr. Walter H. Cooper of Washington, Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, of New York; Dr. Hugh Young, of Baltimore; Hon. Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland; Mr. Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago; Hon. Frank C. Lowden, former Governor of Illinois; Mr. Wm. F. Zumbrunn, of Kansas City; Mr. Gavin McNab of San Francisco; Hon. Wm. C. McAdoo of Los Angeles, are among those directly interested in the enterprise.

Last week the full significance of the Memorial Half Dollar was given in this column. It was explained that the coins are being sold at a premium of fifty cents each. In other words, one dollar is charged for the coins, the extra fifty cents being used to help finance the Stone Mountain memorial project.

A campaign is now under way in New York City to sell a quarter of a million coins. Chicago is preparing to sell 100,000 of these memorial half dollars. Within the next few months the campaign will be taken up in Cincinnati and vicinity to sell 35,000 memorial coins. It is hoped that our readers are now thoroughly familiar with the worthiness of this undertaking. Whatever differences there may have been, let us now have unity and progress for the memorial, and let each of us think and take courage, and go loyally, unitedly forward.

You, dear reader, are urged to do your bit by purchasing a Stone Mountain Half Dollar.

Coins are now on deposit in the Lincoln National Bank, Fourth and Vine Sts. Cincinnati, Ohio; Southern Ohio Savings Bank and Trust Co., 515 Main St., Cincinnati, Ohio; United Bank, Fourth and Walnut in all branches, Cincinnati, Ohio; Oakley Bank, Madison Road and Markbreit Ave., Cincinnati, O., and at the Times Star office at Sixth and Walnut St., Cincinnati. Persons who wish to buy coins can do so at the above addresses, the arrangement being for the buyer to sell the coins at $1.00 each and remit the premium to the Association.

With the history of Stone Mountain at your disposal and the full significance of the memorial coin explained, this should be an interesting acquisition to your home and a splendid keep-sake to present to your friends.

AUTUMNAL REFLECTIONS

For many years the poets have been writing melancholy reflections about autumn. They are inspired by the falling leaf and the frosted vegetation to think of the decline of humanity as age comes upon it.

Yet the scenes of autumn do not necessarily inspire sadness. When one sees them aright, there is a sense of triumph, that harvest has been accomplished and the labors of man have been granted their normal fruition. The destruction of vegetation by winter should not be regarded as a permanent loss. The forces of nature are having a rest, and are gathering their strength for a renewal of their activity in the spring.

Autumn is a very beautiful period of the year in Kentucky. The crisp air and bright skies and foliage should fill the people with vigor, and give them spirit for all kinds of useful work and recreating play.

Two National days will be celebrated in October. The first is Columbus Day, October 12th and the next Day October 27th is Navy Day. One hundred and fifty years ago on this date the Continental Congress, sitting in Philadelphia, drafting the plans for a conflict with England, adopted a resolution to construct the first ships of the American Navy. Navy yards will hold open houses and ships will be sent to various ports to give the public an opportunity to inspect them.

Annual Meeting Of Verona Free Fair

DAIRY OUTLOOK CONTINUES BRIGHT

The continued expansion of the dairy industry is causing some people to wonder if it soon may not be overdone. Data recently released by the United States Department of Agriculture indicate that the dairy business continues in a healthy state says Prof. J. J. Hooper, head of the dairy division of the Kentucky Experiment Station.

"The consumption of dairy products is tending to keep pace with increased production," Prof. Hooper said. "Creamery butter showed an increase in 1924 of 2,000,000 lbs. over that of 1923. The consumption of milk increased from 53 gallons per capita in 1923 to 55 gallons in 1924. More powdered milk, powdered cream, malted milk and milk chocolate are being consumed than ever before."

"People are rapidly being educated to the value of good milk, cream, butter and other dairy products. Quality counts now as never before. Producers and manufacturers are paying more attention than ever before to quality production. Many people are willing to pay a premium for clean milk and good butter. There apparently is no danger of overproduction, at least of high-quality dairy products, the demand for which is rapidly increasing everywhere."

There are 26,250,000 milk cows in American farms. Their average yearly production is 4,368 pounds of milk, or a total of 115,000,000,000 on farms is consumed in the household as milk and cream, and the other half goes to manufactured dairy products. Creamery butter takes 25 per cent of it, and farm butter 11 per cent. Four per cent of the milk is made into cheese, and another 4 per cent into condensed milk. Ice cream takes about 3 per cent of the milk produced.

TWO KINDS OF DREAMS

We hear about the country boy and the country girl whose minds are full of ambitious hopes for what they call a broader experience. They see the tall buildings and the bright lights of some distant city, as the stage of some theater where they feel they can play a more brilliant part. They imagine themselves as achieving some notable business success, or the girl may dream of marrying some high up man who shall place her on some pinnacle of wealth and society. But not one in a thousand times are such dreams realized.

In the crowded cities where these young people dream of their success, a different kind of vision is seen. There the tired men and women dream of country scenes. They have found out that the glitter of the city is largely false. It is showy, but cold and bare of affection and sentiment.

They have also discovered that the amassing of wealth in these city conditions is a very fast way of losing which it looks. They have learned that hundreds are competing for every favorable opportunity, and that friendly hands are not often stretched out to them along the way.

Tired of the strain of his competition, seeking eagerly the refreshment of the country scenes and friendships, their minds turn back to some simple little country town where they once dwelt or which they may have visited. Their dream is to have a little place out in such a locality, where they can earn their maintenance by some useful work or cultivation of the soil.

The finest of these dreams are created by the extravagance and boundless confidence of youth, and its lack of practical experience. The second is founded on reality by those who have tried various adventures and know about how much there is in them.

JOHN WINGATE, DEAD

John Wingate, another of the county's old and well known citizens, died at his home in Bellevue Sunday morning October 4. The cause of his death was the infirmities incident to old age. His wife preceded him to the grave two or three years ago. He is survived by three children—Mrs. Mary Harmon Jones, of Louisville; and Bluff Wingate of Sardinia, Ohio. Burial in the cemetery at that place Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

STUDENT WAITERS

One way by which a large number of young people are obtaining an education, is by waiting on the table at the dining halls in these institutions. It is a sign of the good American spirit that prevails in most schools, that no discredit or loss of dignity seems to attach to these young people who are thus earning their way. Some snobbish students may be less inclined to take such ones into their circles, but as a rule student sentiment seems to respect those who are fighting their own way.

Students who have these duties to perform may not find time for all the social activities that the rest enjoy. But the willingness to work indicates that a young person is eager for education, and his chances in the world would seem quite as good as the one to whom everything is handed free. Also you admire those who take up some practical task that needs to be done, rather than trying to sell things to people that they do not want.

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, a young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling rooms, and is fascinated, but can only learn that she is called Pauline de Fontenay and is with her aunt. He is unable to secure an introduction. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young men's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and concealment surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but is, a natural girl, interested in the girl, while Christopher Bent really loves her and would marry her.

CHAPTER VII—A mysterious Russian, Zubin, wins a large sum at the gambling tables. Gerald learns he knows the De Fontenays, but can get no information from him.

CHAPTER VIII—Christopher makes a mistake in his courtship of Myrtle, who is completely infatuated with Lord Dombey and would gladly give him as a mistress. He really cares little for her, his interest being all in Pauline.

CHAPTER IX—Gerald tells Pauline of his interest in the gambling tables, and asks him to find the girl. His indifference to her aunt, Gerald finds Zubin. The Russian has lost all he had won and practically everything else he had, and is now on his way to the ladies' club to kill himself.

CHAPTER X—It is learned that Zubin was the steward of Madame de Fontenay, and has lost at the gaming tables 3,000,000 francs, all the money she and her niece possessed. The two women leave Monte Carlo after selling their jewelry. Gerald is unable to trace her. He begins to have an interest in Myrtle, to Christopher's disquietude.

CHAPTER XI—Gerald is giving a convivial party to a few acquaintances of the gay world, where Myrtle urges him to allow her to attend. The company is not suitable for a young girl, and she refuses.

CHAPTER XII—Lady Mary offers to take Myrtle to England with her and her employment. Christopher is surprised to offer her gladly. Myrtle goes to Gerald's party. At its conclusion Christopher takes her away, where Gerald would have kept her in his rooms. Myrtle goes to England with Lady Mary.

CHAPTER II

Lord Hinterley leaned back in his chair and prepared to enjoy his greatest treat during the day—his one glass of vintage port.

"So you did not go to Scotland after all, Gerald?" he remarked, on the evening of the latter's arrival at Hinterley.

"No, I didn't go, sir," Gerald replied. "Some old friends of mine turned up in town. I have been spending a good deal of time with them."

"I would have preferred hearing that you had been on the moors," his father observed, with a glance at his son's pallid face and careworn expression. "London in August always seems to me intolerable."

"It was certainly very hot," Gerald admitted. "I was on the river a great deal of the time, though."

There was a short silence. Lord Hinterley was, as a rule, a reserved man, and he much disliked the task which he had set himself. He dined with it for a few moments, looking through the high window, across the terrace to the gardens below. His face softened as he glanced at the two girlish figures seated under the cedar tree, where coffee was being served.

"You have been guilty, I suppose, Gerald," he said drily, "of the usual number of indiscretions, but one action of yours which threatened to come under that heading. I shall always remember with gratitude Myrtle, the most wonderful child who ever came to brighten a somewhat dull household."

"I am glad you approve of her, sir," Gerald replied indifferently.

"The more I study her," Lord Hinterley went on earnestly, "the more she fills me with amazement. It seems as though she must be some sort of a spiritual changeling. I have always been, as you know, rather a stickler for race. Myrtle is one of those marvelous exceptions which upset all argument. She is an aristocrat all the finger tips in every way, small or great, that counts. It seems as though it were absolutely impossible for her to do an ungracious or ungraceful thing. She has destroyed every prejudice I ever possessed."

Gerald was interested at last. It was many years since he had known his father so enthusiastic.

"I am very glad you kept her here, sir," he remarked.

"I am more than glad—I am thankful," was the fervent reply. "I look forward with a pleasure which I can scarcely describe to the hours she gives up for my entertainment. To watch her development, too, during the last year, has been like watching a beautiful flower."

"She made a conquest of you, at any rate, dad," Gerald remarked. "I thought myself that she looked perfectly sweet tonight at dinner time."

"She has made a conquest of me to an extent which I should never have believed possible," Lord Hinterley admitted, glancing across at his son. "I have had an elderly man's desire, Gerald, to welcome home to Hinterley the woman whom you might decide to choose for a wife. I have kept a little list in my mind of the young women at present known to society, whom it would give me pleasure to see here. I have never for one second contemplated the addition to that list of an unknown person. And yet—"

"There is no question of anything of that sort between Myrtle and me, sir," Gerald declared, breaking a somewhat embarrassed pause.

Lord Hinterley slipped his port and looked once more out of the window. Gerald, a little startled by his father's unexpected suggestion, was suddenly conscious of that one wild moment after his party at the Hotel de Paris, of Christopher's stern figure, of that strange medley of sensations, the flare of passion which seemed to have been polished in the shame of Christopher's triumph. He, too, looked out of the window. Myrtle had been a child then. She was a woman now, more wonderful, more gracious, just as completely virginal. Yet to him she existed at that moment only as the picture of something that had passed.

"I am afraid," his father said, a little sadly, "that Myrtle does not look at it quite the same way. However, that is nothing. It may be only a sort of hero-worship with her. It was you, I understand, who took the initiative in bringing her away from her home."

"My indifference to your 'her' is a little abnormal for her years. Doubtless it will pass when the right man arrives. I envy that man more than any other living."

Lord Hinterley slowly finished his wine. Gerald produced his cigarette case.

"You are ready, sir?" he asked.

"Will you take my arm?"

"Not for a moment," was the quiet reply. "You perceive, from my reference to Myrtle, that I am in a confidential frame of mind. I shall go to the ladies' club."

"Not in the least, Gerald, I do not, as a rule, interfere in such matters, as you know, but I take a certain natural interest. I think, in your associates and your affairs generally. It has come to my knowledge through various channels that you have spent the better part of last month with two ladies bearing a French name—"

"an aunt and a niece—both unknown to English society."

"That is true, sir," Gerald admitted. "Furthermore," Lord Hinterley continued, "though again I am a little outside my province, I must confess that I was somewhat disturbed to hear from Mr. Bendover that you had offered for sale a portion of the Luttrell property and were considering a mortgage upon Rhyssall."

"I do not know why Mr. Bendover should have troubled you with these details," Gerald said, a little uneasy, "but in the main they are correct."

"I make you an allowance, as you know," his father continued, "as my only son and the heir to Hinterleys, of five thousand a year, which I can well afford to do. You have yourself a portion of Hinterleys house in town, and you have the use of my servants there. Your polo ponies, by express arrangement, have always been charged to my own stable expenses. You must forgive me, my feeling some surprise, therefore, at the fact that you have found it necessary to raise these large sums of money."

Gerald was silent for a moment, conscious of and inwardly resenting his father's anxious scrutiny. Something of the bitterness which he was feeling showed itself, perhaps, in his tone.

"I needed the money, dad," he said. "It will probably all come back to me, or its value."

"If the necessity is occasioned by your losses at cards or on the turf," Lord Hinterley continued, "I should prefer making you some advance myself, to having you part with land which belongs to your great-grandmother, or executing a mortgage upon any part of your property."

"I have needed the money for quite a different purpose," Gerald explained, "a purpose which precluded my applying to you. There are other people involved."

"You have never presented yourself to my mind, Gerald," his father admitted, "as being a likely tool for the adventures or harpies of the world. I shall continue to believe that you are able to take care of yourself, although I am bound to say that I regret your lack of confidence."

"I shall in no condition to tell you the whole story very shortly," Gerald promised. "The element of secrecy about it at present has nothing to do with me."

"They made their way through the window, on to the terrace, down the steps and across the lawn to the cedar tree. Myrtle, who had been leading the coffee tray, and Gerald, remembering his father's recent words, gazed at her with a new, though somewhat hazy interest. The thinness of a year ago had given place to the slender perfection of early womanhood. She had the air of being lovely and gracefully at ease, yet the sweetness of her smile, a certain ever-present but unobtrusive desire to please, seemed like the hallmarks of her restraint but unexpressed gratitude. Lady Mary, sunbust and amiable, lolled in a hammock, with a cigarette between her teeth. There was a telegram upon her knee. She seemed content with life.

"Have you heard the news?" she asked. "Christopher has been invited to stand for West Leeds. It is a certain seat and he has accepted. He is coming down tomorrow afternoon."

"Good old Chris!" Gerald murmured. "Though what on earth he wants to spend half his time pottering about in the house of commons for, I can't imagine."

"Your friend Christopher Bent," Lord Hinterley observed, "finds his pleasures, without a doubt, somewhat interfered with by the possession of some out-of-date principles. He will be very welcome here. My coffee and the evening paper, if you please, Myrtle."

Myrtle's attention had momentarily wandered. Her eyes were fixed upon Gerald, who was looking paler and more tired than ever in the clear evening twilight.

"You found it hot in the city?" she asked softly, as she poured out the coffee.

He frowned impatiently. There is nothing which irritates a selfish man more than the evidences of an affection which he does not covet.

"If it was, I don't deserve any sympathy," he replied. "I was only there because it amused me."

He threw himself into a chair, declined coffee with unnecessary abruptness, and asked for brandy. Myrtle with a little paler at her heart, no infrequent visitor there, took her place apart from the others, under Lord Hinterley's, and reading the newspapers commenced her evening task.

The world seemed a very good place to Lady Mary as, from the depths of her chair under the cedar tree on the following afternoon, she watched Christopher, conducted as far as the terrace by the butler, descend the steps lightly and move across the lawn toward her. He walked with the dignity and assurance of a man whose life is being worthily lived. It was a long way across the lawn, and the girl who waited for his coming had time for a crowd of pleasant thoughts as she watched the approach of the man upon whom she had set her heart. Everything that he did and had done in life appealed to her. He had sentiment enough—that was proved by the tenderness for Myrtle to which he had consented. It was Monte Carlo, a night which she had always remembered as one of the unhappiest of her life. She was so long since been convinced, both by his manner and Myrtle's, that the tenderness, such as it had been, had become merged in a purely fraternal and kindly regard. Of his reticence toward herself she thought nothing. He was possessed, as she well knew, of a very high sense of honor, and she had always felt that, however greatly she might have desired to hear his declaration, he would say nothing until he had passed definitely out of the somewhat miscellaneous category of rising young men in the position of one whose future was assured. Today he was the youngest K. C., and a seat in parliament was almost within his reach. She thought of her own fortune with a deep sense of pleasure. It was larger than he imagined, larger than any one else except herself and her father knew. Christopher would be free to make the best of himself, free for all time from any shadow of financial worry. How she looked, how strong and eager! She held out both her hands as he drew near, and her smile of welcome made her for a moment radiantly beautiful.

"How delightful to see you, Christopher!" she exclaimed. "And what wonderful news! It's just what you wanted, isn't it, and just what we all wanted for you?"

He took her hands and stood smiling down at her. Her heart was beginning to beat more quickly. She hoped that he would suggest walking in the gardens.

He did not get down, nor did he suggest the garden. He had looked around for a moment, almost as though disappointed to find her alone. Still her heart did not misgive her. She thought him a little nervous, and she smiled tolerantly.

"You were a dear to telegraph to me at once," she said. "I can't tell you how interested and overjoyed I was."

"I wanted you all to know," he declared, looking around once more. "How is every one?"

"In excellent health, thank you," she answered. "Father is having his usual afternoon sleep. Gerald has been here, but, as I dare say you know, he was away this morning. We must talk about him later, Christopher. I am rather worried—but that can wait. Will you sit down, or would you like to see how wonderful the gardens are?"

He looked at her a little apologetically, yet without the slightest idea of how great an apology was needed.

"I would," he said, "if I could see Myrtle."

"Myrtle?" Mary repeated. He assented a little sheepishly, yet with a rather engaging smile.

"I wanted to see her and tell her about it," he confessed. "She would understand just what it means, perhaps, but she's so much more of a woman now."

His voice seemed to come from a long way off. It seemed all part of a horrible nightmare, something unreal, some black thought, the Ego, nocturnal fancy. Then she was waiting, expectant, with the eyes of a lover in his eyes.

"Myrtle went down to gather hopping in roses," she told him. "You will be at the end of the pergola," a daughter he was gone almost before Mrs. T. words had left her lips, and with some sort of mumbled excuse, and the scious of the tragedy he had created, he dumly obvious of the fierce alert Robert which had kept her calm and collected. She turned her head and came to her feet, and she was there at the eager footsteps, and her tail flag steepled as he entered the pergola. Her fingers tore at the sides of her chair. She looked at the distance between her and the terrace steps. If only she could escape! Her limbs for the time seemed powerless. She sat there with all the healthy color drained from her cheeks, her fixed eyes seeing nothing but the ruin of her confident hopes. She could see herself growing old, marching down the avenues of time, preserving in a certain measure, perhaps, her dignity, but growing day by day a little more jealous and narrow, a little more capricious of the happiness of others. There was only one Christopher, and he was there at the bottom of the pergola with Myrtle. Even in her bitterness she did not, for a moment, there was a hunt.

"There is still your work," she went on, "great, wonderful work waiting for you. And your friends. Don't take this so hard, Christopher."

He looked down at her with a very forced smile.

"Oh, I shall get over it," he assured her. "I am not the first man who has had to face this sort of thing. It is odd, though, that it should have happened to me."

"You wouldn't like me to speak to Myrtle?"

"Absolutely useless," he replied. "She was really shocked when she knew why I had come. I believe it seems to her a trifle irrelevant to discuss the possibility of her caring for any one except Gerald. No, I'm not going to encourage any false hopes, Mary. I've had my answer and there's an end of it. What I want to do is to get away."

"That you can do and shall," she assented. "I did so want to hear about Leeds, but that must be another time. You won't know away from us because of this Christopher?"

"Of course not," he promised heartily. "I'll write, if I may. There are heaps of things I want to tell you. You won't mind?"

She smiled and let him open the door, taking him by a devious way to the courtyard where his car was still standing.

"There," she directed, "you can go out by the south drive, across the deer park, and you won't meet a soul."

"God bless you, Mary!" he said. "You're a wonderful pal."

She laid her hand upon his arm. That sense of sickening joy had gone. She was a woman again, feeling nothing but sorrow for the suffering of her man.

"Christopher, dear," she begged. "Myrtle will see the truth in this. Gerald cares nothing for her, nothing for anybody except himself and his own pleasures. She will understand this presently. Remember, although she has grown so sensible and so gracious in her attitude toward life, she is really only a child."

"In one way she will always be a child," she answered sadly. "Her love will last her time. Whether Gerald ever returns it or not."

"There is still your work," she went on, "great, wonderful work waiting for you. And your friends. Don't take this so hard, Christopher."

He looked down at her with a very forced smile.

The word "dormitory" comes from a Latin one meaning sleep, but the crowd that occupy them at the colleges won't do much sleeping in them for some weeks after the term begins.

man could commit for the sake of fancy. She could call it nothing else.

Presently she rose calmly to her feet and walked toward the house. Soon it swallowed her up, the key was turned in the door of her room, the long minutes that passed were her own. She never counted them then, she never dwelt on them afterward. The period of her agony was, in fact, short enough. Her pride came to her rescue. When her maid tapped on the door she had already bathed her eyes, and there remained nothing to denote her suffering but a little tired look about her mouth and a slight weariness of gait. She opened the door at once.

"Mr. Bent is obliged to go back to town almost immediately, your ladyship," the maid announced. "He has asked especially whether he could see you for a moment."

"Tell Mr. Bent that I shall be down in five minutes," her mistress enjoined.

The maid departed, and Myrtle turned once more anxiously to the mirror. This was a trial which she had scarcely expected. Her fingers passed over her face, anxious to smooth out its lines. Her lips moved, as though she were uttering a prayer. She was, indeed, appealing to herself, to the strength and pride of her young womanhood. When she entered the library where Christopher was waiting for her, she knew that she was free from all trace of disturbance.

"Christopher, you don't mean that you are going to leave us at once?" she protested. "And where is Myrtle? I expected to see you both together."

"I look Myrtle when I found her," Christopher answered, a little harshly. "Will you keep my secret, please, Mary, and forget my visit?"

"Forget your visit?" she repeated wonderingly.

"Myrtle does not care for me," Christopher explained, "not in the way I want her to. It is the same with her now as from that first moment. I thought it was a fancy of which she might have been cured. I find it is nothing of the sort."

At that moment Mary hated herself, hated the joy which welled up in her heart, hated the sudden despondent

STARTING A BUSINESS

Every year a certain proportion of people start doing business for themselves. They are not satisfied to accept the status of a wage or salary earner, but they desire the independence and chance for expansion which success in business gives. The great majority of course, try out by starting some kind of a retail store.

It is a fine spirit of initiative, but there are certain principles of success that will commonly have to be complied with, if the aspirant for profits expects to obtain the results he seeks. If a person does not feel able or willing to comply with these rules, it is commonly better for such a one to work for someone else.

One of these principles that usually applies in starting a business is that it must take some positive steps to bring itself before the public. As a usual thing, that means that it must advertise.

John Wanamaker, one of the most famous business men that the world ever produced, showed the spirit that the aspirant for success will do well to manifest. The day he opened his store in Philadelphia, he took in $21.60 as the receipts of trade. The next day he spent $21 of that money for advertising. We all know what the result is, and how Mr. Wanamaker built up one of the most wonderful businesses that the world ever saw. He could never have done it but for advertising. His success and the way he achieved it should teach both new and old concerns a lesson.

If advertising was necessary in those times many years ago, when business people were spending relatively little for publicity, it is far more necessary now, when competition is so intense and when it is aggressively pushed by lavish advertising.

Almost everybody who owns property complains of higher taxes. Municipal, state and county taxes have been increased about 10 per cent, but property values have increased 100 per cent. Pretty good investment. During the past ten years the wealth of the nation has increased 200 per cent more than all the costs of government. You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

How Doctors Treat Colds and the Flu

The Closing Down Of The Coal Industry Will Affect Both Alike

Those who are insistent upon a tonnage tax on coal—a tax which would certainly disorganize this great Kentucky industry—seem to think only of the effect of such a tax upon the "Operator."

What about the coal miner—that citizen who depends upon the coal industry for a livelihood? The wage earner?

These men—the coal operator and the coal miner—are partners in the most literal translation of the word. What affects one must of necessity affect the other. The operator could not conduct his business without the co-operation of his fellow-worker—the miner. Nor could the miner readily find employment at his chosen trade unless the operator risks his judgment and his capital in the operation of a property.

So—in considering the proposed tonnage tax on Kentucky coals, with its added handicaps to this great industry, an industry already burdened with tremendous handicaps of heavy freight rate differentials and severely competitive marketing conditions, please remember that it is not the "Operator" alone who would suffer. His partner, the Kentucky coal miner, would fare equally as badly.

There are only approximately 175 coal producing companies in Kentucky. But there are over sixty thousand coal miners. These men, with their more than three hundred thousand dependents, surely deserve fair and just consideration.

Think of this when you are asked to support added taxation on the coal industry of our State.

IF YOU GET UP NIGHTS YOU'RE OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

Prostate and Bladder Trouble Makes Many Men Feel Twenty Years Older Than They Are.

It is said that fifty per cent of men past forty and many younger ones are victims of prostate trouble. One of the commonest symptoms of this dangerous disease which saps vitality and makes you old before your time is the necessity of getting up several times a night. Other symptoms are dull, dragging, aching at the base of the spine, pain in groin, burning sensation, frequent lack of vigor and frequent attacks of the blues. But there is hope for you, no matter how old your age, from a wonderful formula. It is called the "Prostate Formula." It restores to you the vigor, health, vigor and freedom from these troubles to both old and young. This wonderful treatment is known as Walker's Prostate Specific, and is prepared in convenient, pleasant tablet form. All you need do is take one tablet after each meal and the symptoms seem to vanish like magic. To prove these statements the Walker Institute, 1924 Oak Street, Kansas City, Mo., generously offers to send a $1 treatment under plain wrapper, postpaid and free of charge to any sufferer who will write for it. If it cures you, tell your friends and pay whatever you think is fair, otherwise the loss is ours. Remember that you are the judge, and you pay nothing now or at any time unless you wish to send your name today. Introductory offer is withdrawn. It is good for only 10 days and guaranteed in every way.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT now centers in Washington. On the broad shoulders of Edmund Budnitz, new regional administrator for the Washington district, has been placed the admittedly difficult task of effectively drying up the nation's capital. Because Washington is the center of American politics, it is regarded as the pivotal point in the Administration's attempt to make the dry law effective. Failure to do so in this city, which for years has been noted as a city where liquor may be purchased with relative ease, would be a severe blow to the Treasury's campaign and for that reason the new campaign is expected to witness the unleashing of every agency available for the task. The possibility that a group in Congress may in the forthcoming session attempt to amend the law is understood to hinge on the results obtained during the present campaign.

MRS. FRANK B. Kellogg, wife of the Secretary of State has stirred up a bit of comment over her plans for a series of elaborate social functions in Washington this winter. Her small dinner parties in London, while Mr. Kellogg was Ambassador to the Court of St. James, drew even King George and Queen Mary. Now, as the wife of the ranking member of the cabinet, her plans are reported to be for even more impressive entertainments. One or two dowagers are reported to be piqued, with indications that serious competition may result. Young people are watching the situation with interest. The first formal gathering sponsored by Mrs. Kellogg was a reception to delegates to the Interparliamentary Union conference, which has attracted famous legislators from all nations.

Since the RECORDER is fifty years old we think it time that it settled down to business. In all the past fifty years it has been the policy of the paper to let subscribers pay for the paper whenever they happened to be in Burlington, but a great many people don't "happen" in Burlington very often, and its very easy to forget the RECORDER when they do come. Of course the campaign placed a number of people ahead, but there are some still behind and a number being added every week. If you take a daily you don't get a single issue after your time is out. The RECORDER has to pay for everything it buys, when the bills are rendered—that's business—and the only way for any enterprise to survive. When the day of the month arrives indicated on your date line your subscription is due for another year, so watch your date line—Please, On November 1 we will be compelled to remove all "past due" subscribers from the list.

If you desire to remain on the list send remittance by mail—that's business. Your silence will mean that you do not care to continue, thereby causing removal on November 1.

In another column in this issue will be found an article from McHenry Rhoads, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Frankfort, in which he calls attention of the voters to the election of county board members at the next general election, Nov. 2, 1925, in which he urges that the people exercise care and good judgment in the selection of the best person qualified for this responsible position in their respective educational divisions. The school policies of the country for the next few years will be determined by the board elected this November. The board elected this fall will elect the teachers in all the sub-districts of their respective counties for service in the schools as well as the county superintendents who will assume their duties July 1, 1926. Every voter in the county should read this article and then see that good men are elected as members of the board.

Fannie Hicks, daughter of a Henderson county miner, won championship honors with her exhibit of canned products at the State Fair at Louisville, and will represent Kentucky at the National Boys' and Girls' Club Congress during the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago next December. Her expenses will be paid by the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co., of West Virginia.

Her exhibit comprised 26 cans of fruits and vegetables, representing the proper amount of canned products for a family of five for one week in the winter. She submitted menus showing how the canned foods should be served. The junior agricultural club canning exhibit attracted much attention at the fair.

The Polish Government has prohibited the sale of alcoholic beverages from 3 p. m. on Saturday until 10 a. m. Monday. An exception to the decree is beer with a maximum of two and one-half per cent alcohol.

In the cities many young folks depend on "pull" to help them get along, while out in the country they depend on push. One guess allowed as to which will land a fellow further along.

In the country, many folks are longing for the excitement of city streets, while in the cities, many folks are longing for the pleasant social times they have out in the country.

President Coolidge has had to consult a throat specialist, but it is not claimed that this is because he talked so much.

The politicians deny that they are the friends of the rich, except about the time when they need campaign funds.

INITIATIVE

The world bestows its big prizes in money and honors for one thing—initiative. And what is initiative? It is using your brain and doing the right thing without being told. A green reporter one among 200 employed by a great New York news agency, always accepted the assignment of his chief, and always gave his chief the outline of another story. In six months he was advanced over all leads and placed in charge of a Boston office at double salary. Six months later he was in charge of the Washington bureau.

He possessed no greater qualifications than hundreds of others but his ideals and ambitions overshadowed his pay envelope.

The next qualifications is to do a thing without being told twice. This class are dependable, but never get very far up the ladder. Initiative means doing more than you are told.

Besides the men who have to be told twice is a class who do the right thing only when necessity compels them to. Its like being kicked into position. They are usually found polishing the bench with hardluck stories.

There is still another class who never do the right thing unless some one goes along to see that they do and show them how. Unless they have a rich father or an office "pull" they are usually out of jobs. They don't know the meaning of the word.

Initiative is the first stepping stone necessary for an executive in any position.

Do you possess it in any degree? If in doubt talk it over with half a dozen of your most intimate friends and get a line on yourself.

TWO-TON LITTER WINS STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

The Poland-China litter owned by Sanders Bros., Garrard county, won the grand championship of the ton litter show at the State Fair at Louisville. This litter comprised 12 pigs which weighed 4,325 pounds when 180 days old, a world's record for 12 pigs of one litter at that age. The Vissman Packing Company paid $14.25 per 100 pounds for the litter.

The first prize Hampshire litter shown by C. H. Holman, Washington county, sold to the Emmart Packing Company of Louisville for $15 per 100 pounds, the top price paid for any of the 11 ton litters shown. The first prize Duroc litter was shown by Edgewood Farm, Fayette county, and the first prize Spotted Poland-China litter by Samugli Wilson, Washington county.

Seventy-four of the 118 pigs shown were purchased by the Vissman Packing Company, and the rest by the Emmart and Fischer packing companies. The show was conducted under the auspices of Grady Sellards of the extension division of the State College of Agriculture, and was the first of its kind at the State Fair. The big litters attracted much attention.

ORGANIZATION WORK

Country towns do not develop and gain advantage of themselves. Much work must be done to obtain these advantages. If people would be willing to take a few hours of each week to devote to community improvement work, instead of devoting every minute of their time to their own affairs, they would obtain more of the advantages that their town needs.

Every man and woman ought to belong to at least one organization which is carrying on some form of work for the benefit of the community. Organizations of boys and girls should not be content merely to have a good time, but they should plan to aid some form of local improvement. A town in which people generally take hold to push such activities should be able to make remarkable progress.

THE COUNTRY AGE

The 19th century was pre-eminently the age of the city. The drift of population to these centers was amazing. Meanwhile the country districts were neglected.

That drift has continued considerably into the 20th century. But constructive people all over the country have waked up to the fact that the need of this century is to develop rural conditions, so that they are made just as favorable as city conditions are. There is much to make one believe that the 20th century, before it goes on much further, will be the country age. In which any better rural community can have practically all advantages possessed by cities, and escape many disadvantages possessed by cities, and escape many disadvantages that the crowded centers contend with.

A Washington county team composed of J. R. Montgomery, R. C. Perkins and Cecil Moore, trained by County Agent G. W. Gardner, won a live stock judging contest participated in by 58 county junior agricultural club judging teams at the State Fair. They received a cash prize of $60, given by the Courier-Journal and a silver trophy from the Bourbon Stock Yards Company. Lincoln county won second, Caldwell county third, and Madison county fourth and Madison county fifth. The Courier-Journal divided $200 among the best five teams.

PASSING THE BUCK

Secretary's Mellon's plan for reducing the surtaxes on great incomes, which seems to have the President's endorsement, will not affect the taxes paid by 40,000,000 America's engaged in agriculture, because the vast majority of "fifti farmers" never have any surtaxes to pay, and in only a few instances are liable for inheritance taxes.

The suggestion of Senator Coveney, of Michigan, that no tax be levied on incomes less than $5,000 has met with the opposition of Secretary Mellon and of Senator Smoot chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance who is supposed to represent the Administration.

The 16 per cent of the farmer's income, which now goes to taxes, not only helps to make his vocation unprofitable, but limits his efficiency—especially if to that 16 per cent is added from 6 to 9 per cent paid on mortgage loans.

The farmer will not be "bamboozled" by the abolition of "luxury" taxes or "nuisance" taxes on motor vehicles designed to meet the demands of city people. What he needs and wants is something direct and substantial—something that is not in the end passed along for him to pay with no chance of his passing it either backward or forward.

Rents are now 70 per cent higher than the pre-war average. Cost of food is about 60 per cent higher. Average wage earnings for 300 days is not in proportion.

Fall is here. Take a long breath and a fresh start.

In Loving Memory of my Dear Friend Mrs. R. S. Crisler.

The rolling stream of time flows on, But still the vacant chair Recalls the love, the voice, the smile Of our dear friend who once sat there.

The flowers we lay upon your grave May wither and decay, But the love we bore for you Aunt Lou will never fade away.

'Twas hard to part with one so dear But God who knoweth best, Held wide his loving arms and said "Come unto me and rest."

Not dead to us who loved her, Not dead, just gone before, And in our hearts and memory She will live forever more.

Sadly missed by Mrs. W. C. Hughes.

After the taxpayers of all lands have paid interest on their debts 50 years or more, they may learn that war is an expensive luxury which they can not afford to enjoy any longer.

A trail of 19,000 dead and more than 450,000 injured lay in the wake of automobiles as they sped over the highways of the nation in 1924. Of the dead 5,700 were children. In the World War the total of dead and wounded in the American army overseas was 276,948.

There will be many new dance steps this winter. Only a few will be steps in the right direction.

WHAT IS IT?

A revival meeting will begin at the East Bend Baptist church next Sunday October 11. Rev. O. J. Steger, of Latonia will assist the pastor and church in the effort.

Brother Steger insists that we have day services as well as night services. Though this is an innovation in the country meeting every one is asked to cooperate in it and make it a great success.

The following is a type of the subjects that will be discussed by Bro. Steger in the day services.

The Revival of a Dead Church. Marks of a True Church. The Three Classes in Every Church.

The Church's Divine Constitution. Revivals and How They Start. Stewardship.

The following will indicate the character of the night messages:

Job's Sure Knowledge. The Meaning of the Blood. God's Proven Love. The Golden Text in God's Story of Redemption.

The Believers Question. A Message from the Other World. God's Call to Men.

Sowing and Reaping. The Nature and Author of Regeneration.

A Valley of Dry Bones. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Bird of Kenton county, headed the Kentucky honor list of cows producing three pounds of butterfat in two days in August, as tested under the supervision of the dairy department of the University of Kentucky. She produced 102.6 lbs. of milk containing 4.8 pounds of butterfat.

Second on the list is Fairy's Lad's Success, a four-year-old Jersey owned by the Experiment Station, which produced 90.8 pounds of milk containing 4.45 pounds of butterfat. A two-year-old Jersey owned by Mr. Bird was third, producing 79.8 lbs. of butterfat.

Forty-two Jerseys, 13 Holsteins and five Guernseys were tested during the month. Twelve Jerseys and three Holsteins produced three or more pounds of butterfat each in two days.

It could be suggested to some foot ball teams, that it does not look well to slug an opposing team so hard that none of them can walk off the field.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

It is only a few years since the youth of Sweden were trained for war. Now they are being moulded mentally and physically for paths of peace. Old military drill grounds are converted into play grounds.

From ten to fifteen complaints against fraudulent stock companies are received each day by the Attorney General of New York State, who reports a total of 500 since the first of this year. About half of the bogus stocks and bonds sold in this country are marketed in that state, the total sales being estimated at $500,000,000 per year.

According to the latest complications, the total amount of life insurance in force in the U. S. and Canada at the end of the first quarter of 1925 exceeded $64,000,000. This represents about $1,000 of protection for the beneficiaries of each of the approximately 55,000,000 Americans and Canadians who carry life.

Five women lawyers of Montgomery, Ala., have combined to give legal aid to women who are in need of assistance and have not the means with which to pay for it.

James C. Stone Again Chosen President of the Burley Poolers

HIGH TRIBUTE PAID BURLEY CHIEF BY JUDGE BINGHAM

Opening their proceedings with prayer by one of their number, the Rev. J. R. Jones, of Cynthiana, for divine guidance during the coming year and a realization of their responsibility and the tremendous importance of their task, directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association Wednesday, October 7th, re-elected James C. Stone president and general manager, Bush W. Allen of Harrodsburg and James N. Kehoe, of Mayville, vice presidents; H. K. Bourne of New Castle and Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, as members of the executive committee; H. Lee Earley of Lexington and Louisville as secretary and treasurer, and Aaron Sapiro of Chicago, as general counsel. All officers were elected unanimously.

During the election of a president Joseph E. Robinson, of Lancaster, was made president pro-tem and Mr. Stone was nominated by Judge Bingham in a feeling talk, in which he paid tribute to the "wisdom, patience, ability, fidelity and honesty with which Jim Stone has discharged the responsible duties of an exacting position." Judge Bingham declared that a number of other agricultural pools, among them the wheat pools of Canada, Kansas and Indiana, and the peanut growers' associations, formed since the organization of the Burley Association, had obtained their chief inspiration from the Burley success and he said that a large part of this success was due to the management of the association by Mr. Stone.

Mr. Stone had a brief response after his election in which he expressed his appreciation of the continued confidence of the growers, as evidenced by the action of their representatives.

"There are some things worth more than money," said Mr. Stone, "and one of them is the confidence and good will of the 180,000 men you represent here. I pledge you the very best service there is in me and I hope I shall always enjoy the confidence and esteem you have manifested heretofore."

Tribute to the work of Mr. Stone for the tobacco growers of the Burley district also was paid by Hon. Elliott Northcutt, of West Virginia, and W. O. Protzman, of Indiana, in seconding his nomination, and President pro-tem Robinson said that in all the comments he had heard about the association, favorable and unfavorable, he never had heard a word of criticism of Mr. Stone and nothing but praise from the growers for the able way in which he has managed the association's affairs.

Reports of directors individually indicated a reduction in the yield of tobacco this year as compared with last year of around 30 per cent. This estimate was confirmed by detailed report from the field service, made by Chief William Collins, and based on figures sent in by growers themselves and by workers in the field service.

Mr. Stone reported that there had been a reduction of fifty per cent in the number of landlords' liens filed with the association in the past year, a reduction of sixty per cent in the number of garnishments of association members' tobacco and a reduction of fifty per cent in the number of transfers of interests in participation certificates.

The directors were sworn in by Judge J. H. Thurman, of Springfield, and included the directors at large, who were unanimously re-elected as follows:

Kentucky—Judge Robert W. Bingham, Louisville.

Indiana—W. H. O'Brien, Lawrenceburg.

Ohio—George A. McCormick, Stout.

The election of Mahlon Gabbert, of Missouri, as an associate director for that state, was confirmed and W. Y. Allen, of Gallatin, was continued as associate director for Tennessee.

The field service reported that the total enrolled membership is 108,315.

A Aaron Sapiro general counsel, was present and went over the proposed new sign-up contract with the directors. George Morgan, field service chief and general manager elect of the Dark Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, and J. Guthrie Coke, of Auburn, a director and member of the executive committee of the Dark Association, also attended the meeting.

After reading those alluring advertisements in the magazines and deciding that he needs $15,760 to take care of his immediate wants, it is rather disconcerting to a man to count his cash and find only sixty-nine cents.

YOUNG COUPLE QUIETLY MARRIED AT LATONIA, KY.

John Lassing, Jr., and Miss Ruth Hensley, of Petersburg, were quietly married last Wednesday evening at 9 p. m., at the home of Rev. H. E. Trent, pastor of the Trinity M. E. church at Latonia. It was more of a surprise to their relatives and friends.

The groom is the youngest son of Judge J. M. Lassing, of Burlington, while the bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hensley, of Petersburg.

The young couple will leave soon for St. Petersburg, Florida, where they will make their home.

MARY KATHERINE DOBSON

Mary Katherine Dobson, daughter of Thomas Dobson, was born Nov. 24th, 1913 at Cincinnati, Ohio, and departed this life October 8th, 1925, at the age of eleven years ten months and fourteen days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ewbanks at Breaux, Ky., where she had lived as a loving little daughter for the past five years and whose companionship this family had so much enjoyed, having been so happily connected with each other.

She united with "Good Confession" and the South Fork Christian church of Boone county, at the tender age of nine years, being the youngest member of the church and Ladies Aid Society. Altho young in years, she felt her responsibility as a member of her church.

Her faith in God and her loving watch-care over her, was an inspiration to those who were associated with her in the home. Her life so beautifully pictured a generous spirit, it exemplified in the beautiful "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

She is survived by her father and two brothers William and James. Her mother having preceded her to that "Great Beyond" six years ago, although she will be sadly missed by her father and her brothers and relatives, we feel that God's kingdom will be enriched by her presence. Her funeral was conducted at the Ewbanks home Saturday October 10th at 10 o'clock by Rev. Robert McNeely of Patriot, Ind. A large assemblage of friends being present. Sixteen of her former schoolmates, acting as pallbearers and carrying the floral offerings which were very beautiful. Her remains were taken to Walnut Hills cemetery at Cincinnati, Ohio, where at the Chapel there a brief funeral service was conducted for the relatives and friends who had assembled there with burial by the side of her mother. Misses Willie Brown and Doris Hance and Mrs. Ruth Hance Alphin sang "When He Cometh," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" at these services.

C. Scott Chambers and daughter Miss Mary Scott, of Walton, funeral directors.

SORROW FOR OUR HEROES

The distressing disaster that befell the submarine S-51, is viewed with profound regret by the American people. It seems doubly tragic coming so soon after the dreadful collapse of the airship Shenandoah. Our people would like to think that their sailors and soldiers could at least perform their duties in peace times with a reasonable degree of safety. But such accidents show that these forms of service involve their hazards even in a time of profound peace.

But it is possible to minimize these hazards. With every year that passes the perils that attend the navigation of the air, and in the use of submarine craft, will grow less.

Our navy and army men are tireless investigators and scientific thinkers. The causes of these disasters will serve as object lessons to promote the safety of these services in the future.

THE EVIL PROPHETS

It is a grave mistake to listen to people who are predicting that this country is going to the "bow-wow," whatever that may be.

Some minds run in narrow grooves and are never able to get out. They are fixed on ultimate failure and nothing but failure will satisfy them. As a matter of fact which can not be successfully contradicted, this country was never on a more solid and substantial basis than it is today.

This condition is not due to any help extended by the prophets of evil, but simply because the great mass of the people continue to work and forge ahead while other countries bicker and lag behind.

PROMINENT FARMER OF CONSTANCE DIES

John J. Rucker One of County's Best Citizens Passes Away

John J. Rucker, a prominent citizen and farmer of the north end of the county, died at his home near Constance, Saturday, October 10th, 1925, after an illness of several months. He had been in declining health since the first of the year, and had been confined to his home and bed for the past month.

John J. Rucker was born in the house now owned and occupied by James T. Gaines near Idlewild, March 6th, 1842, hence he was 83 years, 7 months and 4 days of age. He was a son of Alfred Rucker and wife.

Mr. Rucker was united in marriage to Miss Nannie E. Harper, daughter of Wilson Harper and wife October 21, 1873. To this union six children were born—three dying when young. He is survived by his widow and three children, two daughters, Misses Lucille and Nora, one son Atty. Harper Rucker, of Cincinnati.

Mr. Rucker was of a quiet, retiring disposition, he attended strictly to his own affairs, but was ever ready to help a fellow who was inclined to help himself. He was one of the incorporators of the Boone County Deposit Bank and was a member of the board of directors at the time of his death. In the passing of Mr. Rucker his family has lost a loving husband and father and the county a useful, upright and honored citizen. At 10 o'clock a. m., Tuesday, October 13th the funeral was held. Burial in Highland cemetery.

BELLEVIEW DEFEATED PETERSBURG SATURDAY

Belleview took the scalps of the Petersburgs Saturday afternoon on a rigid field. The extreme cold probably accounted for the big score accumulated by both teams, as there were numerous errors.

Brady left the base in the eighth of his own accord, evidently discouraged by the abundance of errors behind him which resulted in five runs for Petersburg. Belleview came back in the ninth and scored nine runs on some fierce hitting, Ruth not displaying his form of the previous two games.

By agreement of the two managers the three game series which was won by Petersburg was extended to five games. The deciding game will be played next Saturday.

The Petersburg club included two players from Aurora, while Belleview had Cicero from Ludlow and Borgman from North Bend.

GOLDEN RULE SUNDAY OBSERVED DECEMBER 6th

As Chairman of Kentucky's State Golden Rule Committee to further the observance of Sunday, Dec. 6th in behalf of the orphan tots of Bible lands, Gay William Jason Fields is asking hundreds of prominent men and women of the State to assume leadership in their communities.

Where armies and navies have failed, we hope the Golden Rule will bring peace that is so earnestly desired by all. Governor Fields says in a letter naming community chairmen. State Golden Rule Headquarters are at 91 Todd Building, Louisville.

Golden Rule Sunday, December 6, already endorsed by President Coolidge, is to be a day of high thinking and sacrificial living to be participated in by sixty nations of the world. The simple request is made that at the close of the day every family will contribute what they can afford to the Near East Relief, every penny of which will be used in bringing a little comfort to the parentless children of Armenia, Greece, Palestine and Syria.

An opportunity is offered young peoples' societies such as the Christian Endeavor, Baptist Young People and Epworth League, to send a representative on a tour of the Holy Land. This is a national prize to be given to the community showing the largest financial results from Golden Rule Sunday observance. Young peoples' societies of the winning community will elect the ambassador to make the Holy Land trip. Last year it was won by Columbia, S. C., which sent Raymond Wood, an Eagle Scout, on the tour.

Last year's Golden Rule Sunday observance brought $1,600,000 into the orphan fund.

SOME MONEY

In a statement analyzing the commercial worth of Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, Mayor Tyler, the engineer, fixes the cost at $46,000,000 without the transformer station, and the dam has a productive value of $61,000,000. This ought to be a valuable property for the government to retain and operate.

CESSATION OF CHILD SPANKING IS URGED

Good News For the "Kiddies" If Practiced By the Parents

"To spank a child is to confess your failure as a parent," says Mrs. Sidonie Matzner Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, Inc., which this month is holding the first parents' conference on child study ever assembled in this country. She admits that children are often provoking, but she thinks also that it is time we recognized child-spanking as an archaic way of correcting their failures.

"There may have been some justification for Solomon," she explains. "Who was the author of the household maxim, 'Spare the rod and spoil the child.' He, poor fellow, with his numerous wives and overwhelming number of progeny, probably didn't know the names of half his children, nor which were his and which belonged to the neighbors. It would be too much to expect such a father to use persuasion and explanation instead of the rod or the slipper. But the home of the polygamous despot of the Orient in those days was very different from the small family of today, and we hardly have to cling to the methods which he may have found useful."

"Develop intelligence and comradeship in your children, and a sense of responsibility will grow in them that will make punishment unnecessary," says Mrs. Gruenberg.

This is one of the topics that will be discussed at the conference which is being held at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York October 26-28. It is called a conference on modern parenthood. Many of the perplexing difficulties about bringing up children will be talked over, and specialists on child study from England and as far West as California will attend. It is expected to be a great occasion for parents, who often are baffled by the ways of their children, and parents from every part of the country will come.

"To spank a child for every little offense is like giving one medicine for all ailments," says Mrs. Gruenberg. "and does just about as much good. The spanked child will not stop his wrongdoing. He will merely look sharp that he is not caught again."

"Child-spanking is simply allowing yourself to be mastered by the animal instinct to 'strike back.' Do we ever stop to consider the child's motive or intent? When we spank him for something that has caused annoyance? No, we are merely responding to the result of his action. We are displaying the same instinct that society shows when it seeks to avenge itself on the criminal. 'An eye for an eye' it says. At best, we are trying to frighten the child from doing wrong another time."

"What we should do is to develop the child's impulse to do right by appealing to his own initiative and reasoning faculties, and making a responsible human being out of him. To bring him up in blind obedience to his parents will not do this. Instead of spanking him for breaking the dish, give him something to play with that he can break or bend to his purpose in another way, like clay. Supply him material out of which he can create things. If parents take this constructive understanding attitude toward children, they will find that the need for punishment grows less."

THE HYPER-CRITICS

A well known clergyman, in his prayer of a few Sundays ago, offered the petition that instead of finding fault with the way the world goes, we should all look into our own hearts and ask ourselves whether we are as honest and kind and helpful as we ought to be. Thereupon he spoke a searching truth that would hit a good many folks in Boone county.

It is often noticeable that the people who are the most censorious, are the least in their relations to the community. The man who finds fault the most bitterly, because he thinks the community is not efficiently governed, may be failing to take his share in the work of carrying on that government. The man who complains the most volubly of lack of enterprise, may himself not be lifting a finger for progress. We need not merely hyper-criticism, but self criticism.

REAL ESTATE DEAL

Another real estate deal was pulled off last week in which Burlington property quit quite a figure. Conner traded the house and lot he received from Mrs. C. N. York, to Marley Ryle for his 75-acre farm in Waterloo neighborhood and then sold the farm to Robt. O. Ryle, Why go to Florida hunting for a boom, when with the same money and energy a boom can be started in your own home town?

Metal Saws Are Found Under Bed Clothing In County Jail

MISS MARIE STEPHENSON AND DAVID WINGATE WED

At 3:00 o'clock last Thursday afternoon at the home of Rev. R. F. DeMoisey in Walton, occurred the wedding of Miss Marie Stephenson, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stephenson and Mr. David Wingate, son of Mrs. Lydia Wingate, all of the Limaburg neighborhood. They were accompanied by the groom's brother, Herman Wingate and Miss Mable Williams. After the ceremony the young couple returned to the home of the bride's parents where they were given a wedding supper, where they were greeted by a number of relatives and friends. The next day they were entertained at the home of the groom's mother, The young married couple have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for a long and happy married life. On Thursday night they were given an old fashioned char-avari by friends from all parts of the community, and on returning home the crowd paid their respects to Robert Clore and wife.

A PLEASANT DAY SPENT

On Sunday October 4th a number of friends and relatives gathered at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Craig and family in Rabbit Hash in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Huey wife and daughter Mrs. Ray Griffin and sister-in-law Mrs. Bettie Scott of Bowen, Ill. All came with well filled baskets and at the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served to be remembered by all present. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Huey, Mrs. Ray Griffin, Mrs. Bettie Scott, of Illinois; Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Ryle and son, Mr. and Mrs. Stephens of Georgetown, Ky.; Mrs. Anna Ryle and son Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ryle and daughter Anna Marie, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Ryle, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Ryle and daughter Wanjeta Lee, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Ryle and son Ivan, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Scott, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Ryle and son Vincent Leon, daughter Londa Ophelia. In the afternoon Robert Aylor of McVillie, Mrs. Ella Aylor of Lawrenceburg, Ind., Mrs. Marie Stephenson and Emma Rice of this place.

NUTTING

Many of the men near Burlington can remember when as boys they always used to get out in the fields about this time, to search for nuts. In those days wild fruits were not valued much, and it was often considered rather mean to post trespass notices warning people not to gather such a product.

They were very cheerful days then as we used to wander out on this quest. Many boys would know all the nut trees for miles around. No trouble in getting them up early on mornings when the frost had loosened this choice fruit and scattered it over the ground.

Today the prices of every food product have become so high that the majority of people who own nut bearing trees are likely to cherish them. It will save both in many cases, and may prevent your automobile license from being revoked, to go to the provision man and buy what you want of these products.

GOOD TIME FOR STUDY

People excuse themselves for reading light literature in summer, because the weather is too hot for anything informative. But that excuse has now gone.

Why not try to learn something during the months of cool and bright weather just ahead? Try picking out two or three subjects that you would like to know something more about. One of them might well be something affecting the line of work you are engaged in. One of them could well be something about history, so you will know a bit more of human progress. A third subject might be the science of politics and government, so you will have ideas on making a better country.

Every citizen who wants to become more useful, ought to read at least half a dozen good books during the next six months. By so doing you will have more things to talk and think about. When you obtain broader intelligence, you increase your capacity for successful work.

ANNUAL HOLSTEIN SALE

The Kentucky Holstein Club, of which R. M. Bell of Carrollton, is President, will hold its annual sale at the Bourbon Stock Yards, Louisville, on Nov. 11th and 12th of this year. Many high bred individuals and herds will be sold on those days. Anyone desiring to make a start with pure bred cattle should attend this sale.

JAIL BREAK ATTEMPT SUSPECTED FOILED BY OFFICERS

A carefully planned attempt to break out of the county jail was effectually foiled last Wednesday evening by Sheriff L. T. Utz.

Suspicion of the Jailor having been aroused by some unusual operations in and about the jail he summoned Deputy Utz and the two made a thorough search inside, turning over the bed clothes, and otherwise making a complete renovation. Their efforts were finally rewarded by the finding of a bundle of metal saws beneath one of the mattresses on one of the cots. The inmates were at once thoroughly questioned, but all flatly denied any knowledge whatsoever of the presence of the saws in the jail.

There is little doubt however that if the officers suspicion had not been aroused that an attempt would have been made to "saw out" of the jail, notwithstanding the fact that the inmates denied knowledge of the presence of the tools.

There are at present six men confined including one colored man, who is upstairs, and who would in all probability not have been liberated had the jail been broken. The colored man, S. V. Cobbe, indicted last August for child desertion and awaiting trial in December; Eddie Hodges, who was captured in a thrilling auto chase a few weeks ago and who is awaiting the action of the December grand jury; Wallace Glacken, alleged to be his accomplice in an auto theft, who was later apprehended in Covington, and Clyde Anderson and Arthur Gilbert, convicted of "burglary," who have 30 days yet to serve in default of giving peace bonds.

It is the opinion of many that the saws must have been passed into the jail by some one from the outside during the night.

OBITUARY

John Wingate was born at Waterloo, Ky., Dec. 11, 1847, died at the home of his son Leslie October 3rd, 1925, aged 77 years, 9 months and 22 days. Mr. Wingate spent his entire life in Boone county as a farmer. He was united in marriage to Laura Marshall, daughter of Harvey and Elizabeth Marshall Jan. 1, 1870, who preceded him to the grave three years ago.

To them three children were born Leslie, of Boone county, with whom he lived when he died, Mrs. Raymond Conner, of Cincinnati and Blufford of Sardinia, Ohio. He leaves besides three children a number of grand children, brother, sister and a host of relatives and friends to mourn departure.

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness shown us in the loss of our dear father, also Phillip Taliaferro for his kind and efficient way in which he conducted the funeral.

Son and Daughter In loving memory of our grandfather, John Wingate: One homesome week has passed Since we have seen our grandfather last.

God knows how we miss you, How empty is your place, We miss each each loving affection, And your dear sweet smiling face. Not dead, just gone before, And in our hearts and memory, He shall live forever more.

Sadly missed by his loving grandchildren Harry, Lucille and Harold Conner.

AVIATORS ASK SEPARATE UNIT

The testimony of experienced aviators before the President's Air Board indicates a general opinion in favor of a separate air corps, and general dissatisfaction over the present Navy organization. While there seems to be a growing tendency in favor of aviation among high naval officers they are careful to see that it does not overstep its bounds at the expense of other naval units.

Testifying before the president's aircraft investigating committee Col William Mitchell declared that this country is wholly unprepared to defend itself. He declared the navy is not an adequate means of defense, and that it sticks to worn out theories and practices. It is an army speaking but there seems to be something in what he says. He mined no words in his testimony at grave evidence of having fully informed himself on his subject. The great deal of what he says will be forced by the public, and ought to carry weight with the President, even after discounting possible prejudices. The Colonel cannot be accused of lack of patriotism or courage.

The Mystery Road

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—Fleeing from a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, young French girl, stands in a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Gerald Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, conveying her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III.—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling room, and is fascinated. But she is not what she seems. He learns that she is called Pauline de Fontaine and is with her husband, who is able to secure an introduction. Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young man's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV.—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V.—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and co-deception surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI.—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but he, a natural flirt, is only mildly interested in the girl, while Christopher, Bent really loves her and would marry her.

CHAPTER VII.—A mysterious Russian, Zubin, wins a large sum at the gambling tables. Gerald learns he knows the De Fontaines, but can get no information from him.

CHAPTER VIII.—Christopher makes little progress in his courtship of Myrtle, who is completely infatuated with Lord Dombey and would gladly become his "second wife." He really loves her, his interest being all in Pauline.

CHAPTER IX.—Gerald tells Pauline of Zubin's gambling. She is at once interested, and asks him to find the Russian and bring him to her and her aunt. Gerald finds Zubin. The Russian has lost all he had won and practically everything else he had. On their way to the ladies Zubin kills himself.

CHAPTER X.—It is learned that Zubin was the steward of Madame de Fontaine, and has lost at the gambling tables the money and the money and her niece possessed. The two women leave Monte Carlo after selling their jewelry. Gerald traces the traces them. He begins to evince an interest in Myrtle, to Christopher's chagrin.

CHAPTER XI.—Gerald is giving a convivial party to a few acquaintances of the gay world. Myrtle urges him to allow her to attend. The company is not suitable for a young girl, and he refuses.

CHAPTER XII.—Lady Mary offers to take Myrtle to England with her and find employment. Christopher accepts the offer gladly, to the dismay of Gerald's party. At its conclusion Christopher takes her away, when Gerald would have kept her in his room. Myrtle goes to England with Lady Mary.

CHAPTER III

"Well, thank heavens you haven't forgotten how to hold your gun straight!" Lord Hinterleys remarked, a few days later, laying his hand affectionately upon his son's shoulder. "It is always a treat to see you shoot, Gerald. I used to fancy myself when I was your age, but I can't remember having touched your performance to day."

"You mustn't forget the difference in guns, dad," Gerald reminded him, "and the powder. You were pretty good yourself at those last two drives."

Lord Hinterleys mounted his pony. Gerald shouldered his gun and passed his arm through Myrtle's.

"Come along," he invited, "we'll go home through the forty-acre wood. It isn't more than a mile. It seems to me we've been standing about all day."

"I should like it very much," Myrtle assented joyfully.

"We are all coming presently," Mary remarked. "Amos is just making up the bag. Dad wants the exact figures."

"One sees so little of you nowadays," Myrtle sighed. "You are all the time in London."

"You're not going to lecture me?" "That would not be for me," she said gravely. "If you think it well to there, it is well. I am only glad to see you here today. It has made your father so happy."

They crossed the meadow and entered the little wood. The path here was so narrow that Gerald took Myrtle's arm again. He was quite unconscious that at his touch she shivered with emotion.

"Myrtle," he confided, "I saw Chris yesterday."

"Poor old chap," Gerald went on, "he looked absolutely done in. I made him come and have some dinner with me. I don't think he meant to tell me, but it all came out in time. He told me about his visit here."

She walked on, her head uplifted, her face a little tense.

"Yes," she murmured.

"I'd no idea," Gerald continued, "that he was seriously in love with you, Myrtle. He's such a sober sort of chap really—no lady friends, you know, or anything of that sort. When he takes a fancy to any one, it's a serious affair. "He is not like you, Gerald," she said quietly.

"You're quite right, he isn't," Gerald acknowledged frankly. "We all have our different hobbies. I candidly admit that the society of your sex has been one of the pleasures of my life. But I never liked that, though. You are his first love, Myrtle."

"It's a great pity," she declared. "You used to seem very fond of him," Gerald hazarded, "and he certainly looked after you jolly well at Monte Carlo."

"Do you mean," Myrtle asked calmly, "when he came to your room in the Hotel de Paris, after the supper party?"

Gerald was completely taken aback. She had turned and was looking at him with her large, serious eyes. She was deliberately forcing upon him the memory of an episode which he had sturdied over in his mind.

"I wasn't thinking of that altogether," he replied, with a certain rare awkwardness. "All the same—" "All the same, what, please?" she insisted, after a moment's pause. "I should like you to finish your sentence."

"Well, from old Chris' point of view, he was doing the chivalrous thing, and all that," Gerald explained clumsily. "He must have thought, of course, that I was going to be a perfect brute."

"Were you not?" she asked. He was amazed at her coolness. She, whose purity seemed rather to increase with her larger knowledge of the world, seemed to be forcing him to speak of the very ugly moments.

"I am afraid that I can't say what would have happened," he admitted. "I was very much attracted by you, and you hadn't the faintest idea what it all meant." So, you see, you owe him a very great debt of gratitude, Myrtle."

"I do not think so," she replied. Gerald was more startled than ever. Her deliberate speech seemed to bring to him almost a challenge.

"You are about the only person in the world who would say that," he observed.

"Perhaps so," she admitted. "Perhaps, too, I am the only one who is in a position to know."

Gerald was indignantly interested. He looked down at her face, calm and serious. There was no added color in her cheeks, no sign of any confusion.

"You mean that you are sorry that Christopher interfered? That you would have risked my forgetting—all that I ought to have remembered?"

"I am sorry that Christopher interfered," she said distinctly. "At that moment I loved you, and I did not know that it was wicked for me to love you. If afterward you had got tired of me, as you would have done, then I should have killed myself when I understood. But I should have been happy first."

"But aren't you happy now?" he asked.

"I am very contented," she answered. "And I am very, very grateful. I think that, in one of the worlds has ever received such wonderful kindness as I have. But happiness, it seems to me, is a thing apart. It is a great and a wonderful and a rare gift. I do not think that very many people possess it. I should have thought they do. I should have possessed it, for however short a time, if Christopher had not interfered."

Gerald was staggered. It seemed to him that this girl, walking so sedately by his side, had suddenly become his mistress; was trying to explain to him, as though he were a pupil, great and elemental things.

"Myrtle," he declared, "you surprise me very much. I never dreamed that you would feel like that. Supposing, then I were to say to you: 'Come away from here, with me tomorrow; come up to London and be my companion there?'"

"You could not do that," she said simply. "You could not offer me so terrible and so ugly an insult. Surely you understand that then I did not know that you did not love me?"

"I see," he murmured.

"I loved you," she went on, her eyes lifted a little to the interlacing boughs of the trees under which they were passing, "when you came like a prince to the gate where I stood shaking with terror, and laughed at my fears. I loved you when you pointed to the end of the road and promised to take me there. I loved you in those first few moments, and just as it seemed to me then that I had loved you before I was born, so I know that I shall love you after I die. That is just the kind of wisdom which even children have. Where I was simple and ignorant was that I did not understand that love could be one-sided. I thought that love belonged to two people. Now I know very differently."

"Myrtle," he began.

She checked him gravely.

"Today," she continued, "there is more for me to say than for you, because I am rather glad that you should understand. Only you must not talk to me about Christopher. I am very sorry, but I think that he is foolish. I was a young child and I knew nothing. But a wise, clever man like Christopher should understand. It seems to me absurd that he should think it possible that I might love him. It is so absurd that I do not believe his love is a real thing. I think that he will soon forget."

"What is to become of you, then, Myrtle?" Gerald demanded.

She looked up at him with a smile. "What happens to all those others," she asked, "who go through life as I shall go through it? They are very content. Very many pleasant things come their way. They are spared a great deal of suffering. No it will be with me. Now that we have had this talk Gerald, I can speak to you, perhaps, a little more frankly. I watch you so closely that I see things which others might not notice. You were without actual happiness, before because you did not understand what happiness was. Now you are unhappy. That is so sad."

"Yes," Gerald admitted, "I am unhappy."

"There is some one for whom you care?"

He had no idea of evading the issue. He replied at once, simply and directly. "It is Mademoiselle de Fontaine, whom I met at Monte Carlo, and who used to go out with me in the car. I have met her again."

"And yet you are not happy?" "I am not happy," Gerald acknowledged, "because I have not the least idea whether she cares for me or not. She is very mysterious. She has troubles which she will not let me share."

It seemed to him that Myrtle smiled. They were out of the wood now and crossing the park.

"All that you tell me is very strange," she confessed. "I do not pretend to understand it. One hears, Gerald, that in your way you have cared for very many women. That is rather a pity, but, if it is true, you perhaps do not know your own mind. Are you sure that you love this young lady?"

"I only know that she makes me feel and suffer as no one else in the world has ever done," he answered a little drearily.

They were approaching the house now. Myrtle laid her fingers timidly upon his arm.

"It seems to me, Gerald," she said, with a rather pathetic smile, "that we have changed roles. You asked me to walk home with you that you might talk to me about Christopher, and now we have finished all that and it is your own affairs only which remain."

"There is nothing about my affairs which even lends itself to discussion," Gerald sighed.

"Not at present," Myrtle assented, "but in the end there must come happiness."

"It is of Your Father, Why is He So Troubled About You?"

ness, because where there is love there is always happiness. May I say one word more?"

"Go ahead," he answered. "It is of your father. Why is he so troubled about you?"

Gerald frowned. "I am afraid, 'Myrtle,' he said, "that that is a matter which I cannot altogether explain to you."

"Perhaps you are right," she admitted. "I must dare to say this, though, because, you see, I am with you for many hours in the day, and he is not so strong as he was and so he shows his mind more easily. Something about you is worrying him. That is not right, is it?"

Gerald was silent for a moment. A telegraph boy, who had been riding down the drive which curved through the park, seeing them, had dismounted from his bicycle and was crossing the turf toward them with an orange-colored envelope in his hand. Gerald took it from him, tore it open, and read the few lines which it contained. Then he gave the boy a coin and dismissed him. He looked once more at the message. "It is good news," Myrtle inquired gravely.

"Good enough," Gerald answered. "I have been living in a miserable state of uncertainty. Now it will all be cleared up."

"There will be no more trouble, then?"

"I cannot say that," he replied, "but at least there will be action. Next week will see the beginning of the elucidation. I leave for Russia on Tuesday."

The change in Pauline's manner, when Gerald was ushered by an untidy-looking waiter into her sitting-room on the following afternoon, was almost electrifying. In place of her usual languid greeting, she sprang lightly to her feet and gave him both her hands. The slight sullenness had all gone from her face. There was no living person just then who would not have found her beautiful.

"You received my telegram?" she demanded eagerly.

"And I came to you at once," was the prompt reply. She drew him down to her side upon the sofa. Her manner and tone displayed an animation entirely new to her.

"Reusner returned the night before last," she said. "He seems to have had a comparatively easy journey, and his reports conditions over there very much more lenient in many ways. He had no difficulty in landing or in making his way wherever he wished to go. On the other hand, the stories he brings back as to the distress and misery everywhere are simply shocking. The country breeds to death. There are few trains running, no order, no discipline; despotic and arbitrary police surveillance everywhere. But there is also corruption. People, especially the official classes, are looking everywhere for the means to live. A merchant who was imprisoned only a month or so ago on a charge of murder, to which he actually pleaded 'guilty,' was set free the day before Reusner left. It cost him little more than five thousand roubles."

THE AUTUMN SEASON

The autumn is the most delightful season of the year. A spirit of romance pervades it, nature puts on her coat of many colors and most of us ordinary mortals, if we will confess, it, feel a quickening of the pulse when the leaves begin to fall and darkness comes before supper. One has but to recall the days of boyhood for an explanation of this fall romanticism. Ask any boy his views and his face will light up with pleasure as he dreams of the Saturday holidays when he can hunt nuts and thrill at the sight of the end runs and the smashing line plays on the football field. Fall is a time not alone for enjoyment of the outdoors; it is also a time for reflection and sober thought. It is a season for gathering about the fireplace as the shadows lengthen to renew family ties that are weakened by the summer vacation season. Autumn seems sad and melancholy, as nature, like the hand of death, withers vegetation. But it is also a time for joy, because it ushers in a period when we have more time indoors for self improvement and enjoyment of the substantial things of life.

DEPOSIT YOUR MONEY IN A BANK AND PAY YOUR BILLS BY CHECK

This is the advice given daily by the Newspapers, in commending on the loss of sizable sums of money from the pockets of the owners.

Good advice and very timely. To make a deposit is a good beginning.

To build and maintain a balance large enough to pay your checks at all times, and leave a margin upon which your bank can make a reasonable profit is a long step towards building a financial character.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER

Published Every Thursday

R. E. Berkshire, Editor & Publisher
N. E. Riddell, Associate Editor

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$ 2.00
Six Months	1.00
Three Months50
One Month25

Entered at the Postoffice, Burlington, Ky., as second-class mail.

ADVERTISING RATES

Furnished on application. The value of the RECORDER as an advertising medium is unquestioned. The character of the advertisements now in its columns, and the number of them tell the whole story.

cannot publish lists of parties received at "showers," parties unless they are paid for at Five per line.

The Recorder Stands for BETTER FARMING, BETTER CITIZENS, BETTER HOMES.

WATCH THE DATE

Since the RECORDER is fifty years old we think it time that it settled down to business. In all the past fifty years it has been the policy of the paper to let subscribers pay for the paper whenever they happened to be in Burlington, but a great many people don't "happen" in Burlington very often, and it's very easy to forget the RECORDER when they do come. Of course the campaign placed a number of people ahead, but there are some still behind and a number being added every week. If you take a daily you don't get a single issue after your time is out. The RECORDER has to pay for everything it buys, when the bills are rendered—that's business—and the only way for any enterprise to survive. When the day of the month arrives indicated on your date line your subscription is due for another year, so watch your date line. Please. On November 1 "unspelled" subscribers from the list. "If you desire to remain on the list send remittance by mail—that's business. Your silence will mean that you do not care to continue, thereby causing removal on November 1.

PERSONALITY

When the poet said that every institution is but the lengthening shadow of a man, he uttered a truth that is one of the essential facts of life.

Personality is the all important factor in every great enterprise, whether it be business, education or community progress.

During the era of great materialistic development, there has been great emphasis on the need for finer equipment in community enterprises. But any policy that stresses the material side to the neglect of the human factor is not a substantial one.

It would be far better to have a million dollar school teacher in a thousand dollar school than a thousand dollar teacher in a million dollar school. The first essential for human betterment is to have inspiring personalities in positions of leadership.

It is a splendid thing to provide wonderful school buildings, library buildings, churches and similar structures, because they have advertising value. People will go into a fine public building and derive good from it, who would not use one that looks old and behind the times. New school buildings give school work an impression of importance and dignity, and they inspire pupils to better work.

But good work is often done with poor facilities. The little red school house on the whole got good results in training the older people. Its equipment would be called obsolete now, its textbooks and courses of study were not adapted to the practical age in which we now live. But it usually had a brainy and inspiring personality as a teacher. Such a person got results, even if the tools used were poor.

The most important thing in social progress is to have bright and able men and women working in such positions as teachers, ministers and legislators, as their thought is shaping the purposes and ideals of the coming generation.

ESSAY ON MAN, BY EDITOR REVEALS HIS SAD FATE.

Man that is born of woman is of few days and full of microbes. He hopeth out of bed in the morning and his foot is pierced with the tack of disappointment. He sitteth down to rest at noonday and he is stabbed in his nether anatomy by the pin of disaster. He walketh the streets of the city in the pride and glory of his manhood and slippeth on the banana peel of misfortune and unjuncteth his neck. He smoketh the cigar of contentment and, behold, it explodeth with a loud noise when it was loaded. He sliddeth down the banisters of life and findeth them full of splinters of torture. He lieth down to sleep at night and is stung by the mosquitoes of annoyance and his frame is gnawed by the bed bugs of adversity. What is man but a blind worm of fate?

Behold he is impaled upon the hook of despair and furnisheth bait for the vevanman Death in the fathomless ocean of eternity. Sorrow and travail follow him all the days of his life. In his infancy he is afflicted with worms and colic and in his old age he is tortured by rheumatism and ingrowing toe-nails.

What is man but a tumor on the neck of existence?

Behold, he runneth for office and the dead beat pulleth his leg ever and anon and then voteth against him.

He exalteth himself among his people and swellth with pride, but when the votes are counted he findeth that his name is Pans.

Re boasteth of his strength in Israel but is beaten by a bald-headed man from Texas.

A political enemy lieth in wait for him in the market place and walketh around him crowing like unto a cock.

From the cradle to the grave man giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him.

Vainly, man is but an unsightly wart on the neck of Nature; a bunion on the toe of Time; a freckle on the face of the Universe!—Montgomery (Ill.) News.

WAITING ON "GEORGE"

This is a fairly good community, as communities go. Even without being boastful, it is possible for any citizen to point with pride to his home.

But there is one fly in the ointment that prevents many communities from advancing as rapidly as it should.

Everyone is willing and actually wants to have things done, but always waits for "George" that mythical "good fellow," to do it. But when George reaches a certain point he balks because he tires of carrying the whole load.

The thing needed most of all is a great spirit of working together which entirely eliminates prejudices and selfishness—a willingness on the part of each one to do his or her share in the advancement of our community interests.

In every community there are always a few, in every enterprise who are willing to work for the public good. They are the "Georges."

Once in a while we read of some place that keeps booming and showing right along regardless of conditions or handicaps.

Such a place is full of "Georges" and because they are so numerous none of them are overworked and there is no occasion for balking.

Why can't we all be "Georges?" There is plenty of room for improvement and plenty of people with the time, energy and money to be "Georges."

COMMERCIAL AVIATION

It is a peculiar coincidence that during the very time Army and Navy air service is being vigorously grilled and criticized, Henry Ford is conducting a reliability tour for the purpose of gaining all practical information regarding the immediate need, necessities and possibilities of the commercial airplane. There will be no effort to maintain given schedules, or beat the other fellow as to speed. At each of the eleven cities in the eleven midwestern states to be visited plenty of time will be allowed for inspection, criticism and suggestion. Commercial aviation in its infancy in America and Mr. Ford and his associates are going about the business in a careful, practical manner.

SHORT CUTS

This is an age of short cuts to everything. No one seems to have time for the "meat" of anything.

The hair is cut short, the dresses are cut short and the sleeves are cut short.

We want our sermons short and we insist on our public speakers making it short and "snappy."

Synthetic foods, substitutes for the real thing, abound, and corn beef and cabbage exist only as a comic page myth.

Everything is looking for a short cut to wealth without work. Robbing a bank seems to be the most favored of short cuts in this class.

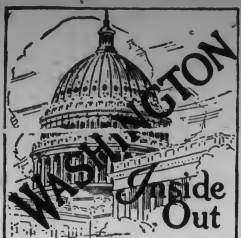

Motorists are constantly demanding short cuts and highway commissions are straightening highways to make greater speed.

Short cuts to health are sought in sanitariums after health has been lost by burning the candle at both ends.

But the world's work is not going to be done with short cuts. Those of us who are engulfed in the "short cut" mania will have to learn that patience, time and hard work are just as much requirements of accomplishment as they ever were.

If more people would confine themselves to talking of things they know something about, there would be much less conversation in the world.

During the first six months of this year our motor vehicles in the United States increased 13.9 per cent. This does not include 70,200 official vehicles owned by states on which registration fees are not paid.

PERISTENT REPORTS are again heard in official circles that Secretary of the Navy Wilbur may shortly hand in his resignation. The recent series of mishaps to Naval equipment gave rise to the latest gossip. It is generally felt that Wilbur is not in the least responsible for the aircraft submarine fatalities, but his enemies have seized upon them as further evidence that all is not well with the Navy. President Coolidge is understood to be prepared to accept the resignation if it is offered, but has not indicated that he will request it. Wilbur's recall from a speaking trip through the West during the last presidential campaign is offered in some circles as a reason for his lack of favor at the White House. The Naval Secretary at that time was generally believed to be not dealing with important problems with the delicacy which the forthcoming election demanded. Wilbur's powerful friend in Administration circles is Secretary of Commerce Hoover. Both are from California. Hoover was mainly instrumental in having Dr. Ray Lyman appointed president of Stanford University. The college president is a brother of the Secretary of the Navy.

THE FRENCH debt negotiations left a bitter taste in the mouths of many Washington officials. The action of the French delegation in announcing that an agreement had been practically reached, when such, as it later developed, was not the case, received much adverse criticism. One member of the American Debt Funding Commission, characterized it as "typical French politics" and a last minute effort to force American acceptance of the last proposal offered. Others said Caillaux's understand was due to misinformation on which was no one's fault. The $40,000,000 annual payments for the next five years as finally offered France by the Commission are certain to cause a row in Congress. It is believed that France will shortly find it the better part of wisdom to return to the United States with higher offers so that the debt can be definitely funded. The present arrangement, which has not even been approved by Caillaux, would merely prevent the total debt from increasing pending a stabilization of French finances. When the finances of France are stabilized, it is thought that terms agreeable to Congress may be offered the United States.

ALTHOUGH SENATOR Norris of Nebraska has publicly refused to accept the leadership of the Progressives who followed the banner of the late Senator Robert M. LaFollette, his friends believe he is almost certain to head the bloc in actions, regardless. Norris occupies the unusual position of being a Republican who refuses to follow the party label and yet retains his privileges in party councils. The election of Young Bob LaFollette to his late father's seat has maintained the group at full strength. Although a leader may ostensibly be chosen, Norris is generally regarded with Borah as being the outstanding oracle who will tell the half dozen Republicans on which side of an issue to stand.

THE END of the U. S. Shipping Board as an independent body is one of the near certainties of the coming session of Congress. The final defiance of that body to the president in stripping Lehigh C. Palmer of the Emergency Fleet Corporation of all power is regarded as having sounded the knell of many of the present commissioners. Palmer was highly thought of by the President. He was deposed from power because Commissioner Haney of Oregon thought his policies were inimical to the interests of the Pacific Coast. Oregon in particular. Haney refused to resign when he was requested to do so by the President.

WASHINGTON FAILED to relieve the thrills it had been led to expect would follow the testimony before the Air Board of Colonel William Mitchell. While not regarding Mitchell's charges as "duds," observers generally thought the fighting aviator would set forth more concrete evidence of incompetency in War Department circles than he did when he told the committee what he thought was wrong with American aviation. It is not believed certain, however, that both the War and Navy departments will have their allotments cut to the bone by the next Congress, with aeronautics receiving the benefit of the savings.

POWER FOR THE HOMES

A farmer or business man may realize that by applying gasoline or electric power to his business, he can save labor. So with a motor truck or a gas engine or a tractor he makes a big saving in his costs.

Does he also realize that power in the home would save labor equally for his wife, and that she would more than make up for the cost by the additional things she could do? Ask the women folks, who have been reading about all the things that can be done now with electric power. A rural community will not be fully equipped for modern conditions, until electric power is generally introduced to the homes.

LAWS AND LAWYERS

The fact that the American Bar Association has prepared a new code of legal ethics indicates a stirring of the conscience of the profession. New codes may not put an end to the shyster, but if the general opinion of the profession is aroused against unscrupulous practitioners much improvement is likely to result.

Laws will not make a community virtuous, nor will canons of professional ethics make dishonorable men honorable.

There will always be hypocrites among ministers, quacks among doctors, and pettifoggers among lawyers, which is an added reason why the honorable members of these professions should disown and, as far as possible, discourage all dishonorable practices.

There is no question that a lawyer "may undertake with propriety the defense of a person accused of a crime, although he knows or believes him guilty," and for the reason that the public welfare requires that no person should be punished for a crime unless, by due process of law, his guilt has been established. But to defend a client accused of breaking the law is one matter, to advise a client how he can break the law with impunity is quite another matter.

Lawyers who would not think of counseling a burglar how he could break into a bank and escape with his plunder have not hesitated to counsel their clients how he can violate laws for the regulation of corporations and still be immune.

Lawyers do the larger part of making our laws, and the execution of law is wholly their duty.

The sole business of law is justice, and that ought to be the sole business of lawyers, but the highest salaries are paid men who can circumvent the law and defeat justice.

PUTTING ON THE OVERALLS

It has been complained for some years, that young men would not go into the mechanical trades. But at last, they seem to be showing more sense and going into the well paid building industry. A recent report states that the supply of labor for this trade, both skilled and unskilled, except in a few cities.

The supply of such labor, it is stated, is constantly being reinforced from the apprenticeship schools. Apparently young men are making up their minds that the glory of wearing a white collar and store clothes is not adequate to compensate for the lower wages often paid in clerical work. They are apparently concluding that no disgrace attaches to overalls. This is a truth which the philosophers have long been preaching, but many have been slow to question it.

TAKE THE GUN FROM WEAK-MINDED

The madman with homicidal tendencies is running wild among us and his victims are falling on all sides.

How grave the conditions are the casual reader of the dailies probably does not stop to consider, though the shortest competent memory will be able to recall, with a little prompting, a long list of the most horrifying episodes, chargeable to persons either insane or obviously degenerate, feeble-minded or diseased. Records show that the mentally or nervously deranged take more lives every year than are lost in all the vendettas, boot-leggers' wars and gang feuds with which our civilization is shamed. The maniac is more deadly than all the professional criminals ever born.

Every crowd surging through the streets of our cities, every knot of people gathered at a rural crossroads, every audience in a theatre and every congregation in a church hides among its numbers some unsuspected or disregarded madmen, degenerates, half-wits and defectives. Thus the potential murderer walks everywhere among us and the most certain criminal prowls about at will, his evil portent unheeded either by the police or the public.

How much longer shall we permit from five to seven thousand citizens to be slain every year by this class of people? them to secure automatic revolvers without hindrance or license? Take away the gun and you have at least partially destroyed their danger.

One more instance of the high prices is reported from West Africa, where the savages have to pay $140 for a wife.

A NEW BASIS FOR PEACE

In the little town of Locarno in Switzerland this week there will meet the Foreign Ministers of Britain, France and Germany and another effort will be made to arrive at a permanent peace for Europe.

In Paris, London and Berlin there has been called the "Quintuple Pact." Of this document, if it be ratified by the Powers concerned, it is not too much to say that it determines the future not of Europe alone but the British Empire and indirectly the United States is involved.

Reduced to its simplest terms, the Quintuple Pact would guarantee the Rhineland from aggression by Germany and France themselves and counterbalanced by Britain, Italy and Belgium. It has been suggested that Poland and Czechoslovakia also might be invited to adhere to the pledge.

The entire historic background, both of France and of Germany, is based on the Rhine as a supreme prize of war and diplomacy. Today bankers and the industrialists in both countries as well as the U. S. are compelling the statesmen and the militarists to substitute the cooperation of commerce for the ruinous rivalry which is, after all, an inheritance of medieval autocracy. It is held to be a good augury for peace that the pact was proposed in the first instance, not by the Allies, but by Germany, herself. In the promotion of the pact the United States has played a leading part. The guarantee has been approved in principle by President Coolidge.

W. M. S. NOTES

The W. M. S. of the Bellevue Baptist church held their monthly meeting October 1st at the church with twenty-one members answering the roll call. Glad to report two new members Mrs. Edgington and Mrs. Garrett Dolph.

We had an interesting lesson on "The Greatest Lesson on the Great Highway."

Miss Anna Cason had charge of the Devotional. She had a paper on Lydia, the Missionary Woman, which was helpful to all.

Our Personal Service Chairman, Mrs. Laura Botts, gave a good quarterly report. She is an untiring worker for the Lord.

Mrs. Lou Maurer invited the society to meet with her the 5th of November. Everyone try to be present.

HERE'S HOPING SHE IS

A. T. Nichols, director general of the Atlantic City beauty pageants for four years past does not entertain a very high opinion of pretty girls. He says: "Most of the pretty girls I have met have heads as empty as their faces are beautiful. Scant clothes, bobbed hair, cosmetics and wild parties play too important a part of the makeup of the girls of today." He predicted that "the sweet modest girl of old is coming back." Let us hope so.

FRANCE-FAILS TO SETTLE

Finance Minister Caillaux and his associates on the French mission have departed for Paris, not with a program of permanent settlement for which they expressed hope, but with merely a five year payment proposal which a final settlement.

While sharing the natural disappointment that a permanent arrangement was not reached the U. S. regards the result as a step forward, chiefly in the closer understanding it has developed between the two nations. The arrangement which M. Caillaux has agreed to lay before his government calls for annual payments of forty million dollars from France for the next five years. Agreement on a program of final settlement to succeed the proposed temporary pact at its expiration would be left for negotiations to continue in the interim.

Secretary Mellon made it plain that the United States is much more concerned with the early payments than with those promised to be made 50 years ago and hence. Concretely $100,000,000 of 1926 might not be worth more than $8,300,000 now. The members of the American Debt Commission do not desire to deal in stage money.

TO ALL MY FRIENDS:

I wish to extend my hearty thanks and appreciation to each and every one who has opened their kind hearts and willing hands and helped me to get my artificial limb.

I also want to thank Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Collins for their kindness and the donation in which was made up at their home, and the way in which they have tried to help me in getting my limb.

Words cannot express how I appreciate the social that was given by Mr. and Mrs. Collins for my benefit. And I also want to thank every one who attended the social, and may God bless you all in the future.

GOOD-BYE TO THE STUDENTS

A large number of young people in Boone county and probably more than any previous year, are leaving this fall for their work at colleges, technical schools, etc. Some of us can remember when it was a quite unusual thing for boys and girls to go away for education, but now it has become a very common experience.

Many words of advice are said to these students. Some pessimists remark that they learn a great many things besides the lessons taught in books, and some of these things are not helpful.

However, the world wants trained intelligence, new ideas. It will pay a high price for it. Increasing numbers of young people will break home ties earlier than they used to. While they acquire all this knowledge, they would better not forget the lessons taught them in their quiet home circles. It is well to remember that the world is not conquered by primariness, by initiative, and by fidelity to ideals.

Formerly people were supposed to be enmeshed in the pursuit of happiness, but about now most of them seem to be pursued by their creditors.

A. R. JOHNSON KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Former Boone County Citizen Killed in Florida

A message was received here last Friday stating that A. R. Johnson, formerly of Walton, had been killed in an automobile wreck in Florida.

Mr. Johnson, as the facts of the case developed, sacrificed his own life to save that of a small child. As Mr. Johnson was driving in his car on the highway near Tampa, a little girl suddenly ran out into the road. In order to avoid striking her Mr. Johnson swerved his car to one side striking a telegraph pole, breaking it off and throwing him through the windshield. He was badly cut about the face and head, and was found almost immediately by a passer-by, who took him to his (Mr. Johnson's) home at the injured man's request.

Mr. Johnson dismissed his friend telling him that he was alright and that he would call a doctor to dress his wounds as soon as he washed himself.

His wife was not home at the time, but when she arrived she found him dead on the bath room floor. The coroner's verdict was that a ruptured blood vessel had caused his death.

An erroneous story had become circulated carrying the assertion that his death was suicidal, which report it is indeed a pleasure to correct. The news of the death of Ricketts Johnson, as he was familiarly known, to his friends, was not only a shock but a source of deepest grief to his legion of friends in this county. He was for a number of years the cashier of the Walton Bank and Trust Co., which position he resigned in September of 1924 when he and his wife left Tampa. He was a son of the late Samuel C. Johnson and Elizabeth Johnson, both having departed this life several years ago, and he being the only child. He was 55 years old last July.

IMPORTANT OPINION RENDERED BY COURT

Court Of Appeals Decides That Milk Is Not Cream

An opinion was rendered last week by the Kentucky Court of Appeals in the case of the Farmers' Union Creamery Association vs. Mr. R. L. Green. The suit was an injunction suit in the nature of a test case and was filed last July in the Boone Circuit Court in order to test the validity of a clause in the contract which purported to compel milk producers to deliver their whole milk to the Co-operative. There are more than one hundred farmers in this county affected by the decision.

Mr. Green and other associates contended that their contracts called for the delivery of the product to Covington, but the Association changed its receiving station to Mayville and that's where the "balloon went up." They refused to deliver to Mayville, and began to market their whole milk in Cincinnati.

Attorneys B. H. Riley and Stephens L. Blakely for the defendant farmers contended that whereas the contract called for the delivery of cream that they had ceased to produce cream and were producing whole milk and that the contract could not compel the delivery of the milk in that it was a different product from cream. This particular contention was upheld by the higher court, and that part of the injunction which demanded that whole milk be delivered, under the provisions of the contract, was modified.

There were other points involved in the case but for lack of time and space we cannot elucidate upon them.

ROBERT HAFER WINS PRIZE AT INDIANAPOLIS SHOW

The coveted Prize Educational trip to the National Dairy Show held at Indianapolis last week was won by Robert Hafer of this county. The award was given by B. H. Ewin's Sons Milk Company of Louisville for the best record made by a heifer or cow in production, owned by a Junior Club Member.

Robert has been a Jr. Club member for six years and has owned a Club Heifer. He has won prizes at the County Fair, Blue Grass Fair and the Kentucky State Fair, and has always been in the high money.

Fairy's Majesty of Grovetland produced 2390.3 pounds of milk and 162 pounds of fat in five months from April 1 to August 31. Fairy is on official test and began her record last Nov. 19th. She has been sold to A. Hull of Morningview, Ky., for $205.00. Last year Robert sold the Dam of this heifer for $300.00.

She was in competition with cows owned by Jr. Club members in Kenton, Bracken, Campbell, Mason, Jefferson, Shelby and Trimble.

SPEAKER BLANKETER

Pastor Of St. Paul's Produces Article on Helen Jackson

The following article was handed to us by the Rev. Herbert J. Egbring of St. Paul's church at Florence:

HELEN JACKSON

Her real name is Helen Barnowska. At the early age of fifteen years she was committed to a Sisters' Reformatory at Detroit by her sister, because she was unmanageable. This was in September, 1895. In December, 1897, she was permitted to return to her sister, then living in Pittsburgh.

Later she returned to the Good Shepherd Home, but this time to the Castle, Ohio, Home, because her former superiors, whom Helen liked, was transferred to that Home. Even after she left the reformatory the first time, in fact, even after she married, she and her husband called at the Detroit Home, and were most friendly. Like the other sincere people on the anti-Catholic platform, she saw, during the present wave of bigotry, a chance to make easy money.

Helen now lectures in a garb, which she represents as her nun's garb of course, she was never a nun; it is only a replica of the costume worn by the peasant women and girls in Normandy, France. The Sisters of the Good Shepherd allow their charges to wear that garb as a uniform during the period in which they are "on good conduct." No one who enters the reformatory under the Good Shepherd Sisters is ever permitted to become a member of their Order.

This impostor, $20,000 damage suit against the "Ypsilanti (Mich.) Press" for defamation of character, in the trial at Ann Arbor early part of 1921, before Judge Sample, Wachtenaw Circuit Court, Mich., it was developed that Helen's character was very, very bad. Jury rendered verdict "No cause for action," against the Michigan editor who had referred to her as a "woman of the street."

Helen Jackson has been repeatedly exposed in different communities at the very time she was speaking to big audiences; yet enemies of the Catholic Church encourage her to go ahead.

Even the Ku Klux Klan will not always stand for Helen. The Fiery Cross, Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 17th, 1922, carried the following:

"She makes a living out of the game and so does her husband. Her mission is purely monetary. Mrs. Jackson was never a nun. She poses in what she says is a nun's habit, but it is not. Investigation always proves that these speakers do not have a pure motive or are in their questionable work for the benefit of themselves. Wherever she has been imported, she spreads her poison and does positive harm."

CARE IN FEEDING BREEDING SHEEP

When proper care and feed are provided, ewes go through winter in good condition and produce a large lamb crop. A flock at the Ky. Experiment Station fed a ration of equal parts, by weight, of oats and bran, in addition to alfalfa hay and blue grass pasture, produced a 155 per cent lamb crop. The ewes gained in weight and wintered in good health, in a season when many farmers reported losses of 8 to 15 per cent of their ewes. When grass becomes short, care should be taken to supply additional protein feed, such as alfalfa, cover, soybean or cowpea hay, as well as some grain. A limited amount of silage is good. Timothy hay should not be fed.

ARE YOU AMONG THE NUMBER?

Among the number who subscribed to the P. T. A. building fund a few have neglected to pay in the amount of their subscription.

The Committee is anxious to close up this matter so as not to hold the books open indefinitely and if you have not paid your subscription you are requested to do so at once and save the Committee the unnecessary trouble of calling on you.

WILL GIVE SUPPER

The Midway school will give a Supper and Party at the school building Friday night, October 23rd. Will serve, as usual, Lemonade and Cakes. Come and have a good time.

Multimillionaires are not averse to holding state jobs at nominal salaries. Pierre S. DuPont has just been appointed state income tax collector of Indiana, and he pays him $4,000 a year. It may be that this particular position should be in the $15,000 class because of certain personal advantages. At all events it is worth what a DuPont would never battle about it. They demand and receive value received and they sum.

V. S. METCALFE CANDIDATE FOR STATE SENATOR TWENTY-SIXTH KENTUCKY DISTRICT. ELECTION NOV. 3, 1925.

Platform—Good Roads, Fraternity, Equitable Taxes. Opposed to Double-Taxation—Gambling.

Col. Metcalfe is one of the best citizens of Grant county. While not a native by birth, having been born in the neighboring county of Kenton, he has lived in the county nearly all his life. He has been an auctioneer for the past 25 years and is recognized as one of the best of his calling in Northern Kentucky.

He has taken an active lead in every effort made to better the condition of his fellow farmers, and his activity in the organization of the various tobacco pools has been noteworthy. He is engaged in farming and owns one of the best farms in the county. He is a prominent stock-breeder and for years carried on one of the best stud farms in the county.

While he is a Republican, he is not offensive to even the most radical Democrats and believes in many of the principles advocated by Democrats. In other words, he is more or less an independent in belief.

though he has been a constant follower of his party.

As a citizen Mr. Metcalfe stands high among his fellow men. He was made a Colonel on Governor Morrow's staff several years ago. He was a valuable member of the Grant County Board of Education for seven years and was recognized as one of the most progressive members of the board. He has never held an elective office and this is the first important office he has ever asked for.

Mr. Metcalfe stands on a platform of his own, favoring a great reduction of taxes as is possible. He is for the best roads that it is possible for the State and county to secure. In fact, he is for the betterment of conditions generally, and if he should be elected he will make a valuable acquisition in the upper house at Frankfort.

ATTEMPT ROBBERY FOILED AT RICHWOOD

Shot Fired By Russell Towell Almost "Gets" Driver

Russell Towell, of Richwood again thwarted an attempted robbery last Wednesday night. However on this occasion the culprit got away with a whole skin whereas on a previous occasion, which many will recall, one was dropped in his tracks, afterwards dying from the effects of the gun shot wound.

On Wednesday night an attempt was made to break into his gasoline pump, but he heard them and fired once or twice as they drove away. They will learn some day that they can't fool with Russell after night.

The day after a call was received at Cincinnati police station, simultaneously with one at the Covington station and one at the sheriff's office in this county. The first call reported a stolen car, the second an abandoned car on the Madison pike, and of course the Boone county call reported the attempted theft of gasoline.

After investigation had been made all three reports were on the same car. The hole shot through the auto top would have killed the driver if he had not "ducked" it is said.

Deputy Sheriff Utz went to the car when it was found, but could find no clue as to the identity of the thief. The car was a Buick six.

Mr. Robert W. Rouse and Miss Eldora Aylor, both of Burlington vicinity, were united in marriage last Wednesday evening at Covington.

Both are well known to nearly every one in this section of the county, and have the best wishes of every one. Mr. Rouse has long been connected with the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company of this county as their agent, making a splendid man for the place as is evidenced by his lengthy term of office.

The Recorder has but one regret—that is through the union the loss of a subscriber & two faithful readers are now but one.

HELEN JACKSON IS HEARD BY MULTITUDE

Recites Experiences in Convent, Also Account of Escape

Two of the largest crowds ever assembled in Burlington heard Mrs. Helen Jackson speak last Sunday afternoon and Monday evening at the Court House. She also spoke on Tuesday afternoon to ladies only. Mrs. Jackson was accompanied by her husband who also made short talks. It is estimated that the total attendance at the three meetings was in excess of fifteen hundred people.

Although we cannot vouch for the foundation of her statements, at the same time we have no right to dispute her story, and indeed, if her story be true, she has certainly led a most turbulent life.

Mrs. Jackson is forty-six years of age and alleges that she was once a nun in convent at Newport, Ky., from which she made her escape at the age of 24 years. She has been on the lecture platform for the past eleven years according to her statement as well as that of her husband, and has spoken in all parts of the country.

A free silver offering was taken at each of the open sessions while a straight admission of fifty cents was charged at the ladies meeting. Books containing her life story were on sale at 25 cents per copy at each meeting.

TO THE TAXPAYERS OF BOONE COUNTY.

NOTICE

In a test case recently tried in the Kenton Circuit Court it was held that the penalty for non-payment of taxes attaches on December 1st and on January 1st as generally understood. I will be guided by this opinion, you will therefore take notice that on all taxes not paid before December 1st 1925, a penalty of 4% will be imposed and collected. B. B. HUME, Sheriff Boone County.

ANOTHER STATE BEE BY COURIER-JOURNAL

Newspaper Will Again Give Prizes to Best Spellers

Nearly $2,000 in prizes, the spelling bee of America, a trip to Washington, a two-day stay in Louisville—a chance at all these is offered every speller in this county.

For these are the prizes offered by the Courier-Journal in its state and national spelling bee, which is opening now in Kentucky and in 30 other states.

Every school in this county and every pupil is invited to join immediately. The bee is open to all graded school students.

Last Year the Courier-Journal held its spelling bee in eighty-four counties and offered $350 in prize money to the winners. A total of 4,000 schools entered with 178,000 students.

This year the newspaper wants 150 counties, 6,000 schools and 225,000 pupils to spell. Prizes are $500 divided among the seven best spellers in the state.

Each school will send its champion who will receive a handsome prize certificate of merit in spelling given by The Courier-Journal. School winners will meet at the county seat to find the county champion, who will be sent to Louisville with expenses paid for the state finals.

The state champion will go to Washington next June with all expenses paid, and with his or her mother or father, for a stay of a week, to take part in the National Spelling Bee. There thirty state champions will meet to decide the spelling title of America. More than $1,000 in cash will be the prizes in Washington.

Last year Kentucky took the national title when Frank Neuhauser defeated the best spellers in fourteen states. This year Kentucky wants to duplicate its success.

Every superintendent, principal or teacher of public, private or parochial schools in city and county are invited to communicate at once with Jos. A. Humphreys Jr., spelling bee editor of The Courier-Journal and enter his or her school. Mr. Humphreys is directing both the state and national contests.

The state bee has the endorsement of the State Department of Education and the Kentucky Educational Association, while the National Bee has the support of the U. S. Commissioner of Education, and of officers of the National Educational Association.

ORPHANS HOME DRIVE LAUNCHED IN BOONE

Miss Ida Cozart of Louisville Soliciting for Orphans Home at Lynden

Miss Ida Cozart, of Louisville, who visited Boone county several weeks ago in the interest of the Kentucky Children's Home Society, is now with us again preparing to start a drive to raise a definite amount in this county for the maintenance and construction of new buildings for the Kentucky Children's Home located at Lynden, Ky., about ten miles from the city of Louisville.

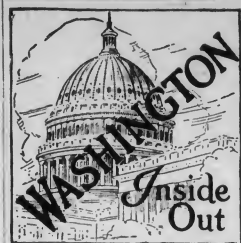

Miss Cozart has just returned from Owen county where she recently completed a drive in that county. The county chairman of her campaign committee there was H. J. W. Cammack, who was formerly Circuit Judge of this district.

These drives have been or will be put on in each county in the state in an effort to raise $500,000 from the entire commonwealth for the benefit of fatherless and motherless children. This home is caring for approximately 175 children constantly. Of course the personnel of the home's population is continually changing due to the fact that children are being placed in private homes in different parts of the state almost every day.

The home is a temporary haven for parentless children, who, through no fault of their own, become absolutely dependent upon the public for existence. Many thousands of children have been saved in this way. Miss Cozart is not at this writing prepared to announce her chairman for this county, but as soon as this chairman is selected, a county wide organization will at once be perfected and the drive formally launched.

The amount solicited from Boone county is comparatively small when its population is considered. Miss Cozart is engaged in a laudable work and each citizen of this county should consider himself personally responsible for a small portion of that amount called for.

Further statistics and matter will be published in these columns from time to time on this subject.

WAS "BILLY" Mitchell afraid of the Naval Court of Inquiry? The Navy firmly believes he was and leading officers insist that he has lost the public approval he had at the start of his campaign for a unified air service. Mitchell counters with the fact that Army courtmartial proceedings were impending and he did not wish to jeopardize his case. The Navy was known to be "loaded for bear" when Mitchell made his appearance before the court and leading officers privately said they hoped to completely ruin Mitchell in the eyes of the people. The fighting colonel was regarded as being unfamiliar with the operations of dirigibles like the Shenandoah and the Navy hoped to "show up" his inefficiency against the Navy following the Shenandoah crash has been a thorn in the side of the sailors. They feel they have not been given an opportunity to prove their case by having Mitchell prove on the stand that he has little or no knowledge of that branch of aeronautics.

THE TALK in diplomatic circles these days is the strong stand which China is expected to take in demanding that the Powers relinquish their grip on that country. Not since the Boxer uprising has Chinese sentiment been so strong for freedom from foreign domination. Chinese customs are not collected by foreigners who also have the right of trial before their own courts. Belief is growing that China will bluntly demand at the forthcoming conference, that the Powers give up their treaty rights. If China should do that, it is agreed, no show of force would be made by the Powers as a military occupation of China, out of the question at the present time. China's weakness lies in the rival factions, all seeking control and all anxious to remain on good terms with the leading nations.

WASHINGTON is eagerly awaiting the return from Geneva of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson to hear for the first time what many believe may be an admission that she is planning to be married again. In the face of emphatic denials the rumors persist which link her name with that of Dr. J. Sterling Ruffin, an old family friend. Ruffin has refused to comment. Mrs. Wilson's great charm and even beauty, for all of her advancing years, have made her a target for the clique which has always disliked her. Friends of Mrs. Wilson insist that she will dedicate the remainder of her life to carrying out the work begun by President Wilson. Many eligible bachelors have called at the noted S. street home since the customary mourning period ended and this fact, coupled with the rumors which originated abroad, are the basis of the latest gossip.

A CLEVER plan to help Senator Smoot's building program is seen by many in the eviction proceedings against the Department of Justice. The Department, in common with many other governmental agencies, is now occupying rented quarters. Harry Wardman, millionaire contractor, ordered the Department to pay more rent or vacate the building it occupies. He later relented and allowed the Attorney General time in which to consider the situation. Mr. Smoot's program, which provides for construction of sufficient buildings to care for all governmental bureaus is opposed because of the expense involved. It is certain to create a stormy scene in Congress because of the present economy program.

COLONEL Tom Miller, former Alien Property Custodian, is planning on returning to Washington before Congress opens to personally tell the Attorney General just how he came into possession of $47,000 in bonds said to have been part of the German funds taken over by the government in war times. The Department of Justice has finished its investigation and many believe another scandal impends. Miller's friends insist the securities were acquired properly and that it was just a coincidence they are reported to bear the same serial numbers as those under his charge in war times. Miller is now in France.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lassing Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Comer left Monday morning for St. Petersburg, Florida.

SHALE DEPOSITS TO BE WORKED BY OIL FIRM

Geologist Estimates 100 Billion
Tons Available For Distilling
In Kentucky Areas Alone

Frankfort—An amount staggering the imagination, 100 billion tons, is conservatively estimated by scientists working with Dr. Willard Rouse Johnson, state geologist, as representing the outcrop shale areas in Kentucky. J. W. Wilcox, Sr., of Irvine, Ky., has just announced the first oil shale distilling plant on a commercial basis in the nation is to be built in Estill county, near Irvine. The plant, to start not later than next spring, calls for an outlay of $1,000,000.

Oil, gasoline, kerosene, gas, ammonia dye for silks, perfume, stove polish, shoe polish, sulphur, carbon black for painting automobiles, and other products will be taken from the shale.

Italy Claims Case Against Paducah For Damages

Paducah—Claim of the government of Italy against the city of Paducah for damages alleged due for taxes collected on tobacco owned by the foreign state and stored in this city several years ago, was upheld by a decision in the Court of Appeals.

As a result of what is regarded by legal authorities as one of the most unusual suits ever going through the courts of Kentucky, the Italian government recovered judgment of approximately $800 against the city. The suit was the first of its kind ever filed in the state.

The government of Italy, through Attorneys Wheeler and Hughes of Paducah, filed suit to recover the amount of taxes alleged to have been improperly collected. The plaintiff won a judgment in the McCracken county circuit court.

Seven Dry Agents Held As Murderers in Bath Warrants

Lexington—Warrants charging seven Lexington prohibition agents with murder were issued at Owensville. The charge grew out of the killing of Alvin Wilson, son of Andy Wilson, on September 15, at his home on Mill Creek, in Bath county. The seven agents facing murder charges in connection with the affair are: B. F. Untank, Albert Ransdell, W. C. Thompson, Roy Bailey, E. M. Statton, W. C. White and Guy Tuggle.

WORKING FOR A BETTER TOWN

Do you want a better town? If so, do not spend time in knocking. But just try to make that portion of the town which you control, such that it will conform to your ideals. Every householder can do something to help on the movement for a better town, by keeping his home place in order. If it is neatly painted and repaired, if his grass is well cut, if trees and shrubs are well trimmed, then he has done something for home town progress. The influence thereof will be more than he thinks, for his neighbors dislike to allow their own places to fall much behind.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES

President and Mrs. Coolidge have just observed a 20th wedding anniversary. This contrasts pleasantly with many married couples who can not get along together for twenty months, perhaps not 20 weeks. The newspapers used to print in about every issue accounts of this or that couple that had celebrated some wedding anniversary, usually the 25th or 50th. The community likes to honor such folks. That kind of news seems less conspicuous now. That does not mean that married couples are commonly separating before those memorable dates. It may simply indicate that more people are celebrating these events in a quiet manner.

The completion of a long period of harmonious family affection suggests that if people will exercise reason in marrying, they can celebrate many happy anniversaries, and find homes that will be centers of habits we need not go to the opposite

The old old query of what becomes of all the jewelry has been answered by an Atlanta, Ga., mortician who estimates that jewelry and precious stones to the value of $20,000,000 is buried with the dead in this country every year. He estimates that since this government was founded more than two thousand millions of dollars in gold and jewels has been placed in the cemeteries of the United States as a matter of sentiment or relic of an ancient custom.

The speeding motorists may be able to remove telephone poles from along the highways, but when they try to obliterate the old trees, they are overestimating the horsepower of their machines.

One thing this country needs is more people scattering seeds of sunshine, as the old song said, and not so many scattering seeds of moonshine.

"What line do you think you are on, anyhow?"

"Well," said the man, "I am not sure but judging from what I have heard, I should say I was on a clothes line."—Ladies Home Journal.

UNWILLING SERVICE

Before the war a considerable proportion of the women used to employ one or more servants. Out in the country districts such a helper was democratically known as the "hired girl." But since the war, this type of workers has become somewhat scarce, and a great number of women who used to feel the need of such assistance, are now doing their own housework.

In a good many cases women will say they think they could afford to have such a helper and they believe they could find one. But they say that many of these workers are very grouchy and discontented, so that it is more annoying to have them in their homes than it is to do the housework themselves.

There may be something to be said on the side of these workers. In some cases they may be asked to work unreasonably long hours, or they may be given poor and uncomfortable quarters. It naturally promotes discontent if they have to sleep in a stuffy room under the attic thru the summer, and in one without any means of heat in winter.

Yet it is the opinion of sensible women that these house workers fare pretty well nowadays, as compared with the ordinary run of girls who do clerical work. Their pay, added to the value of the board which they get, is probably more than the average wages of the business girl.

Many of the older women regret the old fashioned servant, who was devoted to the interests of the family, and seemed to keep somewhat contented. Her tribe is scarce now. There is much of the spirit of unwilling service in the world, among both men and women. The idea has been widely distributed that work is a kind of curse which should be avoided as much as possible, and that people who have to toil are in some way defrauded of their rights.

When an Indian prince asked Judge Gary what he thought of the Nauteh girls, the Judge replied that he had an open mind. He diplomatically refrained from mentioning his good eyesight.

It has been said that the night has a thousand eyes but that is far too few to see all that goes on.

WATCH THE DATE

Since the RECORDER is fifty years old we think it time that it settled down to business. In all the past fifty years it has been the policy of the paper to let subscribers pay for the paper, but they happened to be in Burlington, they had a great many people don't "happen" in Burlington very often, and it's very easy to forget the RECORDER when they do come. Of course the campaign placed a number of people ahead, but there are some still behind and a number being added every week. If you take a daily paper you don't get a single issue after your time is out. The RECORDER has to pay for everything it buys, when the bills are rendered—that's business—and the only way for any enterprise to survive. When the day of the month arrives indicated on your date line your subscription is due for another year, so watch your date line. Please. On November 1 we will be compelled to remove all "past due" subscribers from the list. If you desire to remain on the list send remittance by mail—that's business. Your silence will mean that you do not care to continue, thereby causing removal on November 1.

THE DEMAND FOR EASE

The effort is sometimes made to build up the rural sections by persuading people that modern facilities have made it possible for people to get along without much effort on a farm or in a country town.

This is not quite the right philosophy. It will never be a specially easy thing to make money on farms. And it calls for hard work to be a successful business or professional man, or hold any good job, in a country town. Probably the country doctor, for instance, works harder than the city practitioner.

If a young man is looking for a soft snap, there is little place for him in the country. He may be able to go to some city, and get some job where he can earn his support and get along in a narrow way without working very hard. But he will find few rewards of any kind.

The country town or farm home offers a chance for an all around career, with good rewards in money, and some of more satisfactory kinds. It offers more of happiness than any different kind of career. It gives a great deal, but it does expect that people will be willing to work. It wants strong and achieving people, who are not afraid of effort, and who feel that they will get more out of the world if they take hold and do with their might what their hands find to do.

To Lead the American People to a Study of the Federal Constitution

By JOHN W. DAVIS, in New York Times.

THREE years ago the American Bar association created its committee on American citizenship, the duty of which is to lead the American people to a more thorough study of our federal Constitution and the theory of government underlying the same.

The need of this activity is seen when one asks his neighbor, "What is meant by a government of limited power?" or asks the minister, "What is meant by liberty regulated by law?" or asks his lawyer the reasons for the adoption of the first ten amendments to the Constitution, or asks any man in the street what is meant by our Bill of Rights. The answers made to these questions under such circumstances show that a very high proportion of American citizenship is woefully ignorant of the theory and the form of our government.

The Constitution lays down two great fundamental rules which apply to every citizen of the United States—the rule of equality and the rule of freedom. The rule of freedom is that every person born or naturalized in the United States shall have all the rights and privileges which every other citizen enjoys. There are no slaves. The rule of equality is: Wherever the citizen comes in contact with the law, and wherever the law touches the citizen, there shall be no distinction of race or creed or condition in life.

Every law-abiding citizen shall be free to live his own life, in his own way, in pursuit of his own interests and desires, so long as he respects the same rights in his fellows. All that he earns by honest means shall be his, and no man shall take it from him. Neither his life, his liberty nor his property shall be taken from him save by due process of law. If he disobeys the law and thereby loses any of these rights, no punishment can be imposed upon him until he has had a fair and open trial before a jury of his equals. Hence, equality and freedom are the birthrights which the Constitution gives to every native or naturalized American.

Make "Home" as Comfortable and Happy as Your Means Will Permit

By EDWARD W. STITT, New York City Public Schools.

Set proper standards for your children to follow. Be friends with your children, walk and play with them occasionally. We must not live above our children but with them. Do not scold too much. Encourage them to do their best. Let us remember what Phillips Brooks said: "Children are white, spotted black; not black, spotted white." See that they select proper friends and associates.

Make "home" as comfortable and happy as your means permit. Give your children at least a high school education. Train them in the habit of regular attendance at church and Sunday school. See that they avoid all games of chance. A gambler never can be a success in life. See that your children take plenty of physical training in the open air. It is better exercise to walk than to ride in a "limousine."

Let your children feel that any honor which they win in school, or any honor or unselfishness they may meet will be a reward for their happiness to father and mother and put the family name on a higher plane of honor. Do not forget that the future of America depends upon how your boys and girls are trained today, not on how you were trained when you were children.

Should We Regard Our Earth as the Only Planet With Intelligent Life?

By DR. ROBERT G. AITKIN, Lick Observatory.

We have no hope at all of discovering evidence that intelligent life exists on any of the other planets in the solar system. Does that mean that we should regard our earth as the only planet sustaining intelligent life? I think not.

I think that would be the most egotistical and anthropocentric conclusion we could imagine. Our sun is only one of several thousand million suns in our universe; it is not conspicuous for its size, nor unique in its location (for it is many hundreds of light years from the center of the stellar system) nor distinguishable from thousands of other stars by the quality of its light. Moreover, all of these millions of suns are composed of elements identical with those known here on our earth.

Must there not among them be many having planets that are not only capable of sustaining life, but that have intelligent beings dwelling upon them? I think an affirmative answer is the only reasonable conclusion, even though we may never be able to establish it by direct observation.

Wilson's Policy of Neutrality Genuine; Efforts for Peace Sincere

By ROBERT LANSING, in Current History.

Even after Count von Bernstorff received his passports, President Wilson continued to hope that he could persuade the belligerents to negotiate peace, for four days after that momentous event he sent me a memorandum on "Bases of Peace" for my comment. In the face of the folly of the German government in renewing indiscriminate submarine warfare, Mr. Wilson still believed that he could preserve neutrality and become the mediator between the warring powers. His policy of neutrality was genuine and his efforts for peace were sincere. Several members of his cabinet, of which I was one, were not in sympathy with his attitude, but however strongly we felt that the President was wrong in his attitude, loyalty to him as the head of the government compelled us to support him. It was not, in fact, until the latter part of March that Mr. Wilson reluctantly abandoned hope of mediation and decided, with the unanimous approval of his cabinet, that the United States had no alternative but to join the Allies in crushing Prussian autocracy and bringing the war to an end by force of arms.

America Does Not Need the Incompetents From Italy's Population

By PROF. E. M. EAST, Institute of Politics.

No nation wants the dregs drained from the bottom of the vat. We know Italy's greatness, her Galileos, her Leonardos, her Michelangelos. Does she send us these, even in humble imitations? She does not. Our culture here would be immensely improved if we could import and make our own some of the creative geniuses comparable to those who built so grandly in the Renaissance. Have we the slightest chance of obtaining them? Again I say no. The Grade-A men of Lombardy and Tuscany are not squeezed out by economic pressure. Such people take care of themselves. Furthermore, these Northerners are men of brains, thoughtful and foresighted. They are not producing Italy's excess. The excess comes from below Rome, people of a different race, people where Grade-A men are negligible in quantity, where grades B and C predominate. We don't need these incompetents. We produce enough of that quality ourselves.

NEW YORK'S TAX VALUATIONS

Mr. H. M. Goldfogle, president of the Department of Taxes, of New York City, states that the assessed value of real estate in the five boroughs has reached the unprecedented figure of $7,119,659,544. This is an increase of $2,191,316,614 over last year and gives New York the highest valuation for taxable purposes of any one city in the world.

Personal property valuations are $959,994,950. Exemptable property owned by the Government, the state, the city, hospitals, charitable and philanthropic institutions, churches, libraries and other institutions amounts to $3,600,000,000.

The statement shows that John D. Rockefeller Sr., is the heaviest taxpayer in New York City, with a personal assessment of $1,100,000. It also shows that the appraisers regard the Equitable Building as the most valuable building in the city. They assessed it at $31,000,000, which is $1,000,000 more than last year's assessment.

HENS SHOULD HAVE RANGE

Tests made by the Ky. Experiment Station indicate that hens lay better in winter when they are allowed to range about than when they are confined. Birds allowed out in good weather produced an average of 7 eggs more each during the four winter months in which the tests were made. The investigators conclude that, with the mild winter in most parts of Kentucky, it is advisable to allow the laying flock, as well as the breeding pen, to run outdoors on all pleasant days.

MILKING AGE OF HEIFERS

In an attempt to determine the age at which it is best to begin milking Jersey heifers, the Ky. Experiment Station tabulated all official milk and butterfat records made by Jersey heifers and printed in the Register of Merit for one year. The greater number of heifers began tests at 24 months of age, although approximately as many tests were begun at the ages of 23 and 27 months. Maximum production, however, was attained by heifers beginning tests at 28 months.

FAYETTE GAS SUPPLY TEMPORARILY ASSURED

Organization of Stock Company to Bring Fuel to the City is Suggested.

Lexington—Judge R. C. Stoll in the Fayette Circuit Court granted a temporary restraining order preventing the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Company from discontinuing its service to Lexington consumers and requiring the company to furnish gas at the present rate to citizens of Lexington who desire to use it as long as the order is in effect.

The order was granted on a petition filed in the Fayette Circuit Court against the gas company by S. B. Featherstone, president of the Lexington Board of Commerce, and others suing for themselves and all other citizens of Lexington.

The decision of Judge Stoll also gives either of the parties to the suit the right to apply to the court for a dissolution or modification of the restraining order. The order further provides that the injunction shall become effective upon the execution by the plaintiffs of a bond of $10,000 to cover any damages that the defendant company may sustain by reason of such action. William H. Townsend, Chief Corporation Counsel for the City of Lexington, said the bond would be prepared at once and signed by the National Surety Company.

The action is a result of a notice sent to Acting Mayor James J. O'Brien and the Board of City Commissioners by the gas company that the gas service here would be discontinued at the expiration of the existing franchise between the gas company and the city. Several months ago the gas company requested a renewal of their twenty-year franchise, but asked a new rate of 60 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas consumed, an increase of 20 cents per 1,000 feet, which the commissioners believed to be an exorbitant rate and refused to grant the franchise until an investigation could be made by a gas expert to determine a fair rate for the gas. The expert still is working on the report after investigating the books of the gas company.

One of the city commissioners has suggested that, in case the gas company and the city fail to come to an agreement, that the city take over the gas project here and organize a stock company to pump gas here from the wells to supply the citizens with gas. Final action in the gas matter here will not be taken until the return to Lexington of Mayor Hogan L. Yancey, who has been in Europe this summer.

It frequently happens that the discouraged people who think business is going to be very bad, find that their own business at least is that way.

The Swearing Habit

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I KNEW a woman once who in explanation of her loud and blatant profanity gave as a reason for her blasphemy that she wanted to let God know that she wasn't afraid to speak her mind. The explanation was definite if it was not one that appealed to one's sense of fitness.

Everyone who swears has some reason, conscious or subconscious, and some of these reasons are not difficult to understand. In many cases the individual takes refuge in oaths because of illiteracy, because of lack of vocabulary. The very meanness of his words drives him to the conclusion that he will gain force or variety by cursing. He "has a feeling" that he is driving a point home when he swears.

The bully or the coward swears to give the impression of force or to fortify his courage. It is a sort of camouflage which deceives only the inexperienced. It is pretty safe to slap a man in the face if he swears at you and to expect an apology. Swearing shows a self-consciousness, a lack of self-reliance, a lack of knowledge; it is like the boy in the woods whistling to keep his courage up. The boss who swears at the men he directs or instructs not infrequently does so as a means of covering up his own lack of knowledge or inexperience in directing people. The profane man is usually the excited or terrified or ignorant one. The man who swears seldom if ever inspires either respect or fear or confidence in those who are the recipients of his bullying. They have the viewpoint of the irreverent young son, who, listening to an outburst of profane advice from his father, said, "Oh, pa's blowing off again."

The young fellow just out of high school, just freed from the restraint of home, often feels that he shows himself a man to the extent that he is able to rip out a good oath. Swearing in his mind demonstrates the fact that he has seen the world, that he is no longer a social greenhorn, that he is entitled to respect.

It is admitted that profanity is a common habit among men, but it is coming to be less in vogue than it was. It is a low, vulgar habit best suited to the ignorant, the ill-trained, and the uncivil. It will go out of fashion, I feel sure, not so much because it is wrong as because it is weak. The man who swears has for the time being dropped his guard, has shown a lack of strength, a failure to control himself and the situation before him. He is under such circumstances more easily defeated, he has prejudiced his cause, he is weak and not infrequently pitiable. He is not at his best.

When a man begins to swear at you, can you be assured that you are stronger than he is.

Coat Frocks Reveal New Style Points

Following the general trend of the mode, and especially the lead of other frocks, the new coat-frocks are departing from straight lines and too simple simplicity. In their shaping they recognize the existence of a waistline, and show a disposition to cultivate its acquaintance, and in their adornment they have taken up with all the new details of decoration. Diversity of collar-and-sleeve treatments that distinguish late arrivals among other frocks have been promptly appropriated by the coat-frock. Here is an example in navy twill. Note the vestee and undersleeves of georgette, the embroidery on collar and wrist bands, the scalloped edge of the "V"-shaped front opening, repeated on the sleeves, and accented by small buttons—all of these are important style points.

Lexington.—Police here were asked by police of Denver, Colo., to search for Frank Blair, 40 years old, pardoned from the Kentucky State Reformatory two years ago by Governor Edwin P. Morrow, although wanted at that time by federal authorities. Blair is charged by the Denver police with having held up the paymaster of the Kirschdorf Construction Company of Denver, as he was paying off workmen on the university stadium. A reward of $400 is offered for his arrest and conviction. The holdup of the paymaster took place August 15, according to the Denver police. This is the first time Blair had been heard of here since his sensational and mysterious liberation from the Reformatory.

Negro Duellists Escape, But Unlucky Mule Dies

Louisville, Ky.—Two negroes fought a shotgun-pistol duel, but it ended in a draw, it was revealed by their arrests. Each fired once, one wounding an innocent bystander and the other killing a mule. There had been bad blood between John Keller, 23 years old, one of the negroes, and John Simpson, 37, the other, police said, so when Simpson saw Keller standing in the doorway of Sallie Kersey's home, Newburg Road, he stopped his mule. Keller fired a pistol and the mule fell with a bullet through its heart. Simpson fired a shotgun and John Fracus, negro, 25, fell with wounds in his shoulder and head. Keller is charged with shooting and destroying private property, the mule. Simpson is charged with wounding Fracus, who is in the City Hospital.

CREDITORS PAYING THE BILL
England, France and Germany have sent many prominent men to the United States to persuade us to alter our tariff laws so their goods could come in at lower prices. This argument has been advanced as necessary to enable them to pay their war debt.
Some of the most astute financiers of this country, after considering the question from all view points, have advocated the principle of cancelling the debts rather than lower the tariffs or run the risk of being compelled to meet foreign competition on our own soil.
Great Britain solved her end of the trouble by making us pay her debt on the increased price of rubber. Germany threatens to invade this country with new dyes, new chemical products, and manufactured goods, just as she is invading India, Persia, and Great Britain's eastern markets. France, though with the smallest number of unemployed of any nation in the world, is not so fortunate. These nations propose to make us pay their debts indirectly, and there seems to be no way out of it.
Our costs of living steadily mount, due perhaps in some instances to tariff and in others to trusts and combinations controlling prices. But the fact remains that we are paying just the same.

JOINING SOMETHING
About now many householders and housewives, looking ahead to the long winter evenings, conclude that it is going to get a little dull sitting around the old reliable parlor lamp until next May. They think they would better join up with some organization that will create a little variety.
This desertion of the home circle is looked at with alarm by many philosophers. In many families, the home has become a kind of an eating and sleeping joint in which people spend so little time that they could hardly tell anyone how it looks. But in our fear of such wandering habits we need not go to the opposite extreme, and refuse to go out because we have to change those soft slippers that they gave us for our last birthday.
People need to belong to a few good organizations. It takes social and intellectual contacts to kindle the sparks of thought and action.
Many automobile drivers who are very indifferent about having their brakes in order, will see to it that the horn is kept in good condition.
You can't have a good time and keep it too.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Mayesville.—A broke team on a C. & O. freight train broke four miles west of here. The loose team struck a frog causing five empty coal cars to be overturned on the main line, holding up passenger trains for five hours.

Leitchfield, Ky.—Coldage, the 8-month-old son of Albert Toms, of near Caneyville, was burned seriously upon the face and hands when he fell into an open fireplace at his home here. It is feared the baby may have breathed the flame.

Columbia.—In a number of places in Columbia and Adair counties, southwest of here, apple trees are blossoming again while the apples from the first bloom are ripening. Old bean vines that were thought to be dead have been sprouted out and are blossoming again.

Saltersville, Ky.—Charles Collinsworth was shot and wounded in the stomach by Lewis Conley, a neighbor in a quarrel near their home, two miles south of here on the Farmington Road. Collinsworth was brought to Saltersville for treatment. Conley is under arrest.

Midway, Ky.—A separation since early childhood of a son from his father will end soon when Lewis Jefferson, of Midway, will visit his father, Jasper A. Jefferson, at his home in Alabama, Robertson county, about fifty miles from here. The son, now 50 years old, saw his father last in 1884.

Elkins.—George P. Stott, cashier of the Bank of Elkins, sustained a painful injury to his hip and shoulder when he slipped on the bank floor and fell. No bones were broken in his body, but since he is so advanced age, the bruises are causing him much pain and are keeping him confined to his room.

Frankfort.—Eighty-three arrests and sixty-two convictions for violations of the game and fish laws were reported by the game and fish commission for the months of August and September. Warden in sixteen of the eighteen districts reported arrests with conviction of twenty-one pieces of contraband and fines totaling $890.

Howling Green.—Law enforcement, sex education, recreation and medical attention will relieve America's youth of the ravages of social diseases. This was the message of Mrs. Anna K. Potts of Carlisle, Ky., head of the department of social morality of the Kentucky Women's Christian Temperance Union, before the State convention.

Louisville.—The trial of Elby Spillman, 18 years old, of Twin Branch, ten miles from here, for the murder of Will Hanchett, 24, on July 19, during a quarrel resulting from ill feeling between the two men, ended here in a deadlock. Spillman who has been held in jail since the fray, will be retried at the next meeting of the Lawrence County Court.

Paducah.—On order of removal from the federal court authorities in Louisville, Mrs. Leona Garthright, 30, wife of Thomas Garthright, Edinville convict, will be taken to Toledo, Ohio, in custody of Deputy United States Marshal Otis Burnett, to face a federal whiskey charge. A warrant from Indianapolis was also served recently against Mrs. Garthright, preferring a charge of stealing an automobile.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—An 8-year-old girl was almost instantly killed, her father and two other adults were seriously injured and five other young children were hurt when an automobile in which they were riding skidded off the road and crashed into a stone fence on the Harrodsburg Pike, about a mile north of Danville. The accident resulted from an attempt to avoid a collision with another car.

Leitchfield.—St. Mudd, 20, was accidentally killed while hunting five miles from here, according to reports reaching here. With a companion he had gone squirrel shooting and he climbed into a tree to dislodge a squirrel one of them had shot. As he descended Mudd stepped on a pole which upset the gun, causing it to discharge. Contents of one cartridge went through the victim's head. He died instantly.

Harlan, Ky.—The advance guard of winter invaded Harlan recently heralded by high winds, icy drizzle and low temperature. Adding to the general wintry appearance numerous flocks of wild geese lured by the city lights, circled over town almost touching the roofs. A few became so bewildered they alighted in the streets and floundered beneath the lights until dawn cleared their vision and allowed them to resume their southward flight.

Hardtown, Ky.—Three Louisville women were injured when an automobile in which they were riding struck a northbound L. & N. passenger train near the station here. Their hurts are not dangerous.

Pikeville, Ky.—Five men have been indicted for murder in the Pike county grand jury now in session. Allen and Columbus Rilling are accused of the murder of their father, John Rilling, of the murder of the late John Rilling, of the murder of Dr. Adams and George Rilling of the murder of Mrs. Ida Rilling.

KENTUCKY DOPE QUEEN AND NARCOTICS SEIZED

Mrs. Clara Kaiser, of Louisville, Caught With $80,000 in Dope By Federal Agents

Louisville.—Narcotics worth between $75,000 and $80,000 at peddlers' prices, were seized by five Federal agents in a garage in an alley in the rear of South Sixth street, when a woman they had been trailing a year drove her sedan in the garage.

Hidden in that vicinity since early the day before, awaiting her, the agents, accompanied by under-cover men, rushed into the garage with the automobile and arrested the woman, Mrs. Clara Kaiser, 35 years old, 1319 East Washington street, as she stepped from her car and started toward a box.

Agents got to it first and lifted a valise. Inside the valise they found the narcotics, which constituted one of the largest "hauls" ever made in Louisville. The narcotics, of two kinds, were packed in one-ounce boxes. Several hypodermic needles also were found.

Kaiser stood by, composed while the agents checked over the fortune in "dope." "You outsmarted me," she told the agents. "A month later and you wouldn't have caught me. My husband would have been out of Atlanta by then."

Her husband, Walter Kaiser, is serving eighteen months in the Federal penitentiary on a narcotic charge. The agents who arrested his wife set him free.

The ill-timed truth we might have kept—Who knows how sharp it pierced and stung? The word we had not sense to say—Who knows how grandly it had rung?

EARLY SPRINGTIME DESSERTS

To stimulate the appetite and furnish mineral matter and acids which the system craves and needs at this season, fresh fruits and vegetables are invaluable.

Banana Dessert.—Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler until scalding hot. Add two tablespoonsful of cornstarch which has been mixed with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one-third of a cupful of sugar, then add one-fourth of a cupful of cream. Cook thirty minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, return to the boiler and stir, cooking until smooth and thick, using care not to over cook and curdle the eggs. Add a teaspoonful of orange extract and put in a cool place.

Cut sponge cake into slices and arrange in a glass dish in layers with sliced bananas, having a bottom layer of cake and the top of bananas. Pour over the chilled custard, cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and two tablespoonsful of powdered sugar. Flavor with lemon extract and heap apoufous on top of the custard.

Cherry Sherbet.—Take one cupful of stoned cherries, two and one-half cupfuls of water, one-half cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of softened gelatin. Heat the cherries, water and sugar, add the gelatin, cool and add the juice of an orange. Freeze to a mush and pack in salt and ice. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Pineapple Rice.—Cook one-half cupful of rice in two quarts of boiling salted water until tender, but unbroken. Drain, blanch with cold water. Cut two cupfuls of sliced pineapple into small pieces. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff. Fold the cream and pineapple into the rice. Serve in sherbet cups with bits of cherries for a garnish or fresh, sugared strawberries.

Plain boiled rice to which a little pineapple juice and gelatin has been added and the rice molded, makes a delightful dessert with a crushed strawberry sauce.

"DEAD" MINER ON WAY TO U. S. TO EXPLAIN EXPLOSION

Wife And Sister Collected Insurance On His Death; Claims Innocence in Blast

Pikeville, Ky.—On a steamship on the Atlantic bound for the United States, there is a man who authorities here are depending on to divulge details of an alleged insurance conspiracy with an $80,000 stake, which cost the lives of two coal miners January 17, last, in the Aurora Coal Company's mine near Matewau, W. Va.

This man, W. H. Turner, former superintendent of the mine, and Henry Wilson, of Louisville, were identified at the time as the dead miners, killed in an explosion, Turner by clothing and Wilson by a deformed foot. But, it has developed from letters from Hamburg, Germany, signed by Turner, that one victim is as yet unidentified.

The letters from Hamburg were given to Sheriff J. M. Johnson recently and led him to arrest Joe Jack, formerly an electrician at the mine, but now a hotel keeper at Williamson, W. Va., as an alleged accomplice in the insurance scheme.

A few days before the two miners were killed by a reported premature discharge of dynamite, Turner had his life insured for $80,000. Twenty thousand of it was made payable to his wife with the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company underwriting his life, and the remainder, $60,000, made out to his sister, who was formerly Mrs. Little May Griffith.

The sister, according to Sheriff Johnson, has collected $80,000, and Mrs. Turner, he says, is in Trenton, N. J., living on the $20,000 she received.

In the Hamburg letters, Turner has written that he had no part in the mine tragedy.

Newport Jailer Charged With Assisting Prisoner's Escape

Newport.—John P. Nagel, city jailer of Newport, was indicted by the Campbell county grand jury on a charge of "having permitted a prisoner to escape from the Newport jail" and because "the jail is an unsatisfactory and unsanitary condition, due to the lax enforcement of rules and regulations for cleanliness among the prisoners." The indictment resulted from the recent escape of William Devers, Newport, a few days prisoner.

The best thing about a smile is the thought that calls it into being.

In many towns they wake up to the value of useful people just about the time these folks decide to move somewhere else.

It looks as if the anthracite miners were going to celebrate Fire Prevention week, by declining to dig any fuel out of which fires can be made.

CREDITORS PAYING THE BILL
England, France and Germany have sent many prominent men to the United States to persuade us to alter our tariff laws so their goods could come in at lower prices. This argument has been advanced as necessary to enable them to pay their war debt.
Some of the most astute financiers of this country, after considering the question from all view points have advocated the principle of cancelling the debts rather than lower the tariffs or run the risk of being compelled to meet foreign competition on our own soil.
Great Britain solved her end of the trouble by making us pay her debt on the increased price of rubber. Germany threatens to invade this country with new dyes, new chemical products, and manufactured goods, just as she is involving India, Persia, and Great Britain's eastern markets. France, though with the smallest number of unemployed of any nation in the world, is not so fortunate. These nations propose to make us pay their debts indirectly—and there seems to be no way out of it.
Our costs of living steadily mount, due perhaps in some instances to tariff and in others to trusts and combinations controlling prices. But the fact remains that we are paying just the same.

JOINING SOMETHING
About now many householders and housewives, looking ahead to the long winter evenings, conclude that it is going to get a little dull sitting around the old reliable parlor lamp until next May. They think they would better join up with some organization that will create a little variety.
This desertion of the home circle is looked at with alarm by many philosophers. In many families, the home has become a kind of an eating and sleeping joint in which people spend so little time that they could hardly tell anyone how it looks. But in our fear of such wandering habits we need not go to the opposite extreme, and refuse to go out because we have to change those soft slippers that they gave us for our last birthday.
People need to belong to a few good organizations. It takes social and intellectual contacts to kindle the sparks of thought and action.
Many automobile drivers who are very indifferent about having their brakes in order, will see to it that the horn is kept in good condition.
You can't have a good time and keep it too.

To build and maintain a balance large enough to pay your checks at all times, and leave a margin upon which your bank can make a reasonable profit is a long step towards building financial character.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Maysville—A brake beam on a C. & O. freight train broke four miles west of here. The loose beam struck a frog causing five empty coal cars to be overturned on the main line, holding up passenger trains for five hours.

Leitchfield, Ky.—Coolidge, the 8-month-old son of Albert Toms, of near Caneyville, was burned seriously upon the face and hands when he fell on a open fireplace at his home here. It is feared the baby may have breathed the flame.

Columbia—In a number of places in Columbia and Adams counties, southwest of here, apple trees are blossoming again while the apple from the first bloom are ripening. Old bean vines that were thought to be dead have been sprouted out and are blossoming again.

Saltsville, Ky.—Charles Collingsworth was shot and wounded in the stomach by Louis Conley, a neighbor in a quarrel near their homes, two miles south of here on the Barnhart Fork. Collingsworth was brought to Saltsville for treatment. Conley is under arrest.

Midway, Ky.—A separation since early childhood of a son from his father will end soon when Emory Jefferson, of Midway, will visit his father, Joseph A. Jefferson, at his home in Albion, Robertson county, about fifty miles from here. The son, now 50 years old, saw his father last in 1884.

Elkton—George P. Street, cashier of the Bank of Elkton, suffered a painful injury to his hip and shoulder when he slipped on the bank door and fell. No bones were broken in his body, but since he is of advanced age, the bruises are causing him much pain and are keeping him confined to his room.

Frankfort—Eighty-three arrests and sixty-two convictions for violations of the game and fish laws were reported by the game commission for the months of August and September. Warden in sixteen of the eighteen districts reported arrests with confiscation of twenty-two pieces of contraband and fines totaling $850.

Bowling Green—Law enforcement, sex education, recreation and medical attention will reduce America's youth of the ravages of social diseases. This was the message of Mrs. Anna K. Potts of Carlisle, Ky., head of the department of social morality of the Kentucky Women's Christian Temperance Union, before the State convention.

Louisville—The trial of Elby Spillman, 18 years old, of Twin Branch, ten miles from here, for the murder of Will Burchett, 24, on July 19, during a quarrel resulting from ill feeling between the two men, ended here in a deadlock. Spillman who has been held in jail since the fray, will be retried at the next meeting of the Lawrence County Court.

Paducah—On order of removal from the federal court authorities at Louisville, Mrs. Leona Guthright, 30, wife of Thomas Guthright, Evansville, convict, will be taken to Toledo, Ohio, in custody of Deputy United States Marshal Ollie Barnett, to face a federal whiskey charge. A warrant from Indianapolis has also served recently against Mrs. Guthright, preferring a charge of stealing an automobile.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—An 8-year-old girl was almost instantly killed, her father and two other adults were seriously injured and five other young children were hurt when an automobile in which they were riding skidded off the road and crashed into a stone fence on the Harrodsburg Pike, about a mile north of Danville. The accident resulted from an attempt to avoid a collision with another car.

Leitchfield—Si Mudd, 20, was accidentally killed while hunting five miles from here, near a quarry, while riding alone. With a companion he had gone squirrel shooting and had climbed into a tree to dislodge a squirrel one of them had shot. As he descended, Mudd stepped on a pole which upset the gun, causing it to discharge. Contents of one cartridge went through the victim's head. He died instantly.

Harlan, Ky.—The advance guard of winter invaded Harlan recently heralded by high winds, sleety drizzle and low temperature. Adding to the general wintry appearance numerous flocks of wild geese lured by the city lights, circled over town almost touching the roofs. A few became so bewildered they alighted in the streets and floundered beneath the lights until dawn cleared their vision and allowed them to resume their southward flight.

Hartsville, Ky.—Three Louisville women were injured when an automobile in which they were riding struck a northbound L. & N. passenger train near the station here. Their hurts are not dangerous.

Pikeville, Ky.—Two men have been indicted for murder by the Pike county grand jury in the section story and Columbus Williams are accused of the murder of the victim's son and Piuson Bennett, of the murder of Dick Atkins, and George Brown, of the murder of Mrs. Ida Lee.

KENTUCKY DOPE QUEEN AND NARCOTICS SEIZED

Mrs. Clara Kaiser, of Louisville, Caught With $80,000 in Dope By Federal Agents

Louisville—Narcotics worth between $75,000 and $80,000 at peddler's prices, were seized by five federal agents in a garage in an alley in the rear of South Sixth street, when a woman they had been trailing a year drove her sedan in the garage.

Hidden in that vicinity since early the day before, awaiting her, the agents, accompanied by under-cover men, rushed into the garage with the automobile and arrested the woman.

Mrs. Clara Kaiser, 35 years old, 1319 East Washington street, as she stepped from her car and started toward a box.

Agents got to it first and lifted a valise. Inside the valise they found the narcotics, which constituted one of the largest "hauls" ever made in Louisville.

The narcotics, of two kinds, were packed in one-piece boxes. Several hypodermic needles also were found.

Mrs. Kaiser stood by, composed while the agents checked over the fortune in "dope." "You outsmarted me," she told the agents. "A month later and you wouldn't have caught me. My husband would have been out of Adams by then."

Her husband, Walter Kaiser, is serving eighteen months in the Federal penitentiary on a narcotic charge. The agents who arrested his wife said he there.

The ill-timed truth we might have kept—The system craves and needs at this season, fresh fruits and vegetables are invaluable.

Banana Dessert—Heat a pint of milk in a double boiler until scalding hot. Add two tablespoons of cornstarch which has been mixed with one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one-third of a cupful of sugar, then add one-fourth of a cupful of cream. Cook thirty minutes, stirring occasionally.

Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, return to the boiler and stir, cooking until smooth and thick, using care not to over cook and curdle the eggs. Add a teaspoonful of orange extract and put in a cool place.

Cut sponge cake into slices and arrange in a glass dish in layers with sliced bananas, having a bottom layer of cake and the top of bananas. Pour over the chilled custard, cover with a meringue, using the egg whites and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Flavor with lemon extract and heap spoonfuls on top of the custard.

Cherry Sherbet—Take one cupful of stoned cherries, two and one-half cups of water, one-half cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of soft-ened gelatin. Heat the cherries, water and sugar, add the gelatin, cool and add the juice of an orange. Freeze to a mush and pack in salt and ice. Serve in sherbet glasses.

Pineapple Rice—Cook one-half cupful of rice in two quarts of boiling salted water until tender, but unbroken. Drain, blanch with cold water. Cut two cupfuls of sliced pineapple into small pieces. Beat one cupful of heavy cream until stiff. Fold the cream and pineapple into the rice. Serve in sherbet cups with bits of cherries for a garnish or fresh, sugared strawberries.

Plain boiled rice to which a little pineapple juice and gelatin has been added and the rice molded, makes a delightful dessert with a crushed strawberry sauce.

"DEAD" MINER ON WAY TO U. S. TO EXPLAIN EXPLOSION

Wife And Sister Collected Insurance On His Death; Claims Innocence in Blast

Pikeville, Ky.—On a steamship on the Atlantic bound for the United States, there is a man who authorities here are depending on to divulge details of an alleged insurance conspiracy with an $80,000 stake, which cost the lives of two coal miners January 17, last, in the Auburn Coal Company's mine near Matewan, W. Va.

This man, W. H. Turner, former superintendent of the mine, and Henry Wilson, of Louisville, Ky., were identified at the time as the dead miners, killed in an explosion, Turner by clothing and Wilson by a deformed foot. But, it has developed from letters from Hamburg, Germany, signed by Turner, that one victim is as yet unidentified.

The letters from Hamburg were given to Sheriff J. M. Johnson recently and led him to arrest Joe Jack, formerly an electrician at the mine, but now a hotel keeper at Williamson, W. Va., as an alleged accomplice in the insurance scheme.

A few days before the two miners were killed by a reported premature discharge of dynamite, Turner had his life insured for $80,000. Twenty thousand of it was made payable to his wife with the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company underwriting his life, and the remainder, $60,000, made out to his sister, who was formerly Mrs. Mattie May Griffith.

The sister, according to Sheriff Johnson, has collected $80,000, and Mrs. Turner, he says, is in Trenton, N. J., living on the $20,000 she received.

In the Hamburg letters, Turner has written that he had no part in the mine tragedy.

Newport Jailer Charged With Assisting Prisoner's Escape

Newport—John P. Nagel, city jailer of Newport, was indicted by the Campbell county grand jury on a charge of "having permitted a prisoner to escape from the Newport jail, and because the jail is an unsatisfactory and unsanitary condition, due to the negligence of the jailer."

The indictment resulted from the recent escape of William Deyers, Newport, a Federal prisoner.

The best thing about a smile is the thought that calls it into being.

In many towns they wake up to the value of useful people just about the time these folks decide to move somewhere else.

It looks as if the anthracite miners were going to celebrate Fire Prevention week, by declining to dig any fuel out of which fires can be made.

POOL NOT AFFECTED BY DARK MOVEMENT

Action of Dark Tobacco Growers Will Not Injure Burley

The recent action of the Dark Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association of Western Kentucky in throwing the 1925 leaf crop on the market to be disposed of without any pooling restrictions, will have little or no effect on the Burley Tobacco pool, in the opinion of prominent tobacco growers of Fayette county.

President Charles Land, who presided at the meeting, pointed out that the dark tobacco grown in western Kentucky had never been in competition with the burley; that the bulk of it goes into export trade and that this type of tobacco has always been lower than burley. He also expressed the opinion that the pooling association controlling the crop there had never been as strongly and effectively organized as the burley pooling association and its management had not been as successful, according to reports.

Unless the dark tobacco thrown on the market and sold without the aid of the pool brings a better price than under the old pool arrangements, he thought it could have little or no effect on the burley pool, particularly since the crop of burley is short this year, which would naturally have a tendency to stimulate prices. If, however, the dissolution of the dark tobacco pool forces down the price of dark tobacco, he expressed the opinion that it would have the effect of strengthening the burley pool, for burley growers would not want to see their product depreciated and would for this reason only stick tighter to their own pooling association, in order to stabilize prices of their leaf.

Thomas Goff expressed the opinion that the action of the dark tobacco pooling association in moving the restrictions on the 1925 crop was for the purpose of fighting independent growers and making them realize that the pool was a good thing. T. S. Johnson, Claud Bosworth and other present concurred with President Land that the throwing of the dark tobacco crop on the market to be sold over the breaks would have a tendency to weaken the burley pool.

SHOT-GUN ROBBERY AT HEBRON GARAGE

Stolen Goods Returned to Owner in Singular Manner

Earl Aylor's garage in Hebron was broken into last Wednesday night and a rather unusual "loot" to be taken from a garage was stolen. Mr. Aylor said that he missed nothing except three shot guns.

Deputy Sheriff Snyder was called but no trace could be found of the robber although suspicions were aroused by both Aylor and the officer. Snyder returned to Burlington, but the next day a man appeared at the garage and informed Mr. Aylor that he thought he knew who had the shot guns, and could take him to the place. They drove to a point in Kenton county where the stolen "shootin' irons" in perfect condition were handed to Mr. Aylor out of a touring car. How's that for a novelty!

POST YOUR FARMS

Post your farm Mr. Farmer. It will not be many days before the hunters will be afield. It may save you many dollars. Send your name to the Recorder. Your name will be added to the posted list for fifty cents.

BURNING FIRE

Year's loss to tobacco growers

A large barn belonging to Mrs. Ada Bachelor, located on what is known as the Beemon farm about three miles south of Burlington, was destroyed by fire about 6:30 o'clock last Thursday evening, with all its contents, consisting of twelve tons of hay, 2500 sticks of tobacco and all the farming implements. The contents belonged to Grover Setters on which there was no insurance. The building was insured in the Boone County Farmers Mutual Insurance Co. The loss to Mr. Setters is quite heavy as it was all of his year's work. Just what caused the blaze is a mystery as Mr. Setters and Harry Rouse had just left the barn. Mr. Setters who had just finished milking and had gone to the house and emptied the milk and when he looked back flames were bursting from the roof. The neighbors for miles around responded to the alarm, but by the time they reached the scene, the fire was beyond control. This is the second barn that burned on that farm in the last few years.

ELSMERE WOMAN ENDS LIFE WITH POISON

Mrs. Emma Ryan, aged 43 years, beloved wife of Frank Ryan of Elsmere, Ky., drank a glass of poison at her home last Sunday afternoon in the presence of two neighbor women who had called. Dr. McCollum of Erlanger rushed to the assistance of the stricken woman but his efforts were of no avail and she died within a short time. Acting Coroner Glore of Kenton county pronounced the death suicide, due to drinking poison while temporarily insane. Mrs. Ryan had an operation performed 17 years ago for removal of goitre and since that time had been in poor health which affected her mind at intervals.

Funeral services were held from the late residence with requiem high mass by Rev. Poole of a Roman Catholic church at 9:00 a. m., Wednesday interment being in nearby cemetery. Mrs. Ryan is survived by her husband and six children. Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

GRANT COUNTY JURY ACTS RIGHT AT HOME

Bootlegger Is Said to Have Plied Trade 100 Feet From Grand Jury

The recent Grant county grand jury evidently intends to supplant the ancient maxim "Charity Begins at Home" with a new one "Law Enforcement Begins at Home." Our authority is the following clipping from the last issue of the Grant County News:

Following information given the grand jury by Bob Clark, cook for the hotel construction crew here, search was made of the premises of C. P. Hensley, blacksmith and garage man, at the foot of Paris street, last Thursday.

About a gallon of moonshine whiskey was found by the Sheriff and Hensley was placed under arrest. The grand jury returned a true bill against Hensley and he was later released on bond.

Clark was arrested by the town marshal charged with being drunk. He was fined $57.50 and taken before the grand jury and told that unless he told where he secured his whiskey he would be placed in jail. Clark claimed to have bought the whiskey from Hensley, ensued the search of Hensley's premises and his arrest.

Hensley's place of business is located just across the street from the court house square and the grand jury was in session about a hundred feet away, while Judge Gaines was dealing out law and justice in the court room down stairs.

LEE COUNTY NOMINEES RULED OUT OF CONTEST

Disqualified For Failure To File Certificates In Time

Seven Democratic nominees for county offices in Lee county, Kentucky failed to file their certificates for nomination 45 days before the November election, and as a consequence, the county clerk would not place their names on the regular ballot, according to the ruling of the Attorney General.

The Democratic county committee at once called a session and proceeded to select names to fill their places. They nominated G. A. Gabbard for county Judge; Mrs. T. T. Brandenburg for sheriff; Rowland Estes, a brother of Shelby Estes, for county clerk, and the wives of the magisterial nominees for magistrates.

Presumably on account of the relationship to the deposed candidates, the incumbent county clerk, G. T. Smith, refused to place the names of the committee selections on the ballot. The committee applied for a mandatory injunction to compel him to do so but Judge Sam Hurst refused it. Chief Justice Clark then took the motion under consideration.

Boone county's nominees were all in ample time with the filing of their certificates. The primary was held on the 1st of August and the certificates of the various nominees were all filed on the 4th of that month.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 24.—Word has been received by the Alumni Secretary of Georgetown College that all graduates and former students of the college living in Chicago will meet with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Williams at their home, 7380 Cornell Avenue, on the night of November 3, to observe Georgetown Night in America. The College has about 40 alumni living in Chicago.

The radio programs to be broadcast from WLW in Cincinnati, and from WHAS in Louisville, on the night of November 3, are doing much to create a lively interest in Georgetown Night in America. The Alumni Secretary stated today. The Secretary has arranged with these two radio stations to broadcast a Georgetown program on this night, when an effort will be made to have every graduate and former student of the College "get-together" for peppy meetings. This is the first time that such an occasion has been observed by graduates of the school.

Word has already been received by the College from many points in the United States indicating that this night will be generally observed as in Chicago. The radio programs are helping to get the crowd together and will add much to the hundreds of meetings that will take place on that night.

SAMUEL HOUSTON, DEAD

After Eighty Years Samuel Houston Passes to The Great Beyond

Samuel Houston, the village blacksmith at Bullittville and Idlewild for a half century, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Bales, of Cleveland, Ohio, Monday, October 12th, 1925, from the infirmities incident to old age. He was 80 years and three weeks old at the time of his death. Mr. Houston was born on the ocean while his parents were on a steamer coming to America from Ireland. The remains were brought to the cemetery at Bullittville on Wednesday, October 14, 1925, and laid to rest by the side of his wife who preceded him 18 years ago. He is survived by four children, two sons, James, of Idlewild, Harmon, of Hooven, Ohio, two daughters, Mrs. Nannie Barnes, of Harrison, Ohio and Mrs. Elizabeth Bales, of Cleveland, Ohio. Sam Houston was in the blacksmith business at Bullittville about thirty-five years and thirteen years ago moved to Idlewild, where he had operated a shop with his son James until a few weeks before his death. He has many friends in the county who were grieved to hear of his passing away.

HAROLD BEEMON WILL WIN FOOTBALL LETTER

Boone County Boy to be Honored at Wittenberg College

Springfield, Ohio, Oct. 29.—Harold Beemon of Florence, Ky., a sophomore at Wittenberg College here, will make his foot ball letter this fall. This is the prediction of friends who saw him play his first full game with Wittenberg against St. Xavier at Cincinnati October 17, game ending 7-7.

Wittenberg's line weighing 172 pounds on the average faced a team that weighed 192 pounds in all positions, but the line did heroic work against this heavy opponent.

Four times St. Xavier had the ball within the five yard line, and lost it on downs. One time the two teams fought over the one yard line, but the Wittenberg forward wall held, and gained possession of the ball. In the middle of it all, at the important post of right guard, was the big boned lad from charming Kentucky.

He has two more years at Wittenberg, and long life to him afterward!

NATIONAL EDUCATION HAS BEEN PROCLAIMED

County Superintendent Endorses the National Program

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26.—President Coolidge in an official proclamation designating American Education Week, November 16 to 22, sponsored by The American League, declared that there is reason for gratification for the progress already made in education in America. He pointed out, however, that there are large numbers who have not been reached by the blessings of education. He declared that no let up be made in strengthening public sentiment for universal education until provision is made for the full measure of education for every child in the land. After expressing those views the President's proclamation continued:

"Now, therefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do proclaim the week beginning November sixteenth as American Education Week, and I urge that it be observed throughout the U. S. I recommend that the Governors of the several states issue proclamations setting forth the necessity of education to a free people and requesting that American Education Week be approximately celebrated in their respective states. I urge further that local officers, civic, social, and religious organizations, and citizens of every occupation contribute with all their strength to the advance of education and that they make of American Education Week a special season of mutual encouragement in promoting that enlightenment upon which the welfare of the Nation depends."

COUNTY NURSE SECURED

The Boone County Chapter of A. R. C. is pleased to announce that Miss Eunice Willis, R. N. has been secured as County Health Nurse.

Miss Willis, who is a resident of Boone county, last spring completed her three years' nurses course at the Deaconess hospital, Cincinnati with six months affiliation at the General hospital which included work at the Price Hill Sanatorium for Tuberculosis. She also had welfare nursing at the Cincinnati Public Health Dispensary.

With Miss Willis' training and her natural interest in her home people, we look forward to a helpful health program for our county.

A TWOFOLD bid for popular favor was seen by many politicians as the main reason back of the sudden shifts in the War Department. Appointment of Dwight F. Davis as Secretary of War succeeding Weeks was regarded as a shrewd move toward holding the unstable Missouri vote in the Republican column. Handford MacNider, the new assistant secretary, a former commander of the American Legion, is extremely popular with the ex-servicemen. The administration is known to be anxious to enlist the aid of this powerful organization in its difficulties with Colonel William Mitchell. Both Davis and MacNider, coming from middle western states, are regarded as potential elements of strength for President Coolidge's reported plans to again seek the Presidency in 1928.

THE President's air board is likely to recommend changes in the method of handling American aeronautics. Just what they will be is problematical. Many expect a separate Air Corps, similar to the Marine Corps will be the solution hit upon, while others think the Board will urge more generous appropriations and a separate promotion list, with control still vested in the War and Navy Departments. One thing appears certain; Secretary of Commerce Hoover will be finally given complete charge of commercial aviation, with authority to so regulate that rising industry that its force growth will be encouraged.

A MOVEMENT for returning active prohibition enforcement to state and local agencies has been quietly launched in Washington. Although the problem is a ticklish one and few are willing to lead the fight in Congress, the Administration is studying a plan which would effectively return the problem to where it was before the Eighteenth Amendment to the constitution was adopted and the Federal government assumed charge of enforcement. Supporters of the proposal believe that the nation as a whole would be better satisfied with local enforcement.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is casting about for a means of solving the Federal Trade Commission problem which has been one of the sore points of the administration for many years. The majority of the Board have recently adopted a policy of friendliness toward "big business" which is bitterly opposed by the minority who claim trusts and giant mergers inimical to the public interests are being encouraged. Huston Thompson, leader of the minority commissioners has been covertly asked to resign. He is not expected to.

THE NAVY wants a bigger and better ship than the ill-fated Shenandoah. The line of testimony given the court of inquiry now investigating the crash is directed mainly at revealing the experience experts have acquired since the Shenandoah was completed. According to present plans the Navy will go before congress with a plea for funds with which to build a dirigible two or possibly three times the size of the Shenandoah. This type, experts claim, would be better able to resist squalls.

A COALITION of Democrats and Progressive Republicans against the Mellon tax plan appeared a certainty today. Mellon would reduce income taxes of the wealthy and seek complete payment of the war debt within the next 25 years. The insurgents want payment deferred for 62 years; the average time allowed foreign debtor nations. They also will insist that single men be exempted up to $3,000, and married men $5,000. This proposal is opposed by Mellon.

A BRAND new experiment in rearing children is now under way in the national capital. Mrs. Mable Walker Wilbur, assistant attorney general, has adopted a two-year-old girl. With the aid of two friends one a doctor and the other an expert in home economics, the foe of the wets propose to put her views on child development into practice. Mrs. Wilbur believes that a child of normal parents can reach a high level of intelligence by proper training. None of the three women have children of their own.

MINDING YOUR OWN

Minding one's own business is a Golden Rule. It is a rule that is not only a rule of conduct, but a rule of life. It is a rule that is not only a rule of conduct, but a rule of life. It is a rule that is not only a rule of conduct, but a rule of life.

Much has been said as to what constitutes a "good citizen," but can a man who simply mind his own business be a good citizen? Will he not become selfish, neglectful of what we call social service or his debt to the community, indifferent to law violations, graft and crime?

Reforms in politics or religion, in municipal and social service are necessary only because of the activities of some business-men who are not minding their own business as they should. To be sure the Golden Rule is not a roving commission to busy bodies to regulate the life of his neighbor nor is it a license to licentiousness.

It may be true that private businesses of the world offer greatest opportunity for social service, but it is also true that private businesses are based on purely selfish motives. The law of the business life of the world is moved and molded by the law of competition—the survival of the fittest. Men of this class contend that they are obeying the Golden Rule by minding their own business regardless of results.

The philosophy of life teaches us that nothing exists without reason. Reformers and uplifters would not be if there were no reason for them. Nothing is complete or perfect and vision cannot be muddled.

WOMEN'S CAREERS

Smith college is to have an institute to study how women can combine their home duties with the professional or intellectual activities that they may desire. This is a problem that bothers many women, who would like to use their talents in some form of work outside the home after marriage. They may desire simply to earn money, or they may have abilities that they dislike to restrict out for want of use.

Providing that a woman has a day and keeping a house clean take a lot of a woman's time. If there are children to care for, her ability to do outside work may disappear altogether. Yet the industrial or business training that she has will go to waste if it continues unused.

It is a fine thing for a married woman to keep up some of the activities by which she formerly earned money. But if this is done to neglect the training of her children and her husband is not cared for, any money she earns that way is not worth what it costs.

WINTER PLANS FOR PROGRESS

The summer is the time when the people of a country cultivate flowers, etc., and do the various things that will improve the physical attractiveness of their community.

This spirit of improvement should show itself in the winter also. Now is a good time to study economic attractiveness of their community.

This spirit of improvement should show itself in the winter also. Now is a good time to study economic improvement and better business methods. It is time for the retail stores to ask whether they could not extend their trade by more extensive advertising. Improved methods for marketing farm products can well be studied now and plans made for 1926. Now is a good time also to work for new enterprises.

THE BREAD TRUST

Many thousands of small bageries see their very existence threatened by the power of the mighty $400,000,000 bread trust. If it follows Standard Oil methods it will depress prices in one locality at a time until its small competitors are wiped out. Former Senator LaFollette secured the adoption last year of a resolution directing a full investigation into the scope and methods of the baking combination. For some reason the investigation was not made, or its results were not given to the public. Now, however, the Federal Trade Commission has formally charged the Continental Baking Corporation, one of the principal concerns involved in the merger, with violation of the Clayton anti-trust law, and the matter may come up in Congress.

SELF IMPROVEMENT

There ought to be a considerable group in a good country town like Burlington which should take hold each winter for some form of self improvement. A few classes for literary, scientific, or technical study should be formed. People can also carry on such lines of work independently, and many ought to be doing this on special lines of work in which they are interested.

It promotes interest and industrious work if a group of people can study the same thing. We have in our own immediate neighborhood a number of people well qualified to take the lead in various forms of study. Now is the time to ask them to direct such classes, and to invite all who desire self improvement to join such groups.

IOWA FARMERS ARE RESTLESS.
Acting through the Farm Bureau Federation with its 100,000 members. Iowa farmers are critical of the agricultural program of the administration at Washington.
Charles E. Hearst, president of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, and chairman of the legislative committee of the national organization, at the request of President Coolidge, conferred with Senator Cummins on conditions. Mr. Hearst says that "Senator Cummins was informed specifically we were determined on the point that the Republican party keep its pledges to the farmers of the middle west. The Republican party said it would leave no stone unturned to give agriculture the help it needs. We insist that the Republican party keep its promise. All it has done thus far is to give us Secretary Jardine. The party leaders have failed to act upon our request for an export corporation, which is designed to place agriculture squarely under our Nation's protective system."
"They have failed to pay heed to the midwestern farmer who has given the question searching study and consideration and is much more competent to offer plans for the real solution of this problem than those who are financially concerned with the opposite angle to it."

Science looks into the wash tub and discovers the secret of preserving the beauty of delicate fabrics
One of the problems that every housewife faces has been solved in the chemical laboratory. And now you can easily avoid the disappointment of seeing your loveliest linens and daintiest garments gradually turn gray after they have been washed several times.
Here's what an unprejudiced chemist has to say:—
"Seum," the substance which rises to the top of the rinse water, is formed by the combination of lime in hard water with the stearic acid of the soap. If this seum is not removed from the clothes through rinsing, it is deposited in the fibres of the clothes, giving the garments an ugly gray color as well as making them harsh to the touch.
"Two carefully conducted tests which I made recently in the laboratory of Case School of Applied Science, proved that mechanical rinsing is more thorough than hand rinsing, thus hand rinsing mechanically removes a greater amount of 'seum' than other methods. These same tests also proved that the whirling wringer which is used in the Laun-Dry-Ette is of material assistance in removing 'seum.'"
—Dr. Robert E. Smith, Director, Division of Chemistry, Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, Ohio.
Come in and let us demonstrate the thorough scaling rinsing which you can use so easily in the Laun-Dry-Ette.

The Mystery Road

Synopsis

BOOK ONE—CHAPTER I.—From a brutal stepfather, an unhappy home, and a proposed husband she detests, Myrtle, a young French girl, stands on a country road on the verge of desperation.

CHAPTER II.—Halted by an exploded tire, two young Englishmen, Lord Dombey and Christopher Bent, are attracted by the girl's distressed appearance. She begs them to take her away from her misery. In a spirit of adventure they do so, coming to her to Monte Carlo and leaving her with friends. Myrtle speaks English, her mother having been an educated woman.

CHAPTER III.—Gerald sees a beautiful young woman in the gambling rooms, and is fascinated, but can only learn that she is called Pauline de Zabin, and is with her aunt, Ben. He is unable to secure an introduction to Christopher and Gerald decide Myrtle shall not go back to her home. Lady Mary, Gerald's sister, secretly in love with Christopher, disapproves of the young man's guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER IV.—Gerald and Christopher arrange for a mutual guardianship of Myrtle.

CHAPTER V.—Lord Dombey makes the acquaintance of Pauline. He is puzzled by the air of mystery and condescension surrounding her.

CHAPTER VI.—Myrtle falls desperately in love with Gerald, but is a natural flirt in one's interest in the girl, while Christopher Bent really loves her and would marry her.

CHAPTER VII.—A mysterious Russian, Zabin, who has a large sum of money, tells Gerald that he knows the De Poniers, but can get no information from them.

CHAPTER VIII.—Christopher makes little progress in his courtship of Myrtle, who is now "infatuated with Lord Dombey's son." On the other hand, she really cares little for her, his interest being all in Pauline.

CHAPTER IX.—Gerald tells Pauline of Zabin's gambling habits, and she is interested, and asks him to find the Russian and bring him to her and her aunt. Gerald finds Zabin, but she has lost all he had won and practically everything else he had. He takes her to the ladies Zabin kills himself.

CHAPTER X.—It is learned that Zabin was the steward of Madame de Poniers, and having told her of the $500,000 francs, all the money she and her niece possessed. The two women leave Monte Carlo and return to London. Gerald is unable to trace Zabin. He begins to wonder when he meets Myrtle, to Christopher's dejection.

CHAPTER XI.—Gerald is giving a convivial party to a few acquaintances of the gay world. Myrtle is present to allow her to attend. The company is not suitable for a young girl, and she refuses.

CHAPTER XII.—Lady Mary offers to take Myrtle to England with her and find employment. Christopher accepts the offer gladly. Myrtle, however, is not to go. At his conclusion, Christopher takes her away when she would have kept her in his rooms. Myrtle goes to England with Lady Mary.

Chapter IV

Gerald, worn out with long and comfortable travel, pulled the long, iron bell outside the closed door of Elsa Francks' house in Soke, with a sense of relief that the first part of his quest was accomplished. The street was one which formerly had been possessed of some pretensions. The houses were tall, solidly built, and had apparently been occupied by a wealthy class of merchants. They were now mostly let out in tenements. Exactly opposite where Gerald stood waiting, man and woman—strange-looking creatures, most of them—were continually passing in and out of a broad entrance, from which the gates had been done away with altogether, with sacks or baskets of partly finished boots, and the sound of rattle hammering seemed to denote a factory devoid of machinery. In the center of the road were some rusty rails, around which some grass was growing—the remains of an electric car service. Most of the houses seemed empty or overfull—locked and battered, with broken window frames and closed shutters, or converted into tenement houses. A dark-clad, crooked woman, dressed apparently in nothing but a petticoat and shawl, thrust out her head. Gerald handed her a card, on which, through the friendly offices of the hotel porter, was inscribed his desire to see Madame Francks. The woman turned it over, looked Gerald up and down with wide-mouthed astonishment, and finally motioned him to enter. As soon as he had done so and stepped into the little cobbled courtyard, she drew the bolt and muttered something which he understood as an invitation to follow her. She pushed open a heavy door and, on the right, and they ascended a gloomy staircase. The atmosphere was close, almost stifling. There seemed to be no window, or any means of giving light or ventilation. Arrived on the first floor, she threw open the door of a room and departed, with a wholly incomprehensible grunt. Outside, she began to shout, apparently through the door of another apartment. There was a vigorous duet, the other voice shriller but scarcely more pleasant. Then there was silence, followed by the sound of some one moving about in the adjoining room. Gerald took a seat upon a couch, upholstered in stained purple velvet, over which several soiled coverings of imitation lace had been thrown. The room itself was large and lofty, but scantily furnished. There was a large uncarpeted stove in one corner, which, notwithstanding the heat of the day, already exuded fumes of burning coke. The polished floor was innocent of any rug or carpet, and covered with stains and fragments of cigarettes and cigars. There was a piano, littered with soiled and torn copies of music. In a distant corner, a small gramophone with black enamel mouthpiece, blattered by the continual heat of the room. The walls were hung with the faded remains of some former attempt at decoration. The windows were covered with a sort of wire netting, which Gerald rose to his feet and bowed. He kept out alike light and air. There was everywhere an odor of stale tobacco smoke, mingled with a strange smell of cheap incense or crude perfume of some sort. Gerald, exceedingly sensitive to surroundings, felt a momentary faintness as he sat and waited for the woman whom he had come to visit. He began to fidget in his place. He walked up and down. He was even meditating an attack upon one of the window fastenings, when he was aware of the sound of heavy footsteps outside. The door was opened. A woman entered and came toward him with an inquiring expression upon her face.

It seemed to Gerald that the newcomer alone was needed to complete the squalor of his surroundings. She was a big woman, coarsely built, and with indications of obesity. She wore a dress of brown velvet, trimmed with soiled white fur and fastened round her waist with a girde. Her hair was a bright yellow, abundant but badly arranged. It lay in loose coils upon the top of her head, fastened with some flamboyant ornament. Her features were not ill-shaped, but were partly concealed under a thick coating of powder. She had eyes of a peculiarly light blue shade, large and saucer-like when she first entered the room, but with a habit of narrowing at intervals. She spoke in English, with a strong German accent.

"You wish to see me, sir? I am Elsa Francks."

Gerald rose to his feet and bowed. "Madame," he said, "I have found my way here under the name of Harmon P. Cross. I have told every one that I am an American, looking for an opportunity to invest money. That story is not true. It is my wish, if you will allow me, to be perfectly candid with you."

"You can sit down," she invited, regarding Gerald with suspicion not unmingled with favor. "I will hear what you have to say."

She threw herself in a lump at the far end of the sofa, added to the battered horsehair easy-chair. "Bring that to the side of me," she continued. "I do not hear very well and it is some time since I listened to English. Tell me what you want?"

"I have a further confession to make," Gerald began. "I am an Englishman."

"There are Englishmen and Englishmen," she said indignantly. "Some are different from others. You are not like those whom our officers have had to correct in the streets and cafes of Berlin. Now what is your business, please?"

"It is very difficult to state," Gerald admitted frankly, "and I am only emboldened to approach you because in these difficult times, and in Russia especially, one needs money. If you will do me a service, I can find you a great deal of money."

Gerald's method had at any rate succeeded in exciting the interest of the woman he had come to visit. Her beaming lips were parted; her pale eyes were filled with the light of curiosity.

"There is not much we would not do for money, nowadays, over here," she declared, laughing heartily. "You are a very interesting man. Go on."

"Major Krossneys is a friend of yours," Gerald said.

"Ho, ho!" the woman laughed. "So you dabble in politics, eh? Never mind, Krossneys is my friend. What of it?"

"He is the governor of the fortress

"One hundred and thirty-seven."

Elsa Francks replied promptly. "I see some of them exercising when I am at the fortress. What he keeps them alive for, I cannot imagine. They crawl about the yard like lice. What about these prisoners?"

Gerald moved his chair a little nearer. The woman smiled at him graciously. "If one of them should escape," he remarked significantly, "there would be a great deal of money."

"I do not bargain," Gerald replied. "I know very well that the escape of a prisoner is a serious thing. I have at my disposal the sum of ten thousand pounds."

The woman started so that she nearly rolled off the sofa. She sat suddenly upright. She was too stupefied for emotion. "Ten thousand pounds?" she almost shrieked. "Why, it is two million roubles! Ivan Krossneys would sell you his whole batch of prisoners for that and throw the fortress in! Why, if it rested with me, I went on, 'you could have Krossneys's as well for a quarter of that. Talk sense, please. There is not an Englishman there of that I am certain.'"

"The prisoner whose liberty I desire to buy," Gerald continued, "is a Russian. I do not know under what name he passes, but his number is twenty-nine."

Elsa Francks rose to her feet, opened the door and shouted to her maid in Russian. Then she took up a battered telephone instrument.

"I will speak with the major," she said. "I am the only civilian in the town with a telephone. It is a great favor. You can wait whilst I speak with him."

There was a good deal of delay before she was connected, and a further delay before the person with whom she desired to speak arrived. In time, however, the conversation was finished, apparently to her satisfaction. She set down the instrument.

"The governor is on his way down," she announced triumphantly. "Come, we will see to this little affair quickly. You can remain."

The maid entered the room, carrying a tray on which were bottles of beer and glasses. The woman eyed them with satisfaction. "You are not Russian," she said, "so I do not offer you the samovar. Beer every one drinks—the English especially. It is so, is it not?"

"That is so," Gerald admitted. "I shall drink to your good health, madame."

"You may call me Elsa," she invited graciously, coming over to his side with a glass in her hand. "We will drink to the success of our venture. Gerald accepted the glass and exchanged courteous amenities with his hostess. She eyed him with growing favor.

"It is a pity that you are not staying longer," she observed. "We might be close friends. Who knows?"

"In that case," Gerald replied gallantly, "I might have to quarrel with Major Krossneys, and that would do me no good."

She snapped her pretty fingers. A man who had ten thousand pounds to dispose of! What was Krossneys? "Do you think," she scoffed, "that I shall stay here with him if I can get hold of half that sum you spoke of?"

Not if I shall choose a different companion. I shall go to Monte Carlo. I shall never enter this accursed country again. Even to think of leaving it makes me giddy with happiness. It will be you who will be my deliverer. Let us drink again together."

"Perhaps," Gerald suggested, "the governor will not give up his prisoner."

Her exclamation of contempt was almost a shout. His very idea, while she scouted it as ridiculous, seemed to infuriate her.

"Give him up? Of course he will give him up!" she declared. "If he refused—why, I would take him by the beard—I would kill him!"

Her eyes were lit with cruelty. The snarl of an animal or prey crested her lips. Then she burst into a fit of laughter.

"Why do I make myself furious?" she exclaimed. "Why, Ivan would sell every one of his hundred and thirty-seven prisoners for a tenth part of the money you speak of. Come, let me hear of your animal or prey crested her lips. Then she burst into a fit of laughter.

"What about his excellency the governor?" Gerald asked.

The woman made a little grimace. "You are perhaps right," she acquiesced. "One must wait—wait until everything is arranged. After that I shall snap my fingers at Ivan. He wears me, and he is an old man. Will you take me out of the country, my friend? We might go to Poland—I have friends at Warsaw."

There were heavy steps outside. She held up her hand as though to warn him.

"It is the governor," she announced. "It is Ivan Krossneys who arrives. Mind, he is very jealous. Be careful."

Gerald, with all his nerves on edge, was yet able to indulge for a moment in a grim smile. The door was opened. The maid poked her head in and muttered something unintelligible. Close behind her entered the governor of the fortress.

The governor was a large, corpulent, untidy-looking man in an ill-fitting uniform, with coarse features and a straggling beard. He clicked his heels together and made some pretense at a military salute, as Elsa introduced her visitor.

Gerald introduced a word or two with him in Russian, and then continued in French, which she spoke apparently with less ease than English.

"He is the governor of the fortress

"This gentleman," she declared, "has a great affair of business to discuss with you. He was sent here by a friend of mine whose name I may not give. He is an Englishman pretending to be an American, but that makes for little about the start like this. A great sum of money for a certain purpose."

Into the governor's eyes flashed for a moment some reflection of the cupid which had gleamed in the woman's. Money was scarce in Russia; pay was small and irregular in coming. The thought of money whetted his interest.

"Let me hear what this gentleman has to say," he cried.

"I have come with a very bold proposition," Gerald began. "But it is one which I hope you will consider carefully. You have many prisoners in your fortress who are detained largely through misfortune. There are many there whose offenses are trivial, who will probably be released shortly in any case, and who might just as well be free as remain a charge upon the government."

"You seem to know a great deal about my prisoners," the governor remarked graciously. "Many of them are criminals of the worst order."

"It is not one of these whom I wish to discuss with you," Gerald assured him. "It happens that you have a young man there who is not of the criminal class at all. He has very wealthy friends."

"He?" the governor exclaimed. "How wealthy?"

The woman broke into the conversation. She gripped her friend by the arm.

"Ivan," she cried. "It is incredible! Do you know the sum which monsieur speaks of? It takes one's breath away! He speaks of ten thousand pounds! It is two million roubles! What do you think of that?"

"G—d!" Krossneys uttered. "A prisoner of yours," Gerald repeated. "I will be quite frank with you, sir. I speak, I know, to a man of honor, but I will ask you to remember that this young man is unconvicted of any crime, and that the government by whom he was sent to you is tottering. It is a bribe which I am offering you. It is the price of an act of justice. The money is to be paid in cash."

Krossneys was showing now as much agitation as the woman had displayed. Mingled with his emotion, however, was a fear, signs of which were once manifested in the anxiety which distorted his face, the eagerness of his demand.

"The number?" he cried. "Tell me the name or the number of the prisoner you desire?"

"Number twenty-nine," Gerald replied.

The governor struck the table with his clenched fist, so that the glasses rattled.

"A million devils curse and blast you both!" he shouted.

He snatched a stool which was close at hand across the room. Then he flung himself into an easy-chair and sat there with his arms crossed, glaring at Elsa. The woman gazed at him as though he had suddenly gone mad.

"Are you out of your senses, Ivan?" she asked. "He is not a prisoner or thirty—what does it matter? Is not one prisoner like another? Who comes to visit them? Who knows which cell is empty? Bah!"

"So you thought you were rich for life, did you, Elsa?" the man in the chair muttered. "Well, you can just try to keep the idea. And as for you, sir, he went on, with a malicious glance at Gerald, 'you may think yourself fortunate if you leave this country as easily as you entered it.'"

The woman drew a little nearer to him. There was the look of a wild animal in her face.

"Listen, Ivan," she cried. "Are you mad? It is a fortune which this man carries in his hand! What is there amongst the sum that infects your prisons of account against that? You terrify me. The money is for us, to be divided. Cash, Ivan! Money to spend—tomorrow—the next day—every day!"

"You fool!" the governor retorted. "Of what use is money when your feet dangle in the air and your neck is broken? That for you, and a dozen rifle bullets in my heart! You are a bold man who came to Russia on such a mission," he added, glowering at Gerald.

She turned to her visitor.

"What does this madman mean?" she demanded. "Who is this prisoner whose freedom you seek?"

"I do not know," Gerald replied. "I am only an emissary."

The governor sat up in his chair. "I will tell you," he declared hoarsely. "Number twenty-nine is all the fortress records say of him, but his name is Paul, grand duke of Volostok, prince of Tamboff, hereditary grand duke and ruler of all the provinces of the Dvina, nephew of Nicholas, the late tsar, head of the house of Romanoff himself. If the people changed their fancy tomorrow, tsar of all the Russias! There, my woman, now you know the secret of my fortress! You can guess where we might be if I traded with this lunatic!"

The woman flopped upon the sofa. She was pale through all her rouge and powder. Her yellow hair had broken loose from its band of ribbon. Her dressing gown had fallen away a little from her ample bust. She sat breathing heavily for several moments. Gerald, of the three, was the only one who kept his head.

"All that makes for nothing," he said calmly. "You expect yourself to get nothing. The Romanoff dynasty is past. There will never be another tsar in Russia. This young man has rich friends and they want ed something to the Russian and stepped back into the meaning smile. Gerald ed in the hand of the woman being the postern gate and Catherine the street with a gasp of al, by clear air was wonderful. record great gulps of it as he way along the uneven pavement stared at by every passer-by. He never believed that his task coming so easily to an end. If all went well, in twenty-four hours he might be on his way back to England.

THE WASH ON THE LINE

fool, Ivan. You cannot see the truth. You have not thought to yourself what ten thousand pounds may mean."

Krossneys sat back in his chair, biting his finger nails.

"Who are you?" he demanded suddenly. "Where does this money come from?"

"My name is Dombey," Gerald replied. "I have admitted to Madame Francks that I am an Englishman. This money has been collected in London by friends and relatives of the young man. The desire for his release has not the slightest political significance."

"And what the devil excuse can I make for letting him go?"

"I should put one of your less important prisoners into his cell and say nothing about it," Gerald suggested.

"There is an Inspector of state prisons," Krossneys muttered. "He does not often come, but who knows when he might take it into his head to pay us a visit?"

"The last time he was here," Elsa Francks reminded him, "you met him at the station and took him to the hotel. Afterward, you brought him on here and he was so drunk that he had to stay for two days. He did not even go near the fortress. Your papers and books were brought down here for him to sign."

"It is true," Krossneys assented, "yet next time another man might come. And again, how will this number twenty-nine get safely out of Russia?"

"Think less of these difficulties and more of what one could do with ten thousand pounds," the woman insisted. "You are not asking, Ivan, to run a risk for nothing. I say that it is worth it."

"For you, yes," Krossneys sneered, "because you risk nothing and you have the spending of the money. For me it is different. I have an official position. I am governor of the fortress; I wear the uniform of the Russian republic."

Elsa Francks laughed loudly and scornfully. She pointed jeeringly at Krossneys.

"Uniform of the Russian republic!" she exclaimed. "At this time they didn't make it to fit you. Official position! Indeed! What do you get out of it, I should like to know? Would you not starve if it were not for the contributions of the prisoners themselves?"

"It is true," Krossneys assented gloomily. "It is a dog's life."

"And a dog's country to live it in!" the woman proclaimed. "Listen to me, Ivan."

She sat upon the arm of his chair and talked to him in Russian. Soon it was evident that he was yielding. She fetched him beer and then spirits of some sort from a cupboard. Once or twice she turned and winked at him. Finally, at last, she turned towards him.

"It is arranged," she announced. "Not so fast," Krossneys intervened. "Let us hear how this money is to be paid?"

"In cash," Gerald replied. "I have drafts upon your own banks."

"Well, well," Krossneys muttered, "the money is right enough then. Ten o'clock tomorrow morning he went on, 'present yourself at the fortress. Inquire for me. I shall give you an audience. The affair may be concluded at once. Get back to your hotel now and be careful not to speak of your real business.'"

Gerald rose blithely to his feet. The idea of leaving the horrible atmosphere of that room was undisturbed by him. He bowed to the governor. Elsa took him to the door and, under pretext of calling the servant, passed out with him into the passage.

"You can come back later if you like to talk with me again," she whispered. "Be careful, though, for he is very jealous."

NDAY is wash day at the I Browns, and as I came home to lunch I noticed that the weekly ceremony was ended and the purified linen of the Brown family was hanging on the line to dry.

The Browns as a family are the sort that are said to "put up a good front." As our colored maid expressed it, "they shewed more than a whitey skin 'pearance.'"

Maudie wears a fur coat which, if it isn't really woolskin, is something very wonderful. Ben has the latest thing in raglans, and Mrs. Brown has a pair of earrings which, if they are what they purport to be, could be pawned for a small fortune.

A knowledge of these facts was possibly responsible for causing my eye to linger on the line of nondescript underthings which was flapping in the wind as I passed the house.

The linen was scanty and worn and very much in disrepair, if the truth must be told. Judging from the display on the clothesline, the Browns would have made a pretty sad photograph just before putting on their outer garments. The stockings and night clothes and step-ins were worn through and perforated with holes and ornamented with dangling ends of torn lace. Even the towels and the bed linen were pretty well on the way to the discard.

If it is true that one never gets an adequate idea of a family until one sees their household possessions upon a moving van, it is equally true that sight of the weekly wash of one's neighbor is immensely illuminating as to the real elegance of the individuals. In their underlinings the Browns were evidently a sad lot.

John, whose intellectual storehouse was rather empty, had in some way learned a marvelous penmanship. He could shade and flourish and push a pen to heat anything. His scrolls and India lines made one wonder of the neighborhood and the envy of all his classmates. His teacher was one day looking over his shoulder as he went through his elaborate "whole-arm" movements.

"It's really beautiful, John," she commented. "Now if you only knew something to write!"

John made a very good appearance, but there was nothing underneath; when his intellectual wash was strung out upon the line it was scanty and ragged and in poor condition.

"Man looketh upon the outward appearance," quite wisely, no doubt, but if we are to get at the real heart of things, we shall have to go beneath the surface. The front page is not all of the paper, nor is it necessarily the best part. There should be something in a shop besides what is displayed in the show window.

It's the wash on the line that too often gives us away.

On next Tuesday, Nov. 3rd the general election will be held, when the voters of Boone county will elect men for State Senator, Representative and all the county offices, magistrates in the six districts and five members of the County Board of Education. Boone county has thousands of legal voters composed of both men and women, whose duty it is to vote.

The primary election was a lively affair, but after the candidates were nominated local politics took on a dormant state, and so far, nothing has been done to create any enthusiasm among the voters of the county, most people have been too busy to talk politics, but now, as the election is drawing close get ready to go to the polls on next Tuesday and cast your vote, a duty you owe to yourself and your country.

Aside from this fact there is a Constitutional Amendment to be voted for that if carried gives the right to or raises the salaries of certain officials in the State. Do you wish to vote on this, if so come and bring the women.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE

The Rev. E. J. King, of Grant County, Kentucky, as Republican candidate for the office of State Representative for the 62nd District of Kentucky, said district being composed of the counties of Boone and Grant counties, carries with him in his campaign the faith and confidence of the many hundreds of people who have known and associated with him during his forty-five years of active ministry. Due to his ability as a speaker and a successful business man, many believe that he should be afforded the opportunity to lend his talents to the task of stabilizing the mounting taxes of Rural Kentucky, and distributing same equally, while the ideals for which he has fought so well could find no abler champion on the floor of our legislative body.

Vote for a man who has proven himself and who is capable of representing you, Election November 3rd, 1925.

The Arts of Making Love, of Home-Making and of Child-Bearing

By BENJAMIN GLASSBERG, Jewish Welfare Society.

IT WILL readily be admitted that the greater part of the basis of a happy married life depends upon a satisfactory sex adjustment. It cannot be built upon inhibitions and frustrations. Nor must we expect such adjustment to follow the mere taking of the marriage vow. A satisfactory sex life can flourish only in a proper atmosphere. It must be as carefully and tenderly nurtured as a delicate plant; nothing will more quickly succumb to a cold, hostile blast. To ignorance of the art of making love should be added that of homemaking and child rearing.

Broken homes face us everywhere. Their name is legion. Hundreds of thousands of children bear with them throughout their lives the blighting effects of these domestic bankruptcies. The earliest and most perfect ideal that it is one's good fortune to possess, namely the child's ideal of his father and mother, is rudely destroyed. Many there are that never compensate for this mental shock.

Never before in our history was there so marked an interest in health, especially in the physical and mental health of childhood. The basis for the health of every child is a happy home, a home free from domestic friction, where the parents respect and love each other, both assuming and sharing the responsibilities of the household.

The responsibility rests upon the community to prepare the young for intelligent parenthood. We must not rest satisfied with a preparation for job, for profession, for avocation. We must go further and educate our young for living, for the job of husband, wife and parent. Marriage must cease to be an uncharted sea. It should be clearly mapped out, with lighthouses stationed at every danger point to guide the wayfarer safely to port.

No More Serious Problem Before Us Than That of Highway Safety

By A. N. JOHNSON, Chairman Highway Research Board.

Seldom has there been experienced in so short a time such a great economic development as we have witnessed in highway transportation. This development has brought into existence thousands of miles of improved highways and millions of vehicles, totaling an annual expenditure of huge sums.

For the construction of roads alone we are spending over a billion dollars a year, and several more billions for the manufacture, upkeep and operation of the vehicles. It is not hard to conceive that this should raise a wide variety of problems that call for a great diversity of talent for their study and solution, problems for the economist and the engineer, the physicist and the politician.

Investigation and research are needed to study how best to use the highways and to ascertain the proper regulations. First, that we may safeguard life and limb; second, that we may expedite the flow of traffic over the highways. There is no more serious problem before us than that of highway safety. Our highway traffic accidents have reached the appalling yearly total of more than 23,000 lives and more than 600,000 persons maimed and injured.

"Here Is Where You May Help—Even Under Existing Marriage Laws"

By MRS. EDWARD F. WHITE, Assistant Attorney General, Indiana.

The family is the first step in the founding of that society which grows from the small family through the patriarchal family, the organized community, the city, the state, the nation. This unit is made up of two—the male and the female—each with the same influence upon the offspring of the marriage. Because this family becomes the unit of the government, the government has an interest in the mating of that man and woman. To preserve a virile race, to stimulate a virile nation, states have said that the insane shall not marry and propagate their kind, that the feeble-minded shall not marry, that members of the same family shall not intermarry. But when we have safeguarded all such marriages, there are still other problems before us. Your sister may be of high mentality, but too young to marry; your daughter may want to marry one who is of sufficient age but has a transmissible disease; your friend may want to marry one who is old enough and in excellent health, but who is a moral leper. Here is where you may help—even under existing laws.

Nature to Present a Mid-Pacific Territory to the American People

By EDWIN FAIRFAX NAULTY, in New York Times.

Land waves on the bottom of the Pacific ocean, caused, perhaps, by northward slipping of the Antarctic ice-cap and fortified by pressure from the American coast, the Japanese archipelago, Alaska and the Aleutian islands, breaking at last on the deep foundations of the Hawaiian archipelago, seem now to be creating new land among the various islands and shoals of Hawaii. The expected upthrust of land, which is likely to come in this generation, will present as a gift of nature to the United States a territory in the mid-Pacific as long as from San Diego, California, to Queen Charlotte Sound, British Columbia, and as wide as California. Such a territory, based on the present population of Java of 36,000,000, would easily support a population of at least 25,000,000. It would be of tremendous strategic advantage to the nation holding it as a productive and trade base, and would grow enough sugar, rubber, copra, coffee and tea to render the United States independent of other present sources of these articles.

"A Few Hundred Kindly, Quiet, Courteous Churchmen in a Community—"

By RT. REV. CHARLES FISKE, P. E. Bishop, New York.

I shall keep our teaching what I believe to be real religion. Though its quiet voice may not be heard now, as the trumpet blare insistently for more constitutional amendments, more statutory enactments and more welfare movements, I still believe that it has attractive power and that the day may not be far distant when men will once more recognize its modest charm. A few hundred kindly, courteous, quiet, well-disposed churchmen in a community—all of them minding their own business and modestly and unobtrusively worshipping and serving God in their own way; not obviously insistent that everybody shall serve and worship God in exactly the same way; in particular, not inquisitive as to the faults of others, nor overzealous to bring them to repentance and a better life—a few hundred decent, old-fashioned Christians of this type will do more for the good of their fellow men than all the leaders of all the Hi Ys in this glorious land of the free and home of the brave.

Farmers have been a busy set the past few days stripping tobacco and husking shock corn.

Mrs. Anna Hall attended the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. Bettie Clore, at Rushville, Ind., Wednesday.

Ballots for the coming election are printed and are being distributed to the several voting precincts in the county.

On account of the very disagreeable weather, there was very little doing on the streets of Burlington, last Sunday.

This has been one of the best corn seasons Boone county farmers have experienced, and a bumper crop has been raised.

Read the names in the posted list in this issue and don't go on their farms without permission when you go hunting on Nov. 16th.

Mr. J. W. Goodridge, one of our local fruit growers, has harvested a very large crop of apples this fall. Mr. Goodridge is a good fruit man.

This month has been the worst in the matter of weather for many years. October is usually a good month for farmers to get their fall work done.

The heavy frosts and disagreeable weather of the past month have ruined several nice patches of morning glories belonging to some of our local gardeners.

L. C. Weaver, who manages the Farm Bureau at Burlington, is all ready for the hunting season when it opens on the 15th of next month. He says he will bag 30 that day.

Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Carpenter and Mrs. Sarah Carpenter and grand daughter, Miss Bessie Baldon, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Goodridge, out on rural route one.

There will be a pie social and masquerade party at Leota Gray School House Friday night October 30th. Everybody invited. Proceeds to be used for benefit of the school.

Weber containing 172 acres has been divided into small tracts and will be sold at auction. A touring car and other prizes will be distributed to lucky ticket holders.

The North Bend Association of Baptists held an all day missionary meeting at the Burlington Baptist church last Saturday. A number of out of town folks were present and enjoyed an entertaining program. W. T. Perry, of Covington, who has been Secretary-Treasurer of the Association for years, was in town and made the Recorder office a call. We enjoyed the call the more because Mr. Perry is a printer by trade.

Watch your ticket. —Political Advertisement

The new boys' dormitory just completed on the Kentucky Children's Home Society's sixty-six acre farm near Lyndon, Ky. This splendid building gives shelter to 100 'homeless' boys who have come to the society's care from all parts of Kentucky. It is one of eleven of the new buildings which have recently been constructed. These have been made possible by gifts from the citizens in eighty counties. To complete the "Cottage Village" which will care for 500 destitute children the Society needs $500,000. Of this amount $425,000 has already been pledged. Every county in the State is asked to give its part.

A CORRECTION

When the list of donors to the P. T. A. school construction fund was published several weeks ago the names of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Feeley were inadvertently omitted from the list. Our attention was called to this error last week and we desire to make the correction. Since the list from which the copy was made has now been destroyed we cannot say whether the mistake was our's or not.

NOTICE TO APPLE USERS

I will take a load of fine winter apples to Walton Saturday (next) October 31st. These apples are Roman Beauty and Kelly's Favorite and are exceptionally nice for winter use. I will sell them along the entire route and in Walton. It would be a good idea to call Burlington 466 and give me your order before I leave.

F. EASTON, Burlington, Ky.

SELECT SOME GOOD EARS

Mr. Edwards, while your corn select some good ears for the corn show which will take place at Florence Nov. 17, 18, 19. Kick in with some good corn and help boost the show.

As was previously announced Rev. Holland of Springfield, Ohio, occupied the pulpit at Hopeful last Sunday and preached a splendid sermon to a large and attentive audience.

In a letter received from B. N. Tanner, of Fayette, Mo., he stated that he has been seriously ill with heart trouble but was some better at the time of his writing. He has a host of friends here who will no doubt be grieved to hear of his illness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Markberry gave a farewell party the evening of the 17th in honor of their daughter Mrs. Ervin Lenturf who left for Florida Monday night, Oct. 19th. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lenhof and daughter Helen, Mrs. J. W. HALLOWEEN DOINGS

Teachers, parents, and moralists, may say that the youth of the land should observe this or that public holiday in a way calculated to bring out the true thought of the day. But youth has its own ideas as to how such holidays should be observed. At so it has certain far famed dates of its own, which it sees fit to recognize according to its own notions and traditions.

One of the holidays dearest to the heart of youth, is Halloween, noted for ages for all kinds of witchery. Not merely do the boy crowd favor celebrating it with all due observances, but they are quite likely to start on the same weeks before this date. As soon as it is dark after the evening meal, they are quite apt to be prowling around the town, engaged in such activities.

The householder trying to read his newspaper in peace, may be impressed with the idea that the wind is rising, and that the elements are threatening a most boisterous night. Yet it is probably only the kiddie crowd engaged in rattling his blinds out of a general desire to have something doing in the neighborhood.

The housewife may hear the bell ring, and run to the door, putting on her most radiant smile to greet some friendly callers, only to hear the sound of scampering feet disappearing along the sidewalk.

Acts of serious damage are often done, and the boy who pulls down a fence, or tramples on the remnants of the garden, needs to have some good old fashioned woodshed treatment. If he doesn't get it, worse things may happen to him. People should not get too crabbed about a little noise on Halloween night. But if the kids get the idea that they should have free rein for their pranks for weeks together, they need to learn that law and order still reign in Boone county.

BEAVER LICK.

R. E. Moore called on Geo. Burris and family Saturday.

Several from here attended Mrs. Frank Ryan's funeral at Verona last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Smith and baby of Union, visited Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Green Sunday.

Leslie Moore has purchased the "Old Baker" farm at Big Bone, and will move there soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watts (nee Myrtle Lee Baker) of Harrodsburg, Ky., are the proud parents of a baby girl—Ann Baker.

Little Mildred Lang is staying with her sister Mrs. Gilbert Carpenter and husband of Florence. She will attend school there this winter.

PAINTFULLY INJURED.

Walter Arnold, of the East Bend pike, suffered a very extremely painful accident last week, when a joint of stove pipe fell on the second finger of his right hand. The digit was almost dismembered, being held in place by the mere skin itself, the metal going directly thru the joint. The misfortune of Mr. Arnold is emphasized when one knows that he has about 250 shocks of corn yet to husk.

PIE SOCIAL

There will be a pie social and masquerade party at Pleasant Valley school house Friday night, October 30th. All are cordially invited to come. 1t—pd

Records of the two Canadian railways indicate that Western Canada's grain loadings have broken all records. More than 66,350 cars have been used to move the crop, and 160,625,957 bushels have been marketed.

Cost of living steadily mounts in England—so does the number of unemployed. Decreased purchasing power inevitably means higher prices and greater unemployment. Henry Ford has always contended that it is to the best interests of business that wages be kept above a mere living point and that business beats itself when it beats down wages. We now have more than 4,000,000 idle men in this country. An unemployed man lives—but the man who does work is the fellow that pays the bill.

The man who talks in a large way about his financial resources may have 69 cents in his pocket, nothing in the bank, and a lot of debts due his creditors.

OIL SHORTAGE OUTLOOK

Babson Comments on the Oil Situation

Babson Park, Massachusetts, October 23, 1925.—"While we are discussing the bountiful crops of the country at this time of the year," said Mr. Babson, in an interview, "we must not forget the great oil crop which is annually being produced. This crop has not only brought huge wealth to individuals and families, but it has been a great factor in making cities like Los Angeles and forming the basis of great prosperity in states like Oklahoma. Oil was doubtless a real factor in causing the World War and surely it was of major importance in connection with the waging of that war. It will be an even greater factor in connection with the next war, if we are so unfortunate as to ever have another. The following table gives an idea of the increase in oil production the past few years:

CRUDE OIL PRODUCTION IN THE UNITED STATES
Number of Barrels
1920	442,929,000
1921	472,183,000
1922	567,531,000
1923	732,407,000
1924	735,940,000
(1925 Estimated)

Question Of An Oil Shortage.—"When business men are disturbed by statements that there will soon be an oil shortage. Perhaps, some scientist makes a hasty speech or perhaps it comes from propagandists who are interested in lowering the price of either the commodity or securities. There, however, need be no fear of such a shortage so long as we live. At the present time there is petroleum enough in actual storage to last about a year. When we consider the available supply underground already blocked out and located we find there is enough to last 40 years even considering the great possibilities for increased consumption. This is on the basis of known deposits and not exceeding eight or nine thousand feet below the surface. Everything leads statisticians to believe, however, that operators will continue to drill deeper and deeper, and that wells will go ten thousand, twelve thousand, and even fifteen thousand feet. That will be found by going this additional two thousand feet no one can tell, but all statistics indicate that a tremendous supply will be available.

"If drilling becomes deeper, not only is more available in territory already drilled, but oil will be procured from territory that is producing nothing at the present time. For instance, only about ten percent of the present surface of the United States is producing oil, and yet geologists state that nearly 80 percent of the United States is capable of producing oil if the wells are drilled sufficiently deep. States like New Mexico, Arizona, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia probably contain oil, while Florida has excellent oil prospects if one will drill deep enough. This deep drilling should increase the supply of oil to at least one hundred years, although it will add to the expense of production.

"The above statements are based on production figures in the United States. When one adds to this the possibility of getting oil in Canada, Asia, and Africa it will become two or three centuries before we are in a serious shortage. Moreover, in this estimate I do not include the possibility of extracting the oil from shale and coal and other deposits which so freely abound.

Uses For Oil Increasing.—"When I was a boy oil was used only for kerosene lamps and for lubricating machines. John D. Rockefeller had no more idea that we would be using automobiles today than we have that our grandchildren will be using machines to read. It is an absolute surprise to him. The use of tar and oil in connection with street building is an industry that has recently grown up. It was only a few years ago that the great oil interests began to realize the possibilities of fuel oil in connection with operating our automobiles and heating our homes. In most of our cities today less than five per cent of the homes are heated with oil, and experts state that we shall live to see the time when ninety per cent of our homes will be heated by oil, gas, or electricity. The coal cars, like the ice cars, will disappear from our city streets during the next twenty-five years. The use of oil for fuel in industrial purposes has barely started.

"During the recent Wellfleet Business Conference the Secretary of the National Automobile Association stated that the United States automobile would be in his judgment, about thirty million cars. This would require double the present consumption of gasoline. If we consider that the same principle of growth applies to the other uses of oil, we are astounded with its possibilities. Furthermore, it is fair to assume that all of its uses are now known? May no other uses be discovered from year to year, uses which we do not dream of today? I believe they will. Yes, I believe that the oil industry is as sound an industry as we have in Mrs. Helen Jackson Vindicated by Her Sisters.

The following letter was received by Hon. George Waldron, of Pocomoke, City, Md., in answer to his inquiries about Mrs. Jackson. The letter follows in full:

Mahany City, Pa., April 17, 1923

Honorable Sir:

In reference to your inquiry as to my sister Helen Jackson, I must say, that the accusation is false, malicious and without any foundation of truth, that she was put in the House of Good Shepherd by us, her sisters.

It was the Nuns and Priest of Sh-mokin (our home) that persuaded Helen when she was 12 years of age to enter the Polish Convent of Detroit, Mich., and then placed her in an Irish Catholic Convent as it was hard for her to learn the Polish language.

Being worked like a slave in said Convents and suffering untold misery, she escaped with her friend.

No, our sister was not placed in any institution, Convent of Good Shepherd Home, for bad behavior or as a wayward girl.

Helen was always an innocent and pure girl with good morals and loved by all of her sisters, of whom there are seven and all living. If you have read her book, all the information therein is true and correct.

If the Clerical Clique and Nuns would stop persecuting Helen we would have more consideration for them, but not otherwise. We are all good Christians but we can't stand their persecutions of our innocent sister, that it was us that placed her in the Home of Good Shepherd.

It is a falsehood and deliberate lie to run her reputation down, for there is no record that she was put there by us.

The Nuns have falsified their records; that she was put in the Home by her sisters in Pittsburgh, another lie as none of us ever lived in Pittsburg and have no relatives there.

Thanking you for taking an interest in our beloved sister, Mrs. Helen Jackson and your claim to it to the skeptics that their accusation is a deliberate lie, a falsehood having no foundation whatever as to her being placed in a Good Shepherd Home by any of her sisters or relatives, at any time, anywhere.

The Nuns wanted to make a slave of her within the Convent Walls like they did with many a victim of theirs.

Respectfully,
Signed, Mrs. Cecelia Bozkawski

Stock Market Situation

"Every reader knows, in a general way, what has happened to rails and industrials the past few years in the stock market. These stocks advanced following the Armistice to high prices during 1919 and 1920. Then there came a decline in 1921 with some recovery in 1922. Considerable of a break occurred in the spring of 1923 and the market declined until the end of the year. The decline of Calvin Coolidge. Since that time we have had a great advance in the prices of railroad and industrial stocks, exceeding anything that has been in past history.

In a general way the market for oil securities followed the general market after the Armistice and had the same break in 1923; but since then oil stocks have remained more or less steady. Of all stocks I would say that oil stocks were, perhaps, today selling nearest to their true value. This does not mean that they will not decline with the general market, and there might even be a boom in oil stocks some time in the near future. Generally speaking, however, I will say that oil stocks are selling at a fair market price at which, if necessary, one could hold them during a decline in the general market. Surely the oil stocks are a safer investment than many other industrials. There is destined to be some great surprises and disappointments for some people who are now indiscriminately buying industrial stocks without any idea of their investment values.

Consolidations in Order

"Thirty to forty years ago the entire oil business was shot to pieces. The producers were making no money and the public was getting a very poor quality of oil at a very high price. It was this situation which caused Mr. Rockefeller to rehabilitate the industry and bring about consolidations which ultimately led to the formation of the Standard Oil Company. Although Mr. Rockefeller has been greatly abused, I am sure his motives were of the highest. During the years that the Standard Oil Company was at its zenith, we were receiving from them the finest quality and the lowest priced oil ever known. Since the U. S. Supreme Court dissolved the Standard Oil Company we have had confusion, worse than ever before. The oil industry needs a Rockefeller at the present time to straighten things out, both as to the production and sale of oil.

"The other day I saw a sign on a corner reading as follows:

'Cheer up, little corner, do not cry. You'll have an oil station bye and bye.'

FOR SALE, apply to the City Realty Company'

"The present situation of competitive companies with filling stations on corners of the same cross roads is utterly foolish, as is the competitive advertising which is being done by these oil companies, especially bill board advertising. These uneconomic conditions must shortly bring about consolidation both among the producers and the sales companies. These consolidations will be a good thing, not only for the stockholders but for the public as well. Then the cost of selling can be greatly cut down, and the public must of necessity get a portion of these savings.

"I, however, do not wish to be misunderstood as to the ultimate future of these selling companies as I believe they have a great opportunity. The street corners which these oil companies bought will greatly increase in value as they represent the most valuable sites available in the cities. The use of oil will increase and the business of these distributors will grow likewise. Moreover, the future price of oil is not of importance to them as they merely are merchants, buying and selling and taking and taking their profits. The oil industry is fundamentally sound, and the retail price of oil, although temporarily overpriced, is a stable future. The important thing to remember in connection with oil is to work with good people. Keep away from the speculative stocks; avoid wild cat oil stocks and wild cat speculation. Deal with real oil men who are interested only in producing the commodity and are not interested in the stock market. Moreover, when investing in oil stocks buy only stocks of companies which are operated by honest and upright men. Remember that men create values and souls make men.

"Business continues around 11% above normal, by the Babson-chart. This compares with 6% below normal a year ago."

Notwithstanding the fact that Uncle Samuel is getting along fairly well without sticking his nose in his neighbors affairs, the foreign owned and edited press of this country is conducting a most strenuous campaign to compel us to ignore the advice of George Washington and all other real statesmen of history, and mix up in the European mess by joining a World Court. To this date the World Court has no laws to pass upon other than those it has created. Courts of this kind are not tolerated in America.

They once called it the fox trot and now it looks like the fox chase.

"Clothes aren't washed until they are rinsed"

—say the makers of "Rinso"

They continue: "You can loosen the dirt with soap but if you leave soap and dirt in the clothes by incomplete rinsing you will never have really clean clothes."

"The first rinse should be scalding, if possible. This keeps the soap liquid so that it is easily rinsed away, carrying the dirt with it. A scalding rinse, a warm, clear rinse and a cold blue are excellent."

Because you need not put your hands in the water, you can rinse clothes in the Rinso. Dry-Etne with scalding water. Come in and let us show you all about it.

KENTUCKY BRIEFS

Somerset—Twelve hundred persons attended the first day of the fourth annual Putlaski country school fair and poultry show which was held at the Community hall.

Owensboro—John Morrison, member of the Pittsburgh world's champion baseball team, on his return to Owensboro, was met at the station by a band, a fire truck, and 200 automobiles filled with admirers.

Lexington—More than fifty delegates, including national officers and members of Red Cross chapters of Central Kentucky and Louisville, attended the regional conference of the American Red Cross held here.

Paducah—A 300-gallon still and other distilling apparatus were seized by federal revenue agents who arrested three men—Ernie Mangold, Leander Behler and Spencer Higgins, at Kentucky Bend, below Hickman, and brought them here for trial.

Mayesville—John Wesley Shorter, 83 years old, died at his home at 1924 on this county. He was one of the few remaining Confederate veterans in this county who fought under General Morgan. He has been one of the successful farmers in this county for many years.

Frankfort—During the past eighteen months the department of fire prevention and rates has secured eighteen convictions and seventy indictments for arson, according to a report of the department, made to State Auditor W. H. Shanks by Henry M. Bosworth, chief deputy auditor.

Paducah—Announcement was made of the resignation of Lorenzo W. Emery, city auditor of Paducah. He has not yet announced any business plans for the future. Mr. Emery was appointed city auditor January 7, 1924, by Mayor J. N. Bailey, for a period of two years and his appointment was ratified by the Board of Aldermen.

Ashland—Elmer Warnock, 23 years old, farmer, of Kehoe, Greenup county, was instantly killed and his companion, Dee Wright, 25, was seriously and fatally injured when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an eastbound Chesapeake & Ohio freight train on a crossing near Greenup, the county seat of Greenup county.

Paris—The three-story building on Main street, between Fifth and Sixth, known as the Fordham Hotel, purchased about a year ago by Mrs. Jimmie Duncan Bell, was sold for her to Guy and Boone Baldwin of Paris. for the reported price of $13,500. It is said the Baldwin brothers will convert the lower floor into an automobile display room.

Bowling Green—The Warren county chapter of the Bowling Green War Mothers will make a canvass for donations for an electrical gold star, Mrs. Minnie C. Burton, secretary, reports. The gold star will be installed over the Dixie Highway bridge of Bowling Green as a memorial to the sixty-one boys who gave their lives that others might live in peace, she says.

Corbin—Buster Green, 9 years old, was run over and killed by an automobile that struck him while he was playing in the street in front of his home, 51 Seaf, of Corbin, who formerly ran a restaurant here, drove the automobile. According to witnesses the boy ran in front of Seaf and the driver tried to avoid striking him. Seaf was not arrested.

Owensboro—Unless there is a turn for the worse in the infantile paralysis epidemic in Owensboro, it will not be necessary to close the schools. Dr. H. M. Hathaway, health director for Daviess county, announced. All convalescents and suspects, however, are being excluded from the schools during the incubation period. Dr. Hathaway believes the situation well in hand.

Crab Orchard—Crab Orchard and Lincoln county have not fallen from grace in the hearts of fox hunters. Members of the Kentucky Fox Hunters' Association and some 300 spectators were thrilled by the brilliant runs which followed the cast of sixty-three hounds on the opening day of the All-Age Stake. It was one of the largest crowds that ever attended a cist in the State association.

Murray—The dedication of Wells Hall of the Murray State Normal will take place in November. These services were to have been held October 27, but owing to the fact that some members of the State Normal commission which located the school in Murray could not be here at that time, it was postponed. It is said the largest number of State officials ever assembled at an educational institution meeting will be here at that time.

Lexington—One negro is dead and two others are reported dying at St. Joseph's Hospital here as a result of a family gun battle on Spengle Hill, which broke up a bawling party.

Princeton—Austin Jones and Carl Phelps were injured here in an automobile wreck. Jones was at the wheel when he lost control of the machine and crashed into a tree on West Main street. Phelps was forced through the windshield and suffered serious cuts about the head and face while Jones escaped with less serious injuries.
